In addition, Simonds said that the Planning Board updates the Zoning Bylaw and Flood and Water Protection maps which are part of the zoning bylaw, as well as 60 odd pages of topographic maps. The Planning Board also has total responsibility for cluster development, including the issuance of special permits, as well as reviewing and making recommendations regarding appeals to the Zoning Board.

Simonds cited the power of women, noting that former board members, Barbara Power and Pat Facey took the initiative and by sheer hard work introduced and obtained adoption of the Cluster Zoning amendment and the raising of funds and approval required to obtain an invaluable Topographic Aerial Survey with its photos and pictures.

Since the election Saturday, April 13, is during school vacation, Simonds urged those planning to be away to either vote in person at the town hall or request an absentee ballot be sent to a family member. She said the town clerk's office is open Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Thursday, 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., and Friday, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Simonds added that a high priority, if elected, is to work closely with the business leaders and entrepreneurs in the continued revitalization of historic Cohasset Village and other business areas of Cohasset.

Simonds has been invited to meet with the Cohasset Rotary, April 1.

Terry Atherton

While at the home of Dick and Cheryl Bugley, planning board candidate Terry Atherton described what his priorities would be if elected. "First and foremost, I would work to preserve the unique character of the town." Atherton went on to say that he feels the village area embodies much of what is unique about Cohasset. "I would work with the business community and other groups to strengthen and reinforce the character of the village."

Another area of concern is the railroad. "If restoration of the Old Colony rail line becomes a reality, there would be a number of issues that the planning board would need to deal with." Atherton said that in the short term it would be necessary to develop plans to mitigate traffic and other impacts. In the longer term, plans should be developed to take advantage of potential economic benefits.

Atherton also felt that strict and uniform enforcement of the Zoning Bylaw is essential. "The Zoning Bylaw is the primary mechanism that the town has to manage development and the direction of change. If it is not enforced, the town could very easily lose control." Atherton went on to say that if there is a problem with a particular provision of the Bylaw, it should be changed, not ignored.

Ely J. Kahn

Ely J. "Terry" Kahn, a parent and youth athletics coach, is running for a five-year term on the Cohasset Recreation Commission. Kahn, a resident of the town since 1982 and a homeowner, is seeking elective office for the first time.

As an officer of the non-profit Cohasset Soccer Club and a co-founder of the lacrosse program at the Cohasset High School, Kahn has played an active role in town recreational programs. As author of two books on youth athletics (Net Results and The Parent-Player Training Program, both with psychologist James Loehr), Kahn also brings a strong background in the philosophy of youth recreation to his candidacy.

"My main concern," said Kahn, "is the management of the programs we have at present. The now-abandoned effort to privatize those programs suggests the need for a rigorous review of the Commission's role in overseeing the department.

"The Recreation Department," continues Kahn, "ought to move quickly towards self-sufficiency. But each program should pay its own way. Like many others, I'm disturbed when soccer and basketball players' fees are used to subsidize other more costly, less popular activities."

Kahn's three children — Ely, Jacqueline and Curtis — attend Cohasset public schools, where his wife Rose Mary is an active volunteer. An author, Kahn is currently writing the autobiography of tennis great Pancho Gonzalez.

Historical Society meets

The Cohasset Historical Society's annual spring dinner meeting will be held on Thursday, April 17 at Kimball's By the Sea restaurant. Featured as guest speaker for the special evening program will be Lieutenant Leonard LaPorta, Jr., Executive Officer of the U.S. Navy Frigate "Constitution". Dinner itself, scheduled for 6:45 p.m. will feature chowder, salad, Chicken Piccata, potato and vegetable du jour, to be followed by grapenut custard pudding dessert. A social hour will precede the dinner beginning at 6 p.m. Reservations for the dinner are a must; at $12 per person. Advance reservations should be sent to the Historical Society at 14 Summer Street, Cohasset, 02025.

The Massachusetts-based frigate "Constitution", one of the world's most famous sailing ships, was built in Boston in 1797 and has served in the nation's Navy continually since that time. Its victories over Britain's finest warships during the War of 1812 earned it the nickname "Old Ironsides". During the Civil War "Constitution" served as a training ship for Naval Cadets, and since then has earned the well deserved designation as "historic ship". Today "Constitution" serves as Flagship of the First Naval District, Boston, and is visited by thousands of persons each year. Lt. LaPorta, second in command of the famous frigate, will present an illustrated program about the ship's long and illustrious history, followed by a question and answer session. Persons wishing to attend the "Constitution" program only after conclusion of the dinner are invited to do so. This special Historical Society spring program is one of the highlights of the Society's forthcoming 1991 activities.

(Additional class just added!) Creating and decorating kites will be offered to fourth through sixth graders in "Kites & More Kites" while "Crafty Keepsake" focuses on name plaques, folk art pieces and designer note cards.

Eight-week Young Artist Courses begin April 22. Youngsters may choose from Creative Photography, Video Theatre, Cartooning, Clay & Glazing, Handbuilding & Wheel, Papier-Mache, Primary Skills/ Primary Colors, Exploring Art & Imagination, Drawing/ Painting & Printmaking, and Multi Media Fun.

Leo's Hockey Tigers deposit another win

Banking on their "money" goalie, Jeff Stone, the Tigers rolled over the Quincy Raiders 8 to 5 in Pilgrim Arena's High School Developmental Hockey program. Stone played brilliantly as he turned away 44 shots on net.

The Tiger's staked Quincy to an early 1 - 0 lead before Cohasset's Charlie Smith countered with the first of his two goal deposits. The contest seesawed before Cohasset made a speedy getaway.

Stone stole the show. He robbed one Quincy player after another. He flipped. He flopped. He twisted left, then right as he made theft after theft.

Stone kept the vault door shut while Cohasset's "gambling defensemen" Kevin Mulcahy (one goal), Tim Conroy and Charlie Shields played fast and loose with Quincy.

Quincy moved the puck exceptionally well along the right side while Cohasset had problems clearing the puck against Quincy's right wing and defenseman. Several times the Tigers failed to defend along the right sidelines and into the right corner and Quincy capitalized with three goals from the right side.

Cohasset eventually recognized Quincy's strengths and habits and adjusted their play in time to fight off a fast closing Raider team. Next week Cohasset may pay more dearly as the Tigers wrestle with Westwood on Sunday at 5 p.m. Here's hoping the Tigers get a wake-up call before the next contest.

Several Tiger players left Quincy spinning like a roulette wheel. Mike Reynolds (one goal and two assists), John Murphy (two goals), Matt Kramers (two goals) all played outstanding games.

Cohasset reconciled Quincy's unbalanced offense by shifting players between the three lines. Pat Reynolds, Dan DeMichele, Brendan Kinchla and Anthony Wigmore played unselfishly and contributed to the win by holding Quincy's second line in check.

Both teams played an exceptionally clean game. Very few penalties were issued. Consequently, the Tigers played most of the game with their lines intact though four key players were missing. Winger Brian Buckley and Goalie Jeff Tosi were unable to make the game while injured seventh grade sensation, Chris McKenna should return next week.

Missing from the Tiger line-up until July will be Sophomore Charlie Smith. Charlie will undergo arthroscopic surgery for an old football injury. The team will miss his locker room banter and his scoring punch.

The Tigers anticipate the addition of Charlie Endris and Ryan Cibelli after the Lacrosse and Baseball seasons end and the addition of Mike Riley for the summer season.

The Tigers play all their games at the Pilgrim Arena. The team plays Westwood on Sunday, April 7 at 5 p.m. and Whitman-Hanson on Sunday, April 14 at 5 p.m.

The team then plays the "Old Boys" on Tuesday Night April 16 at 8:30 p.m.

The "Old Boys" are a good-natured bunch of adults that give the Tigers an occasional game at their expense. All "Old Boys" interested in playing in the April 16 game, please call John Kinchla at 383-6851.

Spectators are always welcome at all Tiger games. There is no admission charge. Please bring your family and friends to watch the fun.

Calling all "Old Boys"

The Cohasset Hockey Tigers need players for another "Old Boys" game. The game will be held on Tuesday, April 16 at the Pilgrim Arena at 8:30 p.m.

All "Old Boys" must come attired in full hockey equipment ready to do battle. The charge will be $10 per "Old Boy."

All Old Boys interested in playing against the Tigers should call John Kinchla at 383-6851.

Spectators are always welcome at all Tiger games. There is no admission charge. Please bring your family and friends to watch the fun.

Varsity baseball faces a learning season

By Donna Cogliano
Mariner correspondent

A group of predominantly freshmen and sophomores will make up the varsity baseball team at Cohasset High School this year. Their first victory will be special since the Skippers turned in a winless season last year.

Nearly 33 boys came out for baseball during recent tryouts held at the high school. Second year coach Ted MacDermott will be carrying a roster of 19 this year since there was no funding for a junior varsity squad.

The junior varsity is a subject for discussion because there are enough boys that are interested in playing, according to MacDermott.

"We need a feeder program. That's something that's in the hands of the school administration. I just don't want to get involved in that end of it," said MacDermott.

Nineteen baseball players is somewhat unmanageable says MacDermott while 14 players would be more manageable. It was in the best interest of the kids to keep 19, he said. "I kept some boys because they're kind of the future of the program," said MacDermott.

Last year, Cohasset competed with mostly underclassmen and showed considerable improvement and progress during the second half of the season. "We became competitive," said MacDermott.

By the time this group of boys becomes juniors, they will have three years of varsity competition under their belts. MacDermott is looking forward to seeing the development of these boys during the next two to three years.

Right off the start of the season, Cohasset will face such tough baseball towns as Hull in the opener April 8, East Bridgewater, Rockland and Norton. "We're going to get put to the test. I just think the kids have got to get out and play," MacDermott explained.

Coach MacDermott is pleased with the work habits of this particular group of ball players. The attitude remains upbeat despite their youth. "I hope it translates into a successful season. I don't know if I can measure that into how many games they win. It's a maturing process," MacDermott said.

Though they are indeed young, MacDermott doesn't want to make excuses for his players. Sure it must have been discouraging to not win any games last season but the kids handled themselves well, according to MacDermott. "As a group, they're growing together," he said.

Returning to play center field will be two-year starter Ryan Cibelli who will also be called on to pitch.

Freshman Chris Rolandelli, an outfielder, lettered last year as only an eighth grader. He will be defending left field and doing some pitching on occasion.

Junior Topher Henderson, a returning letterman, is expected to start in the outfield. Senior John Bowen, who did not play last year will also seek action in the outfield. Bowen, the back-up quarterback on the football team, brings 100 percent effort with him. "He's showed me a pretty good skill level in somethings and I hope it translates into success for John," said MacDermott.

Bowen is an eager learner and is working hard in practices, according to coach MacDermott.

Sophomore John Maynard is the returning starting third baseman. Sophomore Joe Andrade started at second base and was move to shortstop last year. He is expected to start at shortstop this season.

Sophomore Peter Fahy, a shortstop, will figure into this year's infield even though he missed part of last season with an injury.

Senior Matt Berger is the returning first baseman. He's been described as the leader of the pack by MacDermott. "I have a lot of faith in him. He can take some of the younger kids and do drill with them," said MacDermott.

Behind the plate will be sophomore catcher Nathan Fiori. The team's number one pitcher looks to be Simon Payne, a junior transfer from New Jersey. "If I had to open the season tomorrow, he'd be my starting pitcher," said MacDermott.

Chris Kondrat, a freshman, looks to be the number two or three pitcher for Cohasset.

Also rounding out the pitching will be freshman Ben Berger, sophomore Mike Reynolds, Cibelli, Rolandelli and Bowen.

Jonah Berger, an 8th grader, will catch along with Kondrat, Payne and Fiori.

Backing up first base will be freshman Jim Magner. Two other infielders for the Skippers services will be Brendon Kinchla and Ryan Freeman. Brian Pattison and Andy Church will see action in the outfield.

MacDermott is impressed with the experience his players are gaining. "I think they will be successful down the road," he said.

And for now, MacDermott enjoys instructing the Cohasset boys. "Right now, I prefer working with kids who approach things with the right attitude. Kids, who are willing to listen and learn - who don't have all the answers," said MacDermott.

How do people become addicts? WATD decided to ask real addicts for their stories. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week WATD will be broadcasting live from the Plymouth County House of Corrections.

The interviews are part of our special series about substance abuse on the South Shore. Every night at 6:07 P.M. from Monday, April 8th till Wednesday, April 10th, WATD Forum will present straight, uncensored conversations on substance abuse.

What makes people addicts? How did this lead to imprisonment? Why do addiction and crime so often go hand in hand? Join host Art DeCoursey as he explores these questions and more on WATD, the one station you can depend on for award-winning South Shore news.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Doug Moe, one of the CHS drama club performers, poses during the recent drama competition. Cohasset made it to the state finals, by the way.

Students meet Mozart

On March 25, students at the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools got to meet a "totally awesome dude." He wasn't green, he didn't eat pizza, and his last hit song was written over 200 years ago. Yet the students watched and listened, enchanted, as Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, portrayed by Dennis Kobray, told them the story of his life.

Dressed in period costume, Kobray used words and music to tell the story of Mozart's life, from his birth in Austria in 1756 to his death, at age 35, on December 5, 1791. He explained that Mozart, at the age of six, left his home, with his family to go on a four-year concert tour. Considered a child prodigy, his performances were much in demand. But, as Kobray explains, this was a hard life for a child, with not enough food or rest, and very little time for friends. And as he grew older, and the novelty of the "boy genius" began to wear off, people began to ignore his music. Mozart's music was never fully appreciated until after his death.

The students thoroughly enjoyed several short selections of Mozart's works and were delighted to find that they recognized one in particular, "A Little Night Music," as the theme song from a popular cartoon show. Which shows, as Kobray points out, that Mozart's spirit is still alive, and will always be alive, as long as people always listen to his music.

Count Kids In

On March 26, thirteen students (Sophomores and Juniors) attended the Second Annual South Shore Leadership Conference entitled "Count me In, IV" at Stoughton High School. This conference, sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, was a full school day meeting that was attended by nine other area schools.

The goals of this Leadership Conference were:

1. Learn from one another and develop a sense of community.

2. Learn the concept of shared school leadership beyond traditional leadership roles.

3. Consider leadership in an ethnically, racially and socio-economically diverse school setting. Participants learned educational prejudice reduction skills that they brought back to their respective schools.

4. Participants worked together to take a leadership role in the creation and implementation of creative solutions to intergroup conflicts in their schools.

The student participants were: Oronde Allie, Joe Andrade, David Aronson, Catie Beggan, Laurie Bronstein, Brooks Doten, Becky Hackenburg, Maria Kierce, Erin McAllister, Kevin Mulcahy, Kate Murray, Katie O'Sullivan and Sindi St. Eloi.

Wrestlers pin down season

The Cohasset High School wrestling team wrapped up its season not long ago with an awards banquet at Kimball's by the Sea.

Awards went to: Jason Thayer for most improved; Ryan Freeman for most take downs; Steve Harrington for most team points; Dave Cullinane for most pins; Ray Jones for rookie of the year; Dan Baird for most valuable JV player; Jed Terry for varsity MVP; Carlo Lagrotteria for fastest pin at .24; Nate Fiore for spirit.

The Peter Clute Memorial Award for dedication to wrestling went to Bill Baird, according to coach Torin Sweeney.

The coach credited all his team for the season.

He said freshmen Brandon DeVoe and Chris Stevens were hard workers.

He commented on his future hopes for grade 8 wrestlers: Ryan Freeman, Dan Silva, Kevin O'Donnell, Mike Lennon and Jeff Littlehale.

Bill Baird, one of the team captains, won second in the division 2 sectionals. He placed third at both the Whitman invitational and the Marshfield Christmas tourneys.

Dave Cullinane placed fourth at Whitman.

Oliver Nivand placed fourth in his category, 160 pounds, at Whitman and fifth at Marshfield.

Ken Shannon made it to sixth place in the sectionals. He was a first year varsity wrestler.

Sweeney predicted that the trio of Jason Thayer, Jed Terry and Carlo Lagrotteria will lead the team next year. All three are juniors.

Rep. Murray salutes guard

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, a Marine (once a Marine always a Marine) was present at Governor Weld's "Salute to the Guard Day" to pay honor and appreciation to the citizen soldiers of the Commonwealth who took part in Operation Desert Storm.

Almost one thousand men and women of The Army National Guard, The Air Guard and Reservists from The Air Force, Marine Corps, Navy, Coast Guard and Seabees met the call to arms with a degree of honor and professionalism that reflects great pride on them, their units and all Massachusetts residents.

Rep. Murray has personally been very close to the #1058th National Guard in Hingham. She said their action in the Persian Gulf is a profound statement on the values this nation holds dear. First and foremost is freedom. The Massachusetts citizen soldiers who faced Saddam Hussein's forces in the Gulf fought for the freedom of the people of Kuwait and to return their country to them. They also fought for the principle of freedom that this nation represents to the world.

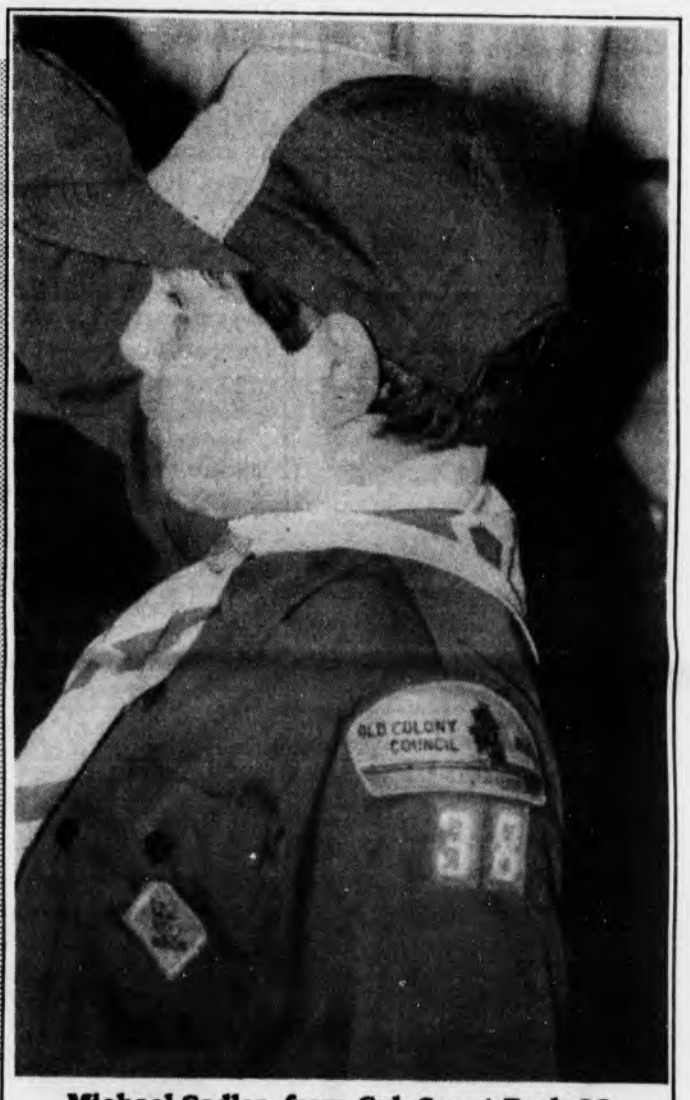
Governor Weld's statement is so appropriate, "We stand for freedom. That is our conviction for ourselves — that is our only commitment to others. No friend, no neutral, and no adversary should think otherwise. We are not against any man — or any nation — or any system — except as it is hostile to freedom."

Rep. Murray said she believes the world understands our commitment to freedom. She is certain that the resolve shown by President George Bush as he led us through this great test of our commitment to freedom demonstrated how strongly we hold our convictions.

The tremendous battlefield leadership of, "The Bear" General Norman Schwarzkopf certainly demonstrated our resolve.

The action of the men and women who flew the missions, drove the tanks, and marched over the sands of the Gulf to victory and freedom for the people of Kuwait deserve honor.

The #1058 National Guard of Hingham, are Massachusetts heroes who are school teachers, police officers, nurses, doctors, truck drivers who serve in The Guard and Reserve.



"We owe them our freedom, heritage and gratitude. We can say no less about the present members of the Guard and Reserve who answered the call to do duty in the Gulf. They fought for freedom. They stood tall for our heritage. We owe them our profound and sincere gratitude," Rep. Murray concluded.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and Brigadier Gen. John Hannon, executive officer of the Massachusetts National Guard, talk at the State House.

ART NOTES

Seniors' art scholarship

High school seniors who have been accepted to an accredited art school may apply for the Fred E. Bergfors Scholarship and the MacIvor Reddie Scholarship available from the South Shore Art Center. The Art Center, located at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, is a non-profit organization representing all of the South Shore communities.

Applicants must deliver to the Art Center a portfolio, brief artist's statement, and the name of the accredited school to which they are accepted, on April 25 and 26 from 1 to 4 p.m. For more information, call the Art Center at 383-9548.

Portfolio reviews

The South Shore Art Center in Cohasset will be conducting two portfolio reviews this spring. On April 27, representatives from area art colleges will conduct private consultations between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. for interested high school juniors. This is an excellent opportunity to learn how to prepare a portfolio for application to art school. Students should call the Art Center at (617) 383-9548 to make an appointment, for which there will be a $25 fee.

Artists interested in the Art Center's gallery artist membership may deliver their portfolios May 17 between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Jurying will take place on May 18 and artists may retrieve their portfolios on May 22 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. For more information, call the Art Center at 383-9548.

Adult scholarship

Has your job, your children, your family's hectic schedule kept you from doing what you really want to do: return to the field of visual arts? A memorial fund award available from the South Shore Art Center may be just the ticket to expedite your return.

The Margaret Marshall Dillon Memorial Fund Award assists adults returning to the field of visual arts after a period of extended interruption. The money can be used for anything the recipient wants, from art lessons to supplies, to paying the babysitter.

The application, stating reasons for requesting the award as well as what the applicant wants to accomplish in the field, must be submitted with a portfolio to the Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset on April 26 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Applicants will be judged by professional artists on the basis of their potential and their proposal. The award is available only to members of the Art Center. It will be presented at the SSAC Summer Festival's opening reception, June 20. For more information, call the Art Center at 383-9548.

HCO concert at Woods

The Chapel at Brandon Woods of Hingham will provide the setting for the Hingham Civic Orchestra's Spring Concert on Sunday afternoon, April 7 at 4 p.m. Appearing as guest soloist for the Concert "In the Woods" will be Alexandra Suchocki, who performed last season with the orchestra for the "Saturday Matinee at the Opera" and Pops Concerts.

Suchocki attended Boston Conservatory of Music and has since made Boston her home. She has appeared with Sarah Caldwell's Opera Company of Boston in productions of "Medea," "La Traviata," and "Dead Souls," and the American/Soviet collaboration "Making Music Together" during the 1988 season. She was also seen in productions of "The Merry Widow" and "La Forza del Destino" under the baton of Lake George Opera impressario, John Balme.

One of the female cantorial soloists in the area, she has also been soloist in many Oratorio performances and classical concerts throughout New England and the Southeast. Currently Suchocki is in her second consecutive season as one of the featured soloists with the John Hayes Hammond Museum Concert Series of twelve performances; and again this year was a featured soloist in the Boston Public Library's Rabb Lecture Hall concert series in March.

Suchocki is a versatile performer and has sung in many productions in musical theatre as well.

"The Function of Pain"

Pain is important to your well-being. It is nature's early warning signal. A message relayed through your nervous system that tells you when something is wrong. As such, pain is merely a symptom and not the cause of most health problems. Therefore, the sensible approach to health is not to merely turn off the pain (or treat the symptom). But rather to find the causes and correct them.

Town meeting voters face the town advisory board Saturday in the gym at Cohasset High School as the first session of town meeting got underway. The meeting came close to conclusion by Tuesday night. An adjourned session is planned for May 29 to deal with figures that could change due to the special override election on May 18.

Town meeting forces override vote

By Patricia Desmond

Town meeting this week spent more than the Proposition 2 1/2 limit.

A special override election is scheduled for May 18.

And on May 29, town meeting will reconvene to finish its business.

After meeting all day Saturday, April 6, Monday and Tuesday nights, the meeting adjourned until after the results of the special override election are known.

Left for action on May 29 are articles dealing with state-mandated sewer department construction as well as the state-mandated revaluation project.

Some spending already voted by town meeting is contingent on the override passing.

The basic budget was $142,000 more than allowed. Spending for articles added another $263,000 from those supported by the advisory board. The overall result is enough to add about $1 to the tax rate.

Should the override questions fail, a number of articles approved by the voters acting at the annual town meeting. The town may only add about 25 cents

Runners rush along the hot Rotary course

By Donna Cogliano
Mariner correspondent

With temperatures in the 80s on Sunday, the hot weather took its toll on runners participating in the annual Cohasset Road Race By The Sea. Four runners collapsed on the course and were rushed to South Shore Hospital by ambulance.

According to race director Peter Logan, the runners were treated and released the same day from the hospital.

More than 800 people turned out to run the race which was kicked off with a successful walk of 300 that same morning. Because of the nice weather spectators lined the course through out the town. Many residents provided relief for runners as they sprayed water from hoses in their yards for the participants to run through. There was also a water hose at the finish line of the race.

A reported 868 runners officially checked in for the race.

Winning the 10K race was Dave Vona, 28, of Newton in his first time running the course. Vona, who said it was extremely hot out there, won the race with a time of 32:14. His nearest competition came from Dr. Robert

Historic invocation offered

The Rev. Edward Atkinson, pastor of First Parish Church, offered the invocation at the opening session of town meeting Saturday at the high school.

The Rev. Atkinson pointed out that 200 years ago the church he serves and the town were one and the same. Town meeting in those days met at the Meetinghouse on the Common.

He pointed out that now there is more diversity in the community. He asked those gathered to join with him to focus on God or their highest ideal.

Scouts from Troop 28 led the gathering in the Pledge of Allegiance.

TM honors volunteers

Town meeting passed a few simple resolutions to give tribute to some long time volunteers.

First there was the annual resolution expressing gratitude to all who serve on town boards and committees. About 250 people are included in this group.

Then there was a resolution in honor of Daniel C. Cotton, planning board member who chose not to seek re-election. The motion was offered by Alfred S. Moore Jr., planning board chairman.

Cotton rose to say the motion made him wish he'd been nicer to his fellow board members.

Another motion was adopted to honor Dorothy Graham who retired recently from the assessors' department after 40 years of town employment. The resoluation made by James Lagrotteria, chairman of the board of assessors, wished her health and happiness.

Another motion named the new water department acquisition in honor of the late Robert Pape.

Raises indefinitely on hold

Articles in the town meeting warrant to grant raises to town workers were postponed indefinitely since the unions have not yet reached agreement with the town.

The one raise that did pass provides three percent for the treasurer/collector, town clerk and highway surveyor. The total dollar figure was $4,500.

In Special TM action

The special town meeting within the annual town meeting finished action on its eight-article warrant before lunchtime on April 6.

Articles approved by the special town meeting take effect immediately while action by the annual town meeting does not begin until the start of the new fiscal year on July 1.

The special town meeting:

• approved $8,205 for reconstruction of the Margin Street dock and float.

• approved (on a hand vote of 120 to 54) $1,716 for night patrols of the harbor on weekends from now until July 1. The advisory committee recommended defeat of the article, saying the harbormaster had overspent his salary account in the fall.

• approved the expenditure of $25,000 to install new water main along sections of Beechwood and Doane streets near the Scituate line. The money is actually being paid by a developed who hopes to build five units in the area but needs water for the housing.

• approved a transfer from surplus water revenue of $52,510 to pay water department interest on outstanding notes.

• approved the transfer of $18,983.20 from surplus water revenue to the reserve fund to repay money needed for interest in advance of the town meeting action.

• approved another similar transfer of $10,000 in sewer department money to repay the reserve account.

Sewer negotiations go on

Edward Guild, sewer commissioner, told town meeting his board is continuing to negotiate with the state to reduce the town's costs in dealing with the sewer system.

Private ambulance pushed

Roy Fitzsimmons, chairman of the Government Structure Committee, gave a report to town meeting on April 6 that suggested the town continue to pursue the privatization of the fire department ambulance.

Fitzsimmons talked about how efforts to regionalize in various haven't worked out with the exception of the regionalized Advanced Life Support Ambulance. That ambulance would not replace the town service.

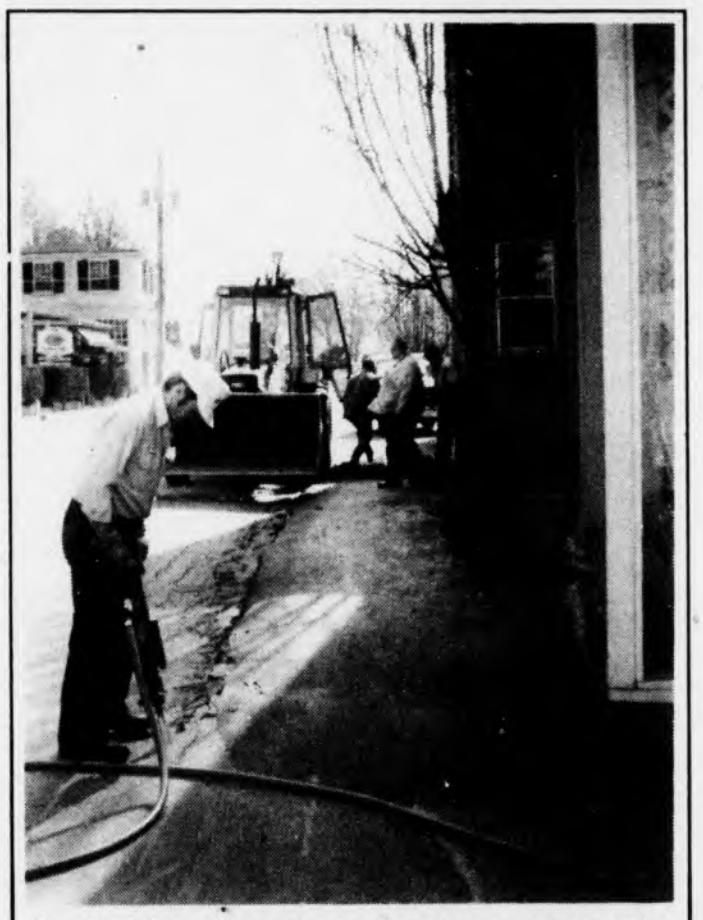
Fitzsimmons said the private companies say the specifications sought by the town are unlike anything they've seen.

At another time during the session Fitzsimmons asked about the status of ambulance receipts. His question was not answered. Last year ambulance receipts were low.

Smoking restricted by TM

Non-smokers can breathe deeply following action by town meeting. Voters passed a groundbreaking bylaw controlling cigarette smoking in public buildings.

Under the new bylaw, smoking is forbidden in common areas of public buildings and workplaces such as lobbies, hallways, elevators, entrances, stairwells and restrooms. Physical barriers and ventilation systems must isolate designated smoking areas from the smoke-free areas.



Restaurants must set aside 75 percent of their seating area as non-smoking areas. According to Health Board member Sharon Becker, the setaside reflects the actual percentages of non-smokers versus smokers.

According to Becker, the purpose of the comprehensive bylaw was to protect the community and non-smokers from the preventable hazards to health that secondhand smoke presents.

Becker said only one restaurateur attended a public hearing on the proposed bylaw. That person, Dan Leahy, manages a restaurant that is 100 percent smoke-free already.

Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik said he expected the management of a restaurant would be able to deal with violations by seating the offender in the smoking section.

MWRA buy looms over Heights

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

A resolution to try to seal the fate of the privately owned Cohasset Heights Landfill was defeated by a hand vote of 57 to 73 by the first session of town meeting April 6.

The resolution which would have put the town on record as opposed to any expansion was debated at length before its defeat. Even if the resolution has passed, it would have had no binding effect.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby read the document into the record of town meeting but her board had no position on the move. Gjesteby said she only saw the resolution that morning.

Paul and John Barry, owners of Cohasset Heights Limited, have sought approval for general expansion of the dump which is now limited to handling construction demolition.

Paul Barry told the meeting the state has asked more information from the initial environmental impact statement filed.

He said he has offered the land to the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority as an alternative to the current plan to send MWRA sludge to Walpole.

He said he has been told the grit would amount to no more than three or four loads a day. He said the material is tested and toxic waste is sent to a special facility.

"There is major compensation for the hosting community," Barry said. He added that the town might benefit since the MWRA would be required to remove the leaching water from the landfill, something that has been an ongoing controversy.

He asked town officials to listen to the MWRA before making a decision.

Wayne Shawchuk, speaking as a citizen rather than as an advisory board member, said he sees the MWRA acquisition of Cohasset Heights as an opportunity for the town to take care of a problem.

"You have someone with extremely deep pockets able to take care of the problems," Sawchuk said.

He said the sludge disposal would get rid of the seagulls, provide landscaping for the facility and clean up the entrance to Cohasset.

He said Barry paid $5 million for the dump, spent about $3 million on additional land to extend the facility, another couple million dollars in legal fees to fight the town and more for leachate removal.

Pat Walsh talked of visiting an MWRA treatment facility and said the smell of the sludge would be strong.

Paula Knowles of Border Street said there is a small group of well-meaning people who have become fanatics on the landfill question.

Smoking restricted by town meeting

"I'm not sure we have a real enforcement issue," he said.

Godzik emphasized that smoking is a killer, even when the smoke is inhaled second hand.

"Over 50,000 people died in 1990 because of environmental cigarette smoke," he said. "Most of those deaths are from coronary heart disease." Godzik said he wanted to see Cohasset in the forefront again as it has been in the past on the issue of smoking in public places.

Tickets will be issued by town officials

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Law enforcement and public safety claimed a big chunk of time during Monday's session of town meeting. The only controversy centered on a proposal to give the animal control officer, conservation commission chairman, harbormaster, health agent, building inspector, executive secretary and selected other officials the power to issue tickets for violations of town bylaws. The article passed 83-70.

Selectman Jane Goedecke described it as similar to issuing a speeding ticket, where the recipient pays up if he agrees he's guilty and takes it to court if he thinks he is innocent.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said the new system would be less cumbersome than the current requirement of taking a violator to court. He claimed it would be a more economical way of disposing of bylaw violations.

Advisory committee member John Mullet joked, "We'll all have to be on our toes from now on."

Not everyone felt comfortable with the proposal.

"I have a great deal of difficulty with this article," Bob Martin of 259 South Main St. said. "I am convinced that power corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely. I am afraid this power will be abused."

Dan Leahy of 215 Forrest Ave. agreed.

"We don't need another entire police department," he warned.

Robert Davenport of 135 Sohier St. didn't fear abuse so much as he believed misinterpretation of bylaws would rule the day. He said the building inspector, planning board and zoning board of appeals frequently disagreed about the proper interpretation of the zoning bylaws.

"Cohasset doesn't have a very good record winning these cases," he warned.

Despite their dire predictions, voters took a more optimistic view.

Resident safety got a push with the easy passage of articles dealing with emergency calls, ambulances and sidewalks.

Enhanced 911 service came another step closer to reality when town meeting voted to accept the state legislation creating it.

According to Selectman Martha Gjesteby, the town had to accept the statute before it could have the service. She said E-911 would be phased in over time.

Gjesteby described the service as an essential part of the police-fire station renovations and upgrade.

Glenn Pratt of 482 King Street said he hoped it marked the beginning of a central dispatch system. Pratt said coordination suffered because of the lack of coordination.

Town meeting also took care of some housekeeping matters by giving selectmen power to execute an amended contract governing the four-town advanced life support ambulance.

According to Selectman Jane Goedecke, this step was neglected in the original contract arrangements. With the agreement coming up for renewal, selectmen wanted all papers in order. Voters passed the article unanimously.

Residents hope to make life easier for pedestrians trying to negotiate King Street in the near future. They proposed a three-person committee work with Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield to devise a way and the means to build a sidewalk along King Street from Route 3A to Beechwood Street.

"This 1.1 mile section has become heavily traveled," King Street resident Sumner Smith told voters. "People still think they are driving on 3A. We've already had one or two accidents. There are a lot of children, joggers and old people."

Smith said he hoped the study committee would keep the issue alive despite the lack of ready cash for sidewalk construction.

Moderator William Weeks will appoint the study committee.

Schools win $ for capital projects

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

The school system fared well at Monday night's session of town meeting. Maintaining those gains in the override election is the next hurdle.

Voters easily passed articles authorizing the town to borrow a total of $140,000 for school projects. But both votes are contingent on passage of Proposition 2-1/2 override questions.

The first article authorizes borrowing $115,000 to begin replacing the glass block wall and windows on one section of the high school. According to school committee Chairman Barbara Bliss, the windows are bowing out badly and the wall is structurally unsound.

The same article covers the first phase of replacing the floor covering at Joseph Osgood School. Bliss described the 15 to 20-year-old carpeting as torn and wrinkled. The school committee plans to use some combination of tile and carpeting. The entire project will be spread out over a five-year period.

Bliss explained that the school system cannot just take up the old carpet at the elementary school because it is laid over subflooring.

G. Robert Jackson, chairman of the capital budget committee, drew laughter when he said the carpet replacement was necessary because, "without getting graphic about it, more than little feet have been on the carpet."

Because Osgood School lacks a cafeteria, the kindergarten through third grade students eat in their classrooms.

Jackson also emphasized the need to replace the windows at the high school as soon as possible. He said the condition of the windows has led to water damage in that wing.

A second article proposed spending $25,000 to set up a writing lab at the high school. The lab will be equipped with Apple computers to train students in all phases of writing, editing and word processing. Bliss said the lab would be used in the science and math curriculum as well as in English.

The amount in the article will allow the school to purchase 12 computers, ancillary equipment and software to add to the eight computers already available.

"This does not replace teachers," Bliss said. "It is tutorial, for independent learning."

TO TRAIN OR NOT TO TRAIN:

Vote "NO" on Question 1 and 2!

The train is not a wise investment for Cohasset...

- It will mean an increase of $130 or 4% in your real estate taxes right from the start;
- It takes away the control we have over our town budget by having to fund $400,000 annually, an amount equal to 6th or 2nd grade;
- Proposition 2-1/2 is not cut in stone and expected to be eliminated allowing the state to redistribute more of the T deficit to cities and towns with service.

and what would we get for an investment of $400,000 a year?

- commuter train service, programmed to cater to 4.6% of the adult population
- a schedule that does not provide any more frequent service during non-rush hours than the Boat
- no savings in travel time to Boston
- a good chance that the Boat will lose subsidies and we will lose its reliable service
- a drive-to station only; no stop in town, and
- 12 grade crossings in Cohasset alone

Town meeting forces override vote

to the tax rate without an override. Even the basic budget would be reduced without an override. The advisory board does not plan to make recommendations on what would be reduced, Arne Gjesteby, committee chairman said.

He also pointed out that any employee raises would require additional town meeting action and overrides.

As it is, there are only a few scattered raises included in the basic $12.9 million plus budget. The police, fire and school teachers unions are still in the process of negotiating with the town.

Gjesteby and the advisory board are recommending a pay freeze this year.

But Barbara Moore, chairman of the personnel committee, said her board continues to bargain in good faith and she cannot discuss the negotiations underway.

The fire union has been without a contract since last July and on the recommendation of Gjesteby, the meeting decided against a special town meeting article to pay $40,864 for overtime required under the expired contract. The selectmen recommended the money be paid.

Gjesteby said that if legal action were to force the payment, the money would be taken from the reserve account.

Selectman Jane Goedecke, who made the motion for the $12.9 million budget, told the meeting that the overall expenditures are up only 1.8 percent if the water department figures are excluded. Water department revenue supports that budget but the numbers are included in amounts to be raised.

Joseph McElroy, member of the capital budget committee, pointed out that the bottom line is still up four percent and likely to rise to eight to 10 percent unless there is no pay hike.

Gerard Keating of the Council on Aging suggested that if the override were lumped into one question, it would probably fail.

He asked that the question be broken down into categories and received some applause.

The mood of the town meeting was independent. Recommendations of the advisory board were accepted for the most part but certainly not without scrutiny. Nor did recommendations of the selectmen win total approval.

In a major deviation from the advisory board's wishes, town meeting passed a resolution directing the selectmen to turn the Bates Building (sometimes known as Rotary Hall) over to South Shore Habitat for Humanity to be used for low-income housing.

Roy Fitzsimmons, chairman of the Government Structure Committee, addresses town meeting. Fitzsimmons once again made a pitch for a private ambulance. (J. Paul MacDonald photo)

Habitat — which is famous partly because of the involvement of former President Jimmy Carter — will bring a corps of volunteers to the property to transform the building into a two family home. The families who will live in the building will be part of the work force. They will be able to buy housing at zero interest on a long-term note.

John Seavey of Beechwood Street, one of the Habitat volunteers, introduced an amendment to the main motion on the Bates Building that would have given the selectmen a year to auction off the building for at least $125,000 and if that auction were not held — or if no bidder came up with the minimum — then the selectmen would have been required to turn the building over to Habitat.

After some debate, Seavey withdrew his amendment in favor of the resolution. A resolution is not legally binding on the selectmen but Barbara Power, another Habitat volunteer, said she trusted the board.

Wayne Sawchuk, member of the advisory board, moved that the selectmen sell the Bates Building at public auction with a minimum bid of $125,000. After some debate, Sawchuk offered to buy the building himself at that price if there were no other takers.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said the broadly written article on the sale of the Bates Building was in keeping with a promise made to town meeting back when the town hall addition was authorized.

"We'd like to get rid of the building. Everybody says we shouldn't be in the business of renting out property," Laugelle said.

Mike Kenneally, vice president of South Shore Habitat and another volunteer, was allowed to speak to the meeting although he is not a resident. He said once the building were renovated, it would generate money through being back on the tax rolls. Deed restrictions would keep the property in the hands of lower income families. Kenneally promised the first opportunities would go to people with family ties to Cohasset.

He pointed out that several churches in town have

Walkers officially join in fun on Rotary race day

By Donna Cogliano
Mariner correspondent

Nearly 300 walkers took part in the first annual Cohasset Walk By the Sea on Sunday. It was a non-competitive event where the community came together to kick off the road race.

Exercise enthusiasts and outdoors people came together with their fellow neighbors, friends and former classmates to take part in a friendly walk.

The walk was sponsored by Cohasset's "Fit For Success" and money raised went to the Rotary Club but it will be used for special senior citizen projects. Normandie Nigh played a key role in organizing the successful walk. And Brad Ketchum, editor of Walking Magazine donated 22 pairs of walking shoes as prizes.

The walkers hit their stride at 10 a.m. Sunday starting at Sandy Beach. Participants were able to choose between a three-mile or 6.2-mile route.

Following the walk, participants were treated to some lively dixieland music from a band performing on a classic fire engine provided by Glenn Pratt.

The weather cooperated with temperatures sky-rocketing into the 80s. Several residents, including some youngsters, along the course offered walkers cups of water. Participants were also supplied with a water break at the Cohasset Community Center where runners were registering for the road race.

Prizes were awarded for all kinds of reasons. Though the walk wasn't a race, the first arrivals were awarded walking shoes. Other prizes were: Reebok water bottles, Reebok fanny pack and Canadian Glacier t-shirts. Water was provided to all walkers by Canadian Glacier Water.

The best costume and most outrageous award went to Laura Pattyson.

The first walkers to complete the 10K course were Richard and Sabina Noering. The finished the course in 1:11:14. They were also the first couple to finish the walk. Next year walk officials plan to give an award to the first family to finish the walk.

Second place finishers of the walk were John Replogle and Sarah Abbruzzee Murphy. Third place winners were John Gaston and Jane Handerson. Selectman Ned Tebbetts clinched fourth place as did Alice Brown for the women.

Winners of the 3-mile walk were: Carol Walls, Diane Taylor and Susan Barunas. The first couple to complete three miles was Dave and Nancy Tapley.

Awards for the eldest walkers went to: Ellory Clark, 81, and Lucille McLoughlin, 83.

The youngest walkers in the 10K were Simone Ketchum, 12, and Meredith Hermance, 12. Kristine Lucki, age 8, was the youngest walker on the three-mile course.

The first walkers to finish with a baby carriage were: Nancy, Tracy, Erin and Cindy, all from Hingham. The first pet to complete the walk was "Diamond" who accompanied Glen Beahmer.

The largest team award went to the "Hogs" with eight females from Weymouth.

The first roller blader to arrive back at Sandy Beach was Michelle Tosca. An award also went to the person who came the farthest which was John Welsh from Putney, Vermont.

The best walking wiggle award went to selectman Jane Goedecke. Bill Adams received and award for being the most likely not to finish (but did). The best attitude award went to Virginia Anderson of the Cohasset Strutters.

become involved and many residents are volunteers.

Selectman Diana Kornet said the one year time frame in the Habitat motion was too long. She said that if it were the will of town meeting to donate the building to Habitat, selectmen would like to see the transaction take place in six months time.

"We are very concerned with having the building returned to the tax rolls," Kornet said.

The Bates Building is in a single family zone.

Herb Towle of Beechwood Street suggested the building be kept for use on Monday nights by the Rotary, to provide toilet facilities for the sewer workers and for use by the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Keith Knowles of the drug and alcohol committee suggested the town retain the building in a way that it does not become a financial burden.

There was some discussion about whether the town needs to provide more low income housing to qualify for future state grants.

There was more discussion about whether the project might benefit the town in intangible ways.

In a separate vote, town meeting decided to spend $30,000 to renovate the duplex at Government Island. Half the building is rented out and that half brings in about $7,000 a year in revenue. Selectmen promised to increase the rent to about the same amount for the other half of the building, which is now vacant, after the renovations are complete.

In other town meeting action

Town meeting also approved:

- $20,000 to paint the exterior of the old town hall.
- $9,800 for a new roof for the highway garage, which is now leaking.
- $3,000 to change the design of the island at King and Beechwood streets.
- $914 for a legal bill from a prior fiscal year.
- a change in wording on town payment of health insurance for town employees to bring the bylaw into compliance with state law.
- a provision to provide a way of removing committee members who are absent from four consecutive meetings. Now a letter of resignation is required.

It voted to take no action on articles to:

- acquire the Eastern Edison garage ($150,000 was requested.)
- put money in the stabilization fund.
- construct a sidewalk on Forest Avenue.

Land transactions clear town meeting

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Monday night town meeting-goers dealt with the future of town property by acting on three separate warrant articles.

The fate of a 50-foot wide right-of-way linking Bancroft Road to a water department standpipe caused the most debate. Voters opted to auction it off by a 79-26 vote.

The water department proposed putting the land up for public auction. According to water department Superintendent Joseph Hamilton, the right-of-way has

❑ The Steering Committee For the South Shore Arts Festival/Harborfest is already hard at work planning for the June 21 art exhibition, Saturday Pancake Breakfast and Harbor Games, and the Blessing of the Fleet, Parade, and Chowder Contest on Sunday. They hope to include as many people as possible, organizations too, to inject more "community" into Cohasset. The committee invited representatives from the students in the school system to get their ideas, and they are hoping that the enthusiasm will grow and grow. If it is half as successful as the art exhibit always is, then they are sure to have a real winner on their hands. If you have any ideas, we're sure that the Art Center would appreciate them, give them a call at 383-9548.

❑ Happy belated birthday greetings go to Paul St. John this week. He turned a magic number on April 6. Ah, you are as young as you feel, right Paul?

❑ Speaking of birthdays, there was a big birthday celebration last weekend for Sue Etkind...we're talking big celebration, Sue had her big "40th" on March 29. Many happy returns go to you Sue, and we're sure you know the other expression "we are not getting older, we are getting better."

❑ Finally, Scott Fone came home to his folks' home in our town for his birthday...he and Nanette came for the Road Race that took place last Sunday. Scott has turned into quite a runner, he was right at the beginning of the pack when we saw him. Don't know how he does it.

❑ The Road Race was deemed by all to be the most successful in the fifteen year history. Everyone involved was pleased and proud of the efforts. Though it was a bit warm for the runners, it was dynamite for those of us watching them. Congratulations to all of the participants, you are sure to be applauded.

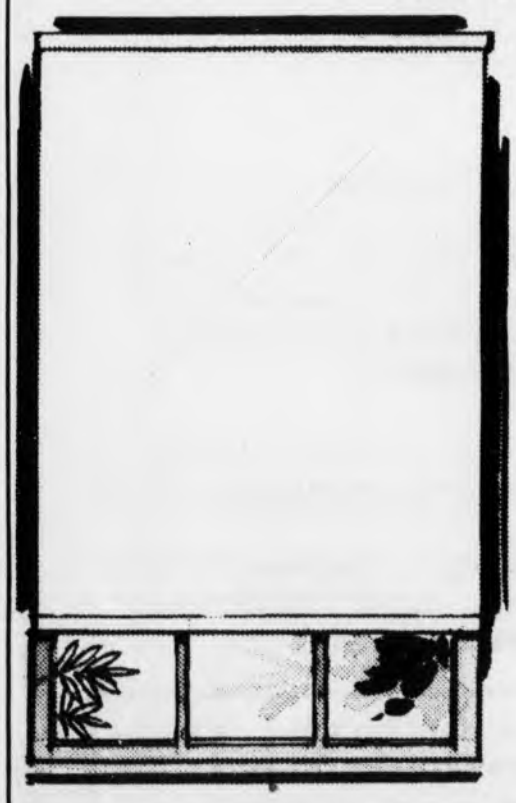
❑ Every year Mary and Henry Brennock hold an Easter Egg Hunt at St. Anthony's Rectory, and every year they do a bigger and better job! Rumor has it there were over 500 eggs on the rectory lawn, and there were 50 prizes for the eggs. Of course, no hunt would be complete without the Easter Bunny, who was there mingling with all of the children...along with that there were tons of balloons. Needless to say, a grand time was had by all, and Mary and Henry deserve a standing ovation for their time and their work and their love of the children.

❑ As most know, this was the first year for Cohasset High to have a swim team, and guess what folks? Topher Henderson, Chip Anderson and David Lahey all made the Boston Globe Swim Team All-Stars. Great going guys, think of what they will expect from you next year. Just keep swimming...

❑ We are happy to report that both Leona Pratt and John Winters are home from South Shore Hospital, and here's to their complete recovery very soon.

❑ The Appalachia Service Project is sponsoring a Car Wash-A-Thon on April 13 and they will be soliciting sponsors to pledge money per how many cars they can get washed in six hours. Last year they managed to do 104, so that may help you in your efforts to pledge. In any case, watch for the Senior Highs to be asking for your donation. As you know, it is a most worthwhile project under the direction of Rev. Gary Ritts. They have done wonderful work so far, and they claim to be better every year.



❑ Another fifteenth annual event took place this weekend, the Cohasset Recreation Department's Easter Egg Hunt. There certainly were a lot of kiddos that made it to the hunt, Deer Hill School's land was never so full! We hear that all adored the whole day, which was complete with fine weather, tons of eggs, the Easter Bunny, balloons and candy. If your young one missed it this year, watch for the 16th annual next year. You will all be glad that you did.

❑ One last plea for money for this week, this one to help out the Little League Program. Monday, April 15 (that's during school vacation when no mom wants to cook anyway) be sure to order your pizza or whatever you wish at Papa Gino's in Cushing Plaza. You pay the same price as always, Papa Gino's will donate 15% of its net proceeds to our Little League program. The players sure will thank you.

❑ That's the news from here for this week...please let me know yours. Especially with school vacation, there is always a lot then. Thanks.

Outreach worker funded for COA

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Town voters unanimously approved adding $4,169 to the council on aging's level-funded budget to carry the outreach worker for the last six months of the fiscal year. But the council won't breathe a sigh of relief until the money is safely in hand.

The council on aging came up against the six-month gap when town officials insisted the council could only include the portion of the worker's salary actual paid out of local funds during the current fiscal year when preparing the level-funded budget for next fiscal year.

Last year the outreach worker was funded through a state grant. When the state funding lapsed halfway through the year, town meeting voted to retain the position and authorized the necessary funds. Although officials conceded that voters wanted the position retained, they insisted on a narrow interpretation of what constitutes level funding.

The council submitted the warrant article to protect the position. Without additional money, the council cannot retain the position for the full year.

Selectman Ned Tebbetts emphasized that 20 percent of the population of Cohasset is 60 or over. Tebbetts urged voters to replace the money the state cut from the budget for senior services.

Currently, the council on aging receives only three-tenths of one percent of the town budget despite an ever-growing caseload of elders. The level-funded budget totals $37,793. The agency has been level-funded for the past three years in spite of increases in the cost of delivering services and an increase in the number of elders served.

The next hurdle for the council is the override election slated for May 18. Council chairman Gerard Keating said the people who show up for town meeting and those who go to the polls can be two different crowds with different agendas.

Keating hopes both groups understand how vital the work of the outreach worker is.

The outreach worker makes home visits to frail elders, conducts assessments and devises a service plan to link the person with services in the community, he said. Over the past nine months she has worked with 138 different residents. The outreach worker also provides information and referral services to families, friends and agencies concerned about senior citizens.

Close cooperation between agencies such as the council, the Social Service League, the visiting nurse and South Shore Elder Services enable elderly people to remain in their homes. According to Kathy Bryanton, 75 percent of the elders over 75 are living in their own homes.

"The outreach worker is a bridge between the community and available resources," Keating told town meeting voters Monday night. "She reaches out to those who are withdrawn and isolated. She makes a strong effort to keep the frail elderly out of rest homes and on the tax rolls."

Keating added that he hoped the selectmen would place the outreach worker's salary in a separate override article.

"We want to know how the citizens feel about the services we provide," he said.

Town employees to be paid every other week

Town employees exited the second session of town meeting with a few changes in their pay and benefits package. Whether those changes are implemented depends on action by the legislature and the outcome of a planned motion to reconsider.

The proposal to pay all employees on a biweekly basis met with considerable controversy. It passed on an 86-61 show of hands.

According to Selectman Diana Kornet, approximately two-thirds of town employees are currently paid biweekly. She said paying all employees on that basis would be more efficient and cost-effective.

"It would save hours and hours of time and paper work and improve cashflow," Kornet said. "It's an idea whose time has come."

Kornet promised the new system would be phased in after approval by all town employees and collective bargaining units. Town employees opposed the change.

Town meeting passed an article directing the selectmen to petition the state legislature enact legislation permitting the town to offer only one form of health insurance coverage. Currently the town is obligated to offer town employees indemnity coverage. The town has been unable to meet that obligation since Blue Cross terminated coverage last July 1.

No changes are planned in the amount of the town's contribution if the legislature approves the single plan approach.

Town election yields small field of hopefuls

In the past the Cohasset Mariner has taken a stand on candidates for election.

Indeed, last year the voters went along with the Mariner's choice and gave Jane Goedecke and Martha Gjesteby two of the five seats on the board of selectmen.

This year we offer no opinion. Rocco Laugelle, a four-term winner and current selectman chairman, is being challenged by Richard Barrow, retired police sergeant.

We've seen little campaigning by either candidate in this low-key fight for political office. As far as we know, neither candidate has been out knocking on doors, asking for votes. Neither candidate has been highly visible on the chicken dinner circuit.

You can see the candidates for planning board more easily. Both Jean Simonds and Terry Atherton have been visible and vocal in this election.

There are actually only a few offices contested this year. There's a race for library trustee, as four candidates vie for three posts; one for recreation commission, as two hopefuls seek one seat; one for planning board, as another two seek an opening on the board; a race for water commissioner as an incumbent faces a retired water department employee and then the fight for the selectmen's office.

There's no override vote on the town election ballot. The override comes up for a decision on May 18 when a special election has been scheduled.

The hot item on the election ballot will be the railroad question. We've been hearing from both sides in this debate for some time. At least there's some energy here. The railroad and anti-railroad people have been writing away for weeks, offering more than enough information.

The choice on the railroad is complex. Obviously there are transportation problems getting from here to Boston and back. And obviously our editorial position is in favor of dealing with those problems to create a smooth commute.

But does the state have the money available for build a new railroad line. The proponents say the capital is available. We have to wonder who is being robbed to put the money up.

Another problem is the environmental impact of the plan. We don't think diesel-powered trains with all their black soot fit into the South Shore's landscape. We'd prefer something more in keeping with today's technology.

While the issue is indeed debatable, we're sure most people already know how they stand on the concept. We just hope you take the time to vote.

Polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, April 13, at town hall.

Correction

Warren Noble and his employees do not park on the railroad right of way in Hingham Square.

Tanna Kasperowicz, who hopes to see the Greenbush line restored, made a remark in a column published in the Cohasset Mariner on April 4 about parking on the tracks.

Her point was meant to be taken with a grain of salt.

Nevertheless, we apologize to Noble who we understand has never parked on the railroad tracks.

Community center blames press

Open letter to the Town of Cohasset:

The Cohasset Community Center Board of Directors would like to take the opportunity to address the town on the proposal to form a partnership with the Recreation Commission, Booster Clubs, and the Community Center.

The Board would like to inform you why the proposal was initiated and why it was withdrawn.

The Cohasset Community Center operates as a non-profit organization for the civic, social, charitable, educational, and recreational betterment of the town. We have provided these services for nearly fifty years.

The list of services we provide is extensive and, hopefully, many of you are aware of these services as users and members of the center. The members of the center are residents, neighbors, friends, the civic minded, the young, the elderly, fathers, mothers, coaches, and cheerleaders for our children. In short, the center is made up of people.

The Board of Directors are concerned citizens who volunteer their time and effort for the reward of seeing the community provided with quality programs and services. Many of you, through your constant generosity and faith in the Community Center idea, help make this possible.

The Board was asked by town officials to study the feasibility of a partnership approach which would provide recreational activities for the town. Other communities have realized savings through a similar approach.

After studying the issue for eighteen months, the board of directors began the process of sharing the proposal with the Recreation Commission, the Booster Clubs, the Board of Selectmen, and the Advisory Committee.

There is little more to the issue.

We had hoped that the press would have been more objective and held their editorials until they had seen or read the proposal, thereby, allowing it to have been judged on its own merit. The board also feels badly that some others involved in the proposal were so offended.

We made our proposal in good faith at the request of others, and we took measured steps to include concerned parties in the process. In the end, however, the Board felt that the negative coverage and accompanying ill will was unfair to all our members and, therefore, withdrew the proposal.

We continue to pursue our charter, we will continue to provide quality programs, and we are prepared to participate in any other cooperative effort as requested by the community.

Sincerely,
Board of Directors

Commuter rail benefits the environment

To the Editor:

For the past twenty-six years as a university professor, my research and teaching has concerned the railroad industry, incorporating commuter rail. As a result of my studies, I strongly support restoring commuter rail service to the South Shore on all three of the former Old Colony lines, including the Braintree-Greenbush line via my own town of Cohasset. The benefits of restoring the Old Colony service, injudiciously taken from and denied to the South Shore for three decades would not just be to regular and occasional commuters and particular-trip riders, but also to the entire non-riding population of the region. This conclusion is supported in the following three paragraphs.

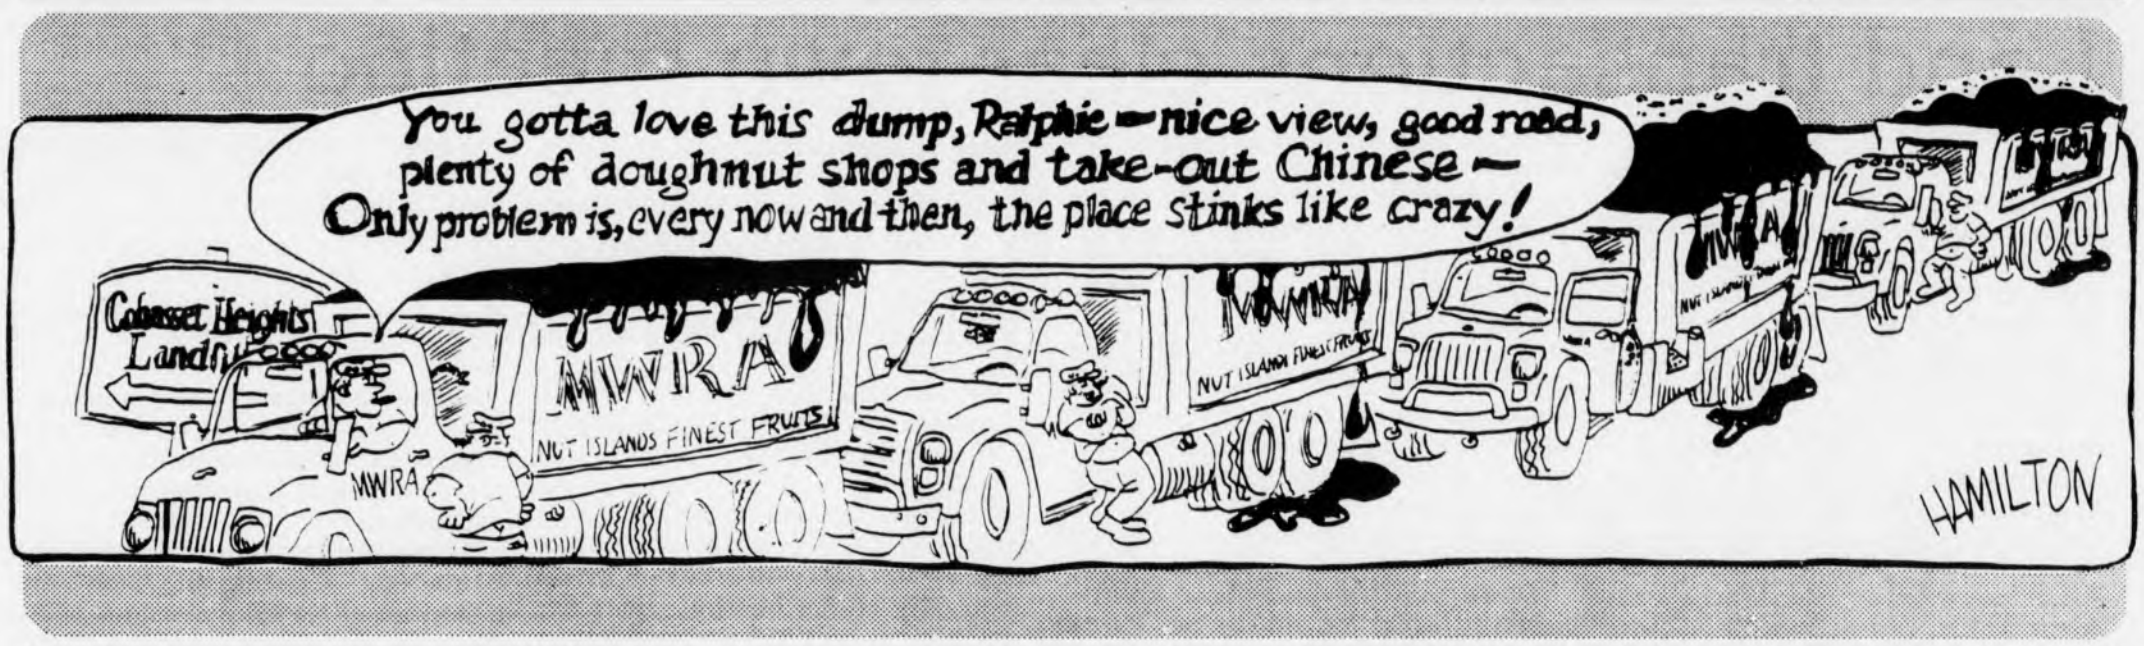
Old Colony restoration is needed to help presently reduce and to provide an expandable resource for future reduction of the traffic congestion on our overburdened highways. Concomitantly reduced will be the considerable direct and indirect costs to all of us of the ever-growing complex of automobile transportation. We cannot expand forever our dependency on the auto in a heedless imitation of Los Angeles during the 1940s and 1970s. Today, even this "freeway city" is abandoning its bankrupt and failed dependence on the auto and returning to rail transit and commuter rail. Further, our Old Colony restoration will help reduce both the public costs and the loss of land consumed by constructing additional highway capacity. And it will help diminish the trend toward the urban, low-density sprawl spawned by unchecked reliance on autos.

Old Colony restoration is necessary for public health and environmental preservation, as part of a reduction of atmospheric and other environmental pollution from the growing number of autos on the South Shore. Specifically, the restoration is required for diminishing the pollution from engine exhaust, gasoline vapors, lubricating oil residues, and other automotive contaminations of the environment.

Compared to autos, commuter rail moves people safely, efficiently, and quickly, and, above all, fairly. Commuter rail provides needed transportation in areas of limited access to autos, such as downtown locations. The societally correct and humane commuter rail furnishes vital mobility to the handicapped, the elderly, the poor, the young, others who cannot operate an auto, and those who do not drive. Compared to the elitist exclusivity of auto transport, commuter rail provides equal accessibility to all citizens of the South Shore, including conveyance to jobs and services—medical, for example—otherwise denied. In all, regarding transportation for the South Shore as a whole, commuter rail equitably provides the citizenry with a choice.

Very truly your,
Frederick C. Gamst

PSO backs proposed override



To the Editor:

As PSO president, I would like to thank Town Meeting voters for their support of the schools and town services. I would like to emphasize that, although we obviously serve as advocates of public education, we support the integrity of all town government, and, in our voter service capacity, we encourage all school parents to do so.

We strongly urge the Advisory Committee to give voters an indication of where cuts will be made in the event the override fails. The PSO is sponsoring a Voter Information Forum on Tuesday, April 30, 7:30 p.m., at the Unitarian Parish House, where further information will be available concerning these issues.

We urge all Cohasset voters to participate in the regular election on Saturday, April 13, and the override election on Saturday, May 18th, so that we can finish the job that Town Meeting began in supporting the schools and town services.

Richard Barrow faces Rocco Laugelle on town ballot April 13

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Only one of the five seats on the board of selectmen goes up for grabs April 13. Both Richard P. Barrow and Rocco Laugelle want to be sitting in it after the votes are counted.

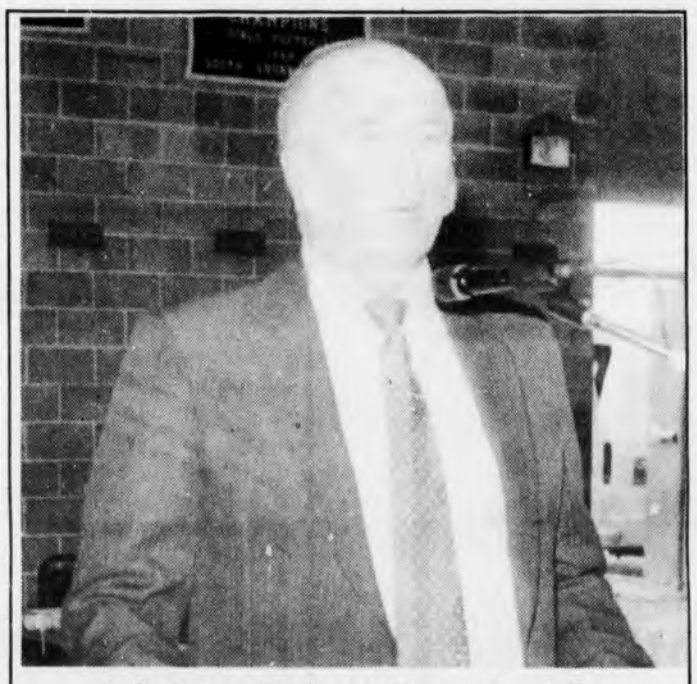
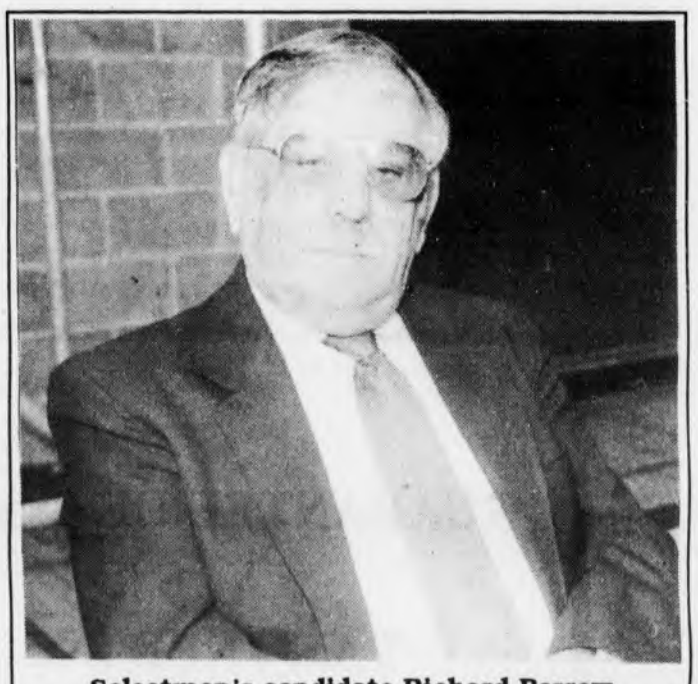
Richard P. Barrow is blunt and brutally honest about his reasons for running for selectman.



"I guess you can say it's dissatisfaction with the status quo. It's not a five-member voting board," he said. Barrow frequently refers to the number of times rival candidate and incumbent Rocco Laugelle has had to disqualify himself from voting on issues because he has several relatives working for the town.

Barrow, 65, of 283 King Street, is no stranger to local politics. A native of Cohasset, he has served on the town recreation department for 17 years, most of them as chairman. Barrow has been a member of the Government Island study committee for the past ten years, put in six years on the harbor study committee and was elected town constable for two years.



Last year he retired from the Cohasset police force after 40 years of service. Barrow held the rank of sergeant for 27 years and had passed the civil service examination for police chief.

When asked what strengths and talents he can bring to the board of selectmen, he quickly answers, "Good common sense and proven leadership ability. I have the time and can vote on any issue that comes before the board."

If elected, Barrow's top three goals would be to facilitate the consolidation of town departments, institute regional purchasing of goods and services and increase the cooperation between the selectmen and advisory committee.

Selectman Chairman Rocco Laugelle

Selectman's candidate Richard Barrow

Barrow favors creation of a department of public works and would rather see it done sooner rather than later. He disagrees with the proposal to wait until current department heads have retired to merge the various departments. Barrow blames the delay on an unwillingness to ask friends and neighbors who work for the town to make sacrifices.

"Personalities get into everything," Barrow complained. "If you feel it can work, start it now."

Merging the police and fire departments into a department of public safety under one chief could be another cost saving measure, he said. Barrow wants the town to set up a study committee to look at Lincoln's public safety department to see if it would work here. He also recommends merging the recreation department and the senior center.

"We can have better programs for less money," Barrow said.

Barrow also believes the town could realize substantial savings by banding with other small towns to purchase tires, batteries and tools in bulk.

And he thinks selectmen should follow the advice of the advisory committee as they used to rather than competing with them.

"We need to rely on the expertise of the advisory committee," Barrow said. "They're the ones who understand the big financial picture."

Barrow thinks the big challenges facing Cohasset in the coming years will come from the planned restoration of commuter rail service through Cohasset, the need to deal with the sewerage crisis and the financial straits of the town.

Dealing with money woes won't get any easier, he said. Barrow believes townspeople are unlikely to override Proposition 2 1/2 and are tired to being asked to pay more in the form of increased fees.

"We've got to bite the bullet some time," he said. "We have to roll up our sleeves and start somewhere."

Barrow thinks he's just the ticket for voters who want to see the hard decisions tackled head on.

ROCCO LAUGELLE

Rocco Laugelle currently holds the position of chairman of the board of selectmen. Although he wants to hold on to the seat he has held for many years, the Cohasset native is running a quiet campaign. Laugelle failed to show up for candidate forums and did not return calls from the Mariner.

Most of his views on government, however, are well known.

Tebbetts rebutted by rr supporter

To the Editor:

This is in response to Ned Tibbetts' document about costs of restoring the Greenbush line.

Yes, railroads cost money. Rapid transit costs money. Highways cost money — how many millions per mile? Harbors and docks and boat travel cost money. Let's face it, infrastructure costs money.

Consider also that driving your car costs money. Parking in Boston costs anywhere from $4 to $20 per day, if you can find a space. If you park at $10 per day, that's nearly $200 per month, not counting car maintenance and gas. Even at $5 per day and close to $100 per month, — or even $2.50 a day for T parking or $50 per month — your $100 on the yearly tax bill looks like an incredible bargain.

Consider also that the city of Boston has been selling off parking buildings partly to raise money and partly because urban planners discourage bringing thousands of cars into the central city — except for tourists, whom they want. So there are fewer and fewer places to park.

Anyone who has commuted to Boston from Cohasset has horror stories of interminable tie-ups, nerve-wracking travel, unpredictable arrival times, and stress. Commuters who work in Cambridge and beyond cannot use the boat because there are too many changes involved.

Don't forget that the bumper-to-bumper traffic on the Expressway every day is contributing to pollution and energy dependence. There is a price to pay for that, too.

But not everybody in town commutes, you say. No, they don't. But they all live in Cohasset. The choice here is not simply whether or not we want to take on an additional $300,000 in the budget for the convenience of present commuters. The choice is: what kind of town

Jean Simonds

Doris Golden, former Cohasset selectman and school committee member, and her husband, Jack, hosted a coffee for Jean Simonds, candidate for the planning board in the April 13 town election on Wednesday, April 8, at their home, 2 Bound Brook.

Anyone interested in Simond's candidacy is asked to call one of the following members of the election committee: Louis and Jean Bailey, 383-1186; William Ketchum, 383-0073; Marsha and Richard Silvia at 383-0500; Arlene Ferreira, 383-9341. Anne Vanderwell, 383-6590; Jean and Dan Cotton, 383-0651; Peter Guild, 383-0078; Doug and Phyllis Peck, 383-9420; Edythe Ford, 383-1648; Polly Logan, 383-0031; Muriel and Frank Wheelwright, 383-1318; Anthony Sestito, 383-9455, Thomas Nash, 383-1963 and Elizabeth and Charles Fink, 383-9394.

At a "meet the candidate" reception at the home of Joe and Ruth Nedrow, 21 Fairoaks, Wednesday, April 3, Dan Cotton, who is retiring from the board after ten years, endorsed Jean Simonds for Planning Board. He explained that the basic purpose of the Board is to foster order in land use which is not a static thing; it involves the process of growth, and it requires a long term point of view. He added that constancy, together with a sense of continuity, is essential to the planning process as well as to the drafting of bylaws. Cotton concluded that Jean Simonds is available full-time to hear the concerns of her fellow townspeople, willing to listen and to seek out answers, and believes that the town would benefit having a woman homeowner who has a thorough knowledge of and dedication to Cohasset's tradition-rich history as well as its vision.

Simonds highlighted her priority to work closely with business leaders and entrepreneurs in the continued revitalization of Cohasset Village and other business areas in Cohasset.

Simonds also urged all those who will be away during school vacation to go to the Town Hall and vote absentee ballot or request an absentee ballot be sent to member of one's family who is unable to go to the polls election day. Polls are open 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., April 13.

Land transactions clear town meeting

not been used in 30 years and the department has two other access roads to the standpipe. Hamilton said the deed would grant an easement to the department to maintain drainage and the piping along the right-of-way. He supported the article, saying it would return the land to the tax rolls.

Wayne Sawchuk of the advisory committee spoke against the sale.

Sawchuk described the land at issue as a piece of property off Bancroft Road and the tennis courts that abuts Henry Rattenbury's property. He said Rattenbury wanted the land because the house is only one foot from the property line currently.

Sawchuk said two appraisals conducted on the line came back with very different figures. The first appraisal set the value between $1,500 and $5,000. The second ranged from $5,000 to $10,000. He claims Rattenbury won't pay more than $1,500.

According to Sawchuk, the advisory committee opposes the sale. The committee believes the land is more valuable as noise barrier and a future resource.

Hamilton disagreed. He said the land was only useful as a wood lot and tennis ball catcher.

Rattenbury conceded the property was only worth $1,500 to him, but said the town would derive substantial benefits in the form of increased taxes on his property. He said without the right-of-way he could not do anything with his property, including repair the septic system if it failed.

Selectmen Ned Tebbetts and Jane Goedecke said they were angry with Sawchuk for revealing the property appraisals. They wanted the information kept confidential to maintain the integrity of the auction.

"Now you've compromised the process," Goedecke complained.

When town meeting voted on the article, it easily cleared the two-thirds majority required for approval of real estate matters.

Voters also approved an article giving the Housing Authority permission to pursue development of a congregate living facility for handicapped and elderly people when money becomes available through state or federal grants and it becomes possible to tie into the sewer system.

The property the Housing Authority has in mind is the empty house on the former Trettis land.

Town meeting also took care of a bit of housekeeping by directing selectmen to grant the historical society an easement so they can maintain the four-foot granite wall at 12 Summer St.

According to John Hartshorne of the historical society, the wall has been there for five to 10 years, but no formal easement had been granted by selectmen.

Voters passed the housing authority and historical society articles unanimously.

Value of town's property proved out

The following data was prepared by Selectman Ned Tebbetts for the duplex on Government Island.

Assumption:

1. Cohasset Selectmen wish to continue ownership of this property. We wish to make capital improvements to upgrade the quality of the housing, since the vacant unit is now in poor condition.

2. We wish to rent the two units at rates below "current commercial market conditions" and yet obtain for the town a net investment return of 7.5 percent annually after all expenses. We want tenants, who will pay the rent regularly and will make a major effort to keep the property in good condition.

3. Owners of commercial rental property would normally seek more than a 12 percent net investment return annually.

4. Over a ten year period, we wish to operate the duplex such that total income from rents will substantially exceed the town's share of operating and capital expenses.

5. The current value of the duplex is $180,000, excluding the land. This includes the $11,000, spent last summer for the septic system.

6. The town is prepared to spend $20,000 in cash for needed capital improvements in the near future.

7. The addition of the above two lines gives a total value of $200,000.

Conclusions arising from the above assumptions:

1. We want to get a 7.5 percent net return on this $200,000. Initially, we would need $15,000 a year excess of rental income over all the town's operating

For your Oriental rug to retain its beauty and value, it should be cleaned at least once every three to five years.

Voters refuse railroad debate

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

After waiting 20 minutes for a quorum to show up on a balmy spring evening, voters handily dispatched 21 articles Monday during the second session of town meeting.

During the meeting, voters passed 18 articles, postponed one to an adjourned meeting and indefinitely postponed two others.

The evening proved disappointing for opponents of the Greenbush line of the Old Colony railroad restoration project. Voters dashed their hopes to use town meeting as a platform to address the environmental and financial drawbacks of the planned restoration by voting 115-51 to indefinitely postpone the article.

The anti-railroad faction hoped to pass an article directing selectmen to bar restoration unless proponents could prove there were no other prudent and feasible alternatives. The article also directed selectmen to ensure that the negative impacts of the restoration, such as noise, pollution, property devaluation and financial costs are mitigated.

"Everyone should have an opportunity to speak on this issue," said David Manion of 24 Lantern Lane. "Without further discussion, the full facts cannot come out."

Thomas J. Callahan, chairman of the conservation commission agreed.

"This article raises the environmental issues," he said. "The ballot question doesn't."

Most voters agreed with Ron Goodwin of 196 Pond Street that they had heard and read more than enough to make up their minds during Saturday's election. Goodwin urged voters to avoid bogging down debating the railroad and move forward on the remaining 39 warrant articles.

Voters also indefinitely postponed an article authorizing the town to purchase an $8,500 hydraulic sand spreader for the highway department. The article proposed defraying some of the cost by trading in a 1982 sand spreader.

Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield had also hoped town meeting might approve spending $76,500 for road resurfacing. That article was postponed until another session of town meeting.

Tree, park and cemetery Superintendent Peter Laugelle had more luck. After suffering a defeat last year, Laugelle will get his multi-purpose lawn maintenance vehicle through a transfer from the stabilization fund.

Laugelle told town meeting the vehicle would replace a 1974 vehicle that is no longer worth repairing. The advisory committee recommended approval saying it would allow Laugelle to properly maintain town property despite a severe cutback in summer employees.

"It is definitely labor saving," advisory committee member Wayne Sawchuk said. "We need to give them the tools to take care of town land."

Laugel said the new vehicle would cost the department $13,500.

In making this and other purchases in excess of $10,000, Cohasset will have to go out to bid in most instances. The new bylaw covering purchases and expenditures is consistent with the state's uniform procurement act.

Town property proved out expenses.

If the monthly rental income for each unit were $700, then over twelve months the two units would produce a gross of $16,800. If the town spent $1,800 a year for all duplex operating and capital expenses, this would give a net return per year of $15,000 or 7.5 percent leaving out inflation.

2. Over a ten year period the town would have a cash flow as follows:

a. Total income from rents: $168,000;
b. Initial capital outlays: $20,000;
c. All other expenses: $18,000;
d. Net cash flow over two years = (a) - (b) - (c) = $130,000.

3. If a commercial operation used the same assumptions, but was seeking a 12 percent net return, then the rent for each unit would need to increase a further $375 a month.

do we want?

Do we want to remain a hard-to-reach town struggling (as you point out) with ever-escalating expenses to provide needed services and a competitive school system?

Or do we want to be an affluent town with an umbilical cord to Boston, one of the country's major financial and cultural centers?

Many people who have lived here all their lives, many retired people (such as yourself), and summer people, don't see the need for a Boston connection. In fact, they recoil from it. That's a legitimate way to feel, of course. I, too, cherish our quality of life and do not want to see it much changed — except in a positive way.

Unfortunately we do not have any significant commercial or industrial tax base to undergird our educational, recreational, police, fire, and other needs. I doubt that many residents would want to become industrial or commercial. Nor do we seem inclined to regionalize. Therefore we need to attract people who can afford to live in our highly-assessed homes and contribute to support of needed services.

During the 19 years I worked for (and commuted to) a major Boston company, many of our managers and executives were promoted from other parts of the country to Boston. Only two opted to move to the South Shore. All the rest bought homes in Newton, Lincoln, Weston, Acton, Manchester-by-the-Sea, Swampscott, and Marblehead because there is train service.

Anyone who travels knows that other prosperous, industrialized nations have good rail service. Are we saying that the U.S., with highest GNP in the world, can't afford it?

Cohasset has the most expensive real estate on the South Shore with garages full of BMW's, Mercedes, and Jaguars, and a harbor full of yachts — and a waiting list. Your $300,000 figure is just about the price of one average house in Cohasset. I find it hard to believe we couldn't manage investment in the Greenbush line if people were persuaded of its importance and long-term benefit.

Should Cohasset choose to invest in restoring the Greenbush line I believe we would be more likely to find buyers for the many homes for sale, more able to afford a competitive school system, superior sports facilities, full library and other services — more likely to have successful shops and boutiques and good restaurants and jobs available here.

I know whereof I speak, having grown up in a country-like suburb connected by commuter rail to a metropolis 24 miles away. We did not have any significant commercial or industrial tax base either, but we had a famous and enviable school system with many offerings, top sports facilities, and a superb quality of life. We didn't have empty stores, rampant For Sale and For Lease signs. In fact — from the real estate point of view, it was a lot like Cohasset was when Cohasset had the Greenbush line. Houses changed hands without even being advertised for sale.

As one of seven hundred citizens who signed the petition for simple wording on the railroad ballot question, I am really disappointed that you are taking such a short-sighted view and hope you will reconsider.

Cohasset: All Aboard!

The South Shore has been mired in controversy over the restoration of the Greenbush Railroad for over a decade. It's time to make a decision, Cohasset.

A vote for Greenbush means a cleaner environment. Less reliance on fossil fuels and foreign oil. A typical eight car train will be able to move approximately 2900 people to Boston on 90 gallons of fuel* – now that's pretty fair economy mileage. It will insure a more productive life, and a better quality of life for the thousands who commute to Boston daily, and a reduction of traffic through Cohasset on Route 3A.

Five thousand (5000) construction jobs will be created when the Greenbush and the Old Colony lines are built at a time when these jobs are desperately needed.

There are so many good reasons why – none better than its time has come.

Please give Greenbush your vote!

. . . as a hot challenge is met

Chasen, 35, of Weymouth who finished second in 34 minutes flat.

Vona, who ran track at Boston University where he graduated in 1984, now manages a Nike store in Wellesley.

Vona seemed pleased with his performance. "You can't expect a fast time when it's hot, you run to win, I guess," he said.

Breaking away from the front pack of runners, Vona made his move near the first mile mark. He pulled away there and ran the entire race by himself. At the three mile mark, Vona's stride was steady and Chasen trailed him by some 125 yards.

Vona plans to return to Cohasset's annual race next year. "This was great. I will be back," he said.

Robert Chasen, a local sports medicine doctor, ran his own race and didn't worry about the leader, Dave Vona. In fact, due to the hot weather, Chasen didn't concern himself with his time either. "I didn't even wear a watch today," he said.

Guy Wallace of Brookline gets a hand before the race.

For Chasen, it marked his 11th straight running of the Cohasset race. In fact he has always managed to place in the top five. Two years ago, Chasen won the race in a tie with a close friend.

As far as training for this race went, Chasen said it had been interrupted by the birth of his first child. Equally sharing the child caring duties has kept him from training more. In fact, Chasen complained of picking up more colds and sickness this winter since the baby brought things home from daycare.

But as for Sunday's heat, Chasen said, "I use my experience on a hot day. I just went out and did the best job I could. I try to take a healthy attitude about it."

The women's winner of the race was a 24-year-old school teacher from Harwichport. Lori Johnson finished 37th overall with a time of 40:07.

Johnson, a Braintree native, took her running talents to the University of Georgia where she graduated in 1988. She earned a Master's Degree from Simmons College in Boston and is currently teaching 6th grade in Harwichport.

Johnson said she isn't able to train like she wants to because she's working a full-time job. However, she is looking forward to the summer when she will train in Bermuda.

Johnson also won the women's division title last year. "The course is very challenging. Very hilly with winding roads. It's a super course. It's just tough," she said.

Despite winning the women's division, Johnson experienced some dehydration. Johnson confessed to doing something stupid. "I drank a cup of coffee before the race...I'll never do that again," she said. Johnson said it was a long drive up from the Cape and she wanted to stay awake driving.

Johnson ran the race with no other women runners in sight. The second place woman was Patricia Degnan, 30, of Melrose.

Johnson said, "I just went out fast. Got in my position and stayed there."

Jim Boyce, 34, was the first Cohasset person to finish the race. He was awarded the Nate Hurwitz Trophy which is given by the Community Center. Rep. Jeanette Murray made the trophy presentation that afternoon.

Boyce, who also won the distinction of being the first Cohasset resident to cross the finish line last year, completed the 6.2 mile course in 37:37 which was 15th overall.

Boyce, a Braintree native said, "Cohasset is the prettiest place to run in the world. I've run all over the world."

Boyce claims to have run his rear end off in the heat. His motto is to run and have fun. However, Boyce doesn't put in a lot of road miles. He works out in many ways such as lifting weights. He probably runs 25 miles a week. "In the last two weeks I've run 30 miles a week but that's a lot for me. I'd rather do a lot of different things," he said.

The top five finishers of the race were: 1) Vona, 32:14; 2) Chasen, 34:00; 3) Thomas Cotter of Medford, 34:27; 4) Christopher Spinney of Lynn, 34:54; 5) Michael Kelleher of Weymouth, 35:26.

The top five female finishers were: 1) Lori Johnson of Harwichport, 40:07; 2) Patricia Degnan of Melrose, 41:29; 3) Lori Tobin of Belmont, 42:10; 4) Sheila Kearney of Quincy, 42:19; 5) Pam Marshall of Boston, 43:11.

Joe Catalano, 41, of East Walpole won the Masters in the men's division with a time of 34:50. The top five Masters winners were: 1) Catalano; 2) Bob Delaney of Abington; 3) Brad Powers of Hanover; 4) Len Bicknell of Marshfield; 5) Tom Powers of Arlington.

Janet McViney, 40, of Hingham captured the Masters division for the women with a winning time of 45:31. Leading ladies in the Masters division were: 1) McViney, 2) Kathy Larson of Milton, 3) Andrea Hatch of Hull, 4) Diane McLaughlin of Somerville.

Winners in the over 50 division for the women were: 1) Carol Renaud of Scituate; 2) Rae Hynes of Scituate; 3) Heather Muir of Weymouth.

Tom Wright, 54, of Cohasset placed third in the age 50-59 men's division. George Delaney, 55, of Scituate was fifth in that category.

The top five finishers for the males ages 14-17 were: 1) John O'Leary of Cohasset; 2) Michael Dunphy of Scituate; 3) Dan White of Cohasset; 4) Jim Magner of Cohasset; 5) Ken Duncan of Quincy.

The best male performers in the 10-14 age group were: 1) Ryan Freeman; 2) Gary Moore of Cohasset; 3) Sean Coyle of Hyde Park; 4) Jeffrey Lang of East Weymouth; 5) Scott Blackburn of Scituate.

Girls' track desmonstrates improvement - despite loss

By Donna Cogliano
Mariner correspondent

In the opening meet of the season, the Cohasset girls' track team demonstrated remarkable improvement since last year. Though the girls lost to East Bridgewater 70-66 on Monday, the meet came down to the final event. The meet was decided by the final relay.

Cohasset coach Ron Emmons was delighted with the opener since Cohasset had suffered a 50-point loss to East Bridgewater last season. This year's showing represents a more competitive team.

Senior co-captain Alyson James won four events Monday and qualified for the State's. She set a school record of 34-8 in the triple jump which surpassed her own previous record.

Two junior high records were set by Cohasset seventh graders that day. Faye Menis posted a record setting 55.5 in the low hurdles which was good enough for second place overall.

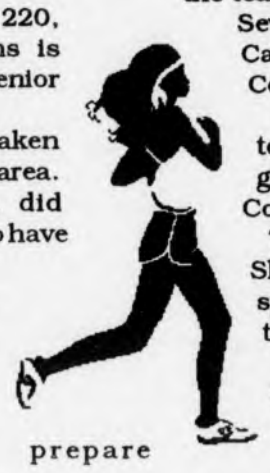
Benita Johnson triple jumped to 28-6 for a junior high record as well. "That's a pretty good jump for a seventh grader," Emmons remarked.

Allison Doherty made a special contribution placing in three events for the Skippers. Her discus throw of 76-10 was good enough for second place. She triple jumped to third place at 28-8 and was third in the low hurdles at 56.9.

"She was a big help yesterday (Monday). And she's one of those kids who doesn't get noticed," said Emmons.

Last year Cohasset finished the season tied for second place in the South Shore League's small school division.

Cohasset is represented with its largest team this year of 48 girls. The team will be led by Alyson James, who placed third in the state finals last year. She is primarily and sprinter and a hurdler. "She can do just about anything," said Emmons.



James holds the school record in the 220, high hurdles and triple jump. Emmons is predicting more school records for the senior talent before she graduates.

Doherty, the senior triple jumper, has taken on a project of refurbishing the triple jump area.

Senior Jen Goodman, a half-miler, did extremely well as a junior and is expected to have even more success in her senior year.

Junior Lisa Coates is primarily a half-mile runner but also shows promise in the triple jump event.

Stephanie Eno will run the quarter mile having trained heavily with weightlifting. "She's done more work to prepare than anyone on the team," said Emmons.

Eno will be running the quarter mile with her good friend Jen Reidy, another junior. Reidy, a co-captain, is described as very hardworking.

Returning sophomore Maria Kierce is expected to reach 5 feet in the high jump this year. Last year she qualified for State's.

Sophomore Claudine Johnson is a sprinter and discus thrower. "She's incredibly strong, probably the strongest person on the team. She'll do well in shotput and javelin," said Emmons.

Freshman Meghan Staunton, a miler, won a number of races last year as an eighth grader. She is expected to help Cohasset again this year.

Eighth graders Kate Carroll and Erin Murphy will compete as distance runners for Cohasset. They helped the team last year as 7th graders.

Seventh grader Faye Menis, a transfer from California, looks sure to score some points for Cohasset. She can do the hurdles and triple jump.

Katie Ross and Caroline deLima look to help the team with high jumping. Martina Snyder, an 8th grader, should pick up some points this year of Cohasset as a sprinter.

Three sophomores who look promising for the Skippers are: shotputter Christina DeVaughan, sprinter Kate Murray and sprinter and discus thrower Crystal Plummer.

Asha Williams should come into her own as a sprinter along with fellow sophomore Colleen Fitzsimmons.

Cohasset has 14 seventh graders out for the team along with 12 eighth graders. "We're very strong in junior high. Some of these kids will get six years of track," said Emmons.

Training for track in Cohasset takes a special commitment because of the conditions the girls have to train under. Cohasset has a dirt track as compared to most other schools that have tracks with hard tops. Because of the poor facility, Cohasset has no home meets.

Instead Cohasset girls do much of their running in the mud. "these girls show an awful lot of dedication. They're also very supportive of each other. It's helping one another," said Emmons.

Interior LifeStyles. DECORATING

Lifestyle Decorating

Decorating fashionably no longer means sticking to one particular style in a pure sense. The trend today is toward "Lifestyle Decorating," where different styles are combined to suit the way you live.

If your lifestyle is casual, your decorating style is relaxed and informal. You like Early American and country French furniture styles and enjoy playful contemporary accents like bean bags and plastics; you prefer cafe curtains and mini-blinds and choose open weaves and florals for draperies; grasscloth and burlap wallcoverings appeal to you as do shag rugs, corduroy and tweed fabrics. You are too spontaneous to plan elaborate decorating schemes–your home is comfortable and cozy.

Traditional lifestyles reflect Main Street America and your decorating emphasizes conservative, relaxed formality. Your favorites include skirted, upholstered pieces in damask or polished cotton; antique satin or chintz draperies; floral or striped wallcoverings or smooth, lineny textures; plush, velvety floorcoverings; tie-back draperies with sheers and quilted valances. You are practical and look for quality. You are apt to have a wall filled with family photos and treasured mementoes.

Is your life orderly, stately, classic or tailored? You have a formal lifestyle. You are drawn to period pieces by Chippendale and Hepplewhite as well as fine Art Deco and Oriental styles. Your upholstery and draperies are silk, satin and moire and the few prints are controlled and regimented. You pick swags with easy cascades, mini-blinds and Lambrequins for undraperied windows. You enjoy the finer things in life and would prefer to attend a dinner dance than a backyard barbecue.

A luxurious lifestyle is opulent, ornate and flamboyant. You fancy rococo and baroque styles as well as Morrish, Georgian and contemporary. You adore lace or brocade draperies and cover your walls with mirrors, carved paneling and fretwork. Crushed velvet and leather upholstery is complemented by ornate area rugs. Your window treatments are full with fringe, tassels, Austrian sheers, lots of trim. You've made it and you want the world to know.

No matter what your lifestyle is, the important thing is your home should be a reflection of your tastes and be comfortable to YOU.

Message from the COA

The Senior Center, operated by the Council on Aging, has many programs available to the 1,500 seniors — over 60 years in age — in Cohasset. A half of these seniors use one or more of our programs or activities. As the senior population grows in Cohasset and in the nation, the council hopes that more and more seniors will participate in our programs. We encourage support by them and their families of town and state budgets on which the Senior Center relies so much.

Our budget requests are small in comparison to most town budgets — about .50 per week for each senior. The support of Cohasset seniors through such programs as the shuttle, the congregate lunches and breakfast club, SHINE assistance on medical forms, outreach to frail and home-bound seniors plus all the social and instructional activities — all of these are benefits for our seniors and their families.

Through the Senior Center programs, the Council on Aging hopes to add to the quality of life of Cohasset seniors through better health, better morale and independent living.

David Chittem

Logan observes El Salvador

Polly Logan of Cohasset, political activist, was one of ten to fly to El Salvador Sunday, April 7, for a week's stay to scrutinize the mechanics of the electoral process and to improve the atmosphere in which the elections take place.

The delegation was to be briefed by U.S. Ambassador Walker, and to visit with El Salvador's civic and political leadership including the president and the archbishop. At least two days are scheduled in the countryside.

Long active in civic and community affairs, Logan was a member of Weld/Cellucci Transition team, board member of NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., officer and director New England Republican Council, immediate past Republican National Committee woman, trustee Old Sturbridge Village, Massachusetts Women's Political Caucus, member Diplomatic Series World Affairs Council, board member Ford Hall Forum, New England Farm and Garden Association, former member Harvard College Board of Overseers' Committee and Museum of Fine Arts, executive vice president Doric Dames, volunteer guide service at State House, founder Ladies Committee USS Constitution.

Freedom House has had a close relationship with Salvadoran democrats of all persuasions since it began its involvement in the country in the early 1980s. Freedom House supported President José Napoleon Duarte when he first took office under the reform junta in 1980, and Freedom House joined in sending a 15 member delegation to observe the first free election to the Constituent Assembly in 1982. (The delegation was led by former U.S. Ambassador and current Freedom House Board member Angier Biddle Duke.)

Freedom House organized an eight day trip to El Salvador (as well as other Central American countries) in 1987 for a delegation of New York civic leaders, led by then-Mayor Edward Koch, and a bipartisan Congressional delegation led by Representatives Dave McCurdy and Olympia Snowe in 1989.

scouting news

When you become a Boy Scout you are entering a world full of adventures. The Scouts of Troop 28 of Cohasset have been doing exactly that.

One Saturday afternoon, they spent at Tom Judge's house learning how to handle a bow and arrow properly, thanks to Tom Judge and Jerry Preston.

The boys found out "it's harder than you think."

Saturday was spent venturing into Boston via MBTA and attending a Bruins game.

Along the way from Park Street station to Boston Garden, the boys were challenged to sharpen their observation and awareness skills by answering questions such as: what color is the Chinese man on the Boston Gas tank, what is his name, what color and shape is the top of the State House. What insect is on top of Quincy Market, and so on.

Most points were made by Lodouico Sestito as first place winner. Jerry Cogill was second place winner followed by Scott Van Hartsvelt in third place.

Some future scheduled troop activities include: canoeing, rock climbing and island camping. Any boys interested in participating are welcome to attend one of the meetings.

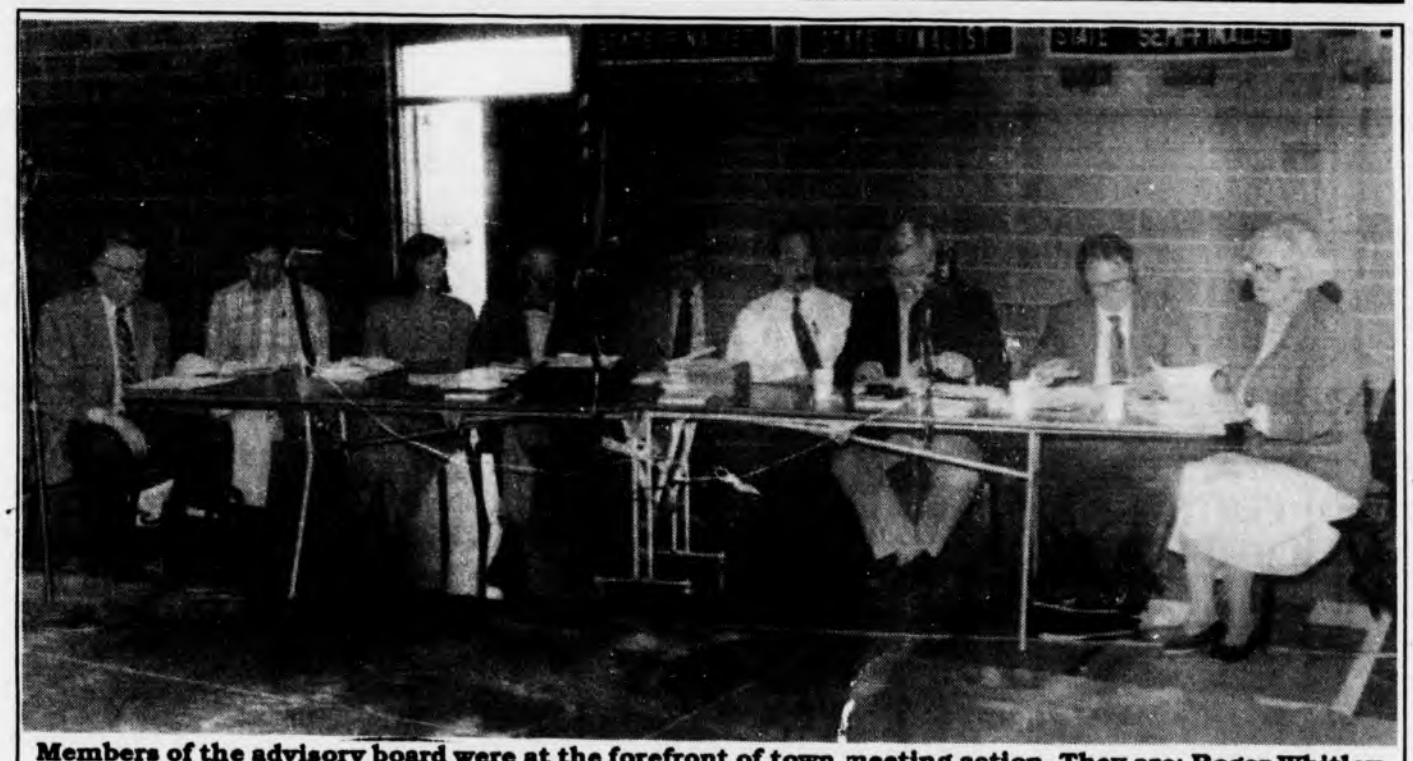
The Scouts meet Monday night, at the Joseph Osgood School, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Howie Motenko, Scoutmaster, may be reached at 545-0127 for further information.

Martial arts program

On April 20 at 12:30 p.m., the Cohasset Community Center will host a very special Tai Chi Demonstration given by an illustrious scholar of Chinese Drama, Culture, Martial Arts and the Dance.

Zhang Jie is a Chinese scholar who will be coming here to talk at the Community Center and demonstrate this ancient art. Jie's academic background is extensive.

He is an Associate Research Fellow of the Chinese Traditional Theatre Research Institute under the Academy of Arts of China. He is a member of the Chinese Dramatists' Association, the fifth generation of "BAA GUA ZAN," a special invited journalist of "Chinese Wu Shu" — Chinese drama. Jie's accomplishments include a degree in Chinese Language and Literature from Beijing University.



His literary achievements have been as a writer for Chinese martial arts. He is also an accomplished calligrapher. He is presently researching in the fields of I Ching and Chinese Physical Culture (Drama Performance), Folk Dance, Martial Arts, Chi Gong, Chinese Acupressure and Oriental Drama.

Please call the Center at 383-0088 for further information.

TM accepts scholarship for HS

Town meeting also accepted the gift of a scholarship for high school seniors established in honor of former Osgood School Principal John Creamer. Creamer, who retired last year, asked the community to do something in lieu of a retirement party. The scholarship is the response.

"We are very grateful for it," Selectman Diana Kornet said. "We would like to encourage others to send donations for the scholarship in care of Town Treasurer Elizabeth Ripley."

Westwood loses by forfeit to Tigers

The Cohasset Hockey Tigers, a team consisting of 7th through 11th graders defeated Westwood by forfeit at the Pilgrim Arena on Sunday, April 7.

The Tigers playing perhaps their most unmemorable game of the season could do nothing right. Tiger forwards failed to challenge or contain Westwood anywhere on the ice and Westwood forwards skated circles around the Tiger players. Tiger defensemen played flat footed. They appeared frozen and slow in pursuing the puck, relinquishing their zone to the Westwood onslaught.

Yet curiously enough this Tiger team did defeat Westwood.

Last week, the Tiger's red hot goalie, Jeff Stone could do no wrong. Against Westwood, he could do no right. Where had Leo's team gone since their 8 to 5 win over Quincy last week? Entering the contest against Westwood, the Tiger's record was 2-1-1. Tiger mental mistakes occurred throughout the game.

Westwood got a quick goal, then a second, a third, a fourth and a fifth. The impatient Tiger defensemen were caught and beaten numerous times while the desperate Tiger forwards failed to generate any sustained attack. Tiger Center, Mike Reynolds then skated into Westwood's left face off-circle and let the puck fly. By midgame the score was Westwood 5, Cohasset 1.

By this time, Cohasset's four offensive lines had taken several shifts each. Reynold's goal sparked Cohasset's bench. Matt Kramers tried to setup Charlie Smith from the right corner. Smith's shot was turned away. Pat Reynolds broke in alone but failed to get his shot off. John Murphy scrambled down the left boards and fired, but neither Matt Graves nor John Kinchla arrived in time to drive home Murphy's rebound. Charlie Shield's slap shot from the point was way wide. Bruising defenseman, Tim Conroy, could get nothing on the puck. Rushing defenseman, Co-Captain Kevin Mulcahy's game never materialized.

The Pilgrim Arena's Developmental Hockey Program discourages overaggressive team play. A loss results when a team accumulates a total of eight penalties in a game. An individual player that accumulates a total of three penalties in a single game is ejected from that game. And any player involved in fighting is ejected from the league for the duration of the season. Both teams were frequently updated as to their penalty statistics.

Cohasset became the recipient of a win, when a Westwood player boarded and butt ended Tiger center and Co-captain, Mike Reynolds, with twenty minutes left in the game for Westwood penalty number 8. While a second Westwood player had previously fouled only seconds before Cohasset's promising 7th grade winger, Chris McKenna after the whistle but this penalty was not called.

At this point, the umpires retired from the ice and after some discussion the game was recorded as a Cohasset win. Cohasset's record now stands at 3-1-1.

The Tigers next play Whitman-Hanson on Sunday, April 14 at 5 p.m.

The Team then plays the "Old Boys" on Monday, April 15 at 5:20 p.m.

The "Old Boys" are a good natured bunch of adults that give the Tigers an occasional game at their expense. All "Old Boys" interested in playing in the April 15 and/or the May 23 game should call John Kinchla at 383-6851.

Calling all "old boys"

The Cohasset Hockey Tigers need players for another "Old Boys" game. The game will be held on Patriot's Day, Monday, April 15 at the Pilgrim Arena at 5:20 p.m.

All "Old Boys" must come attired in full hockey equipment ready to do battle. The charge will be $10 per "Old Boy."

All "Old Boys" interested in playing against the Tigers should call John Kinchla at 383-6851.

Spectators are always welcome at all Tiger games. There is no admission charge.

Our New Emergency Center Opens May 1. Then We Can All Breathe A Little Easier.

The newest Emergency Center in Massachusetts is about to open. And when it does, it's sure to take your breath away. First of all, the entrance is now on Fogg Rd. And to make life even easier, there are separate entrances for walk-in and ambulance patients. There's even a special play space for children.

For convenient treatment of non life-threatening illnesses or injuries, we've created a special Urgent Care area. And even though you'll probably spend less time there, now the waiting area is far more comfortable and comforting.

Our new Emergency Center has many special features. Thirty-two treatment areas, a trauma room for seriously injured accident victims, a special resuscitation room for patients with heart problems, central monitoring of patient vital signs, and an eye treatment room are all a part of the new facility. There's even an emergency radiology suite.

But without a qualified medical staff, what good is it? Here, all the doctors are experienced emergency medicine specialists. And there are forty nurses to further ensure you receive quality care and personal attention.

Combine this highly qualified medical team with the latest in emergency technology and you have an emergency and trauma center that truly is state-of-the-art. Judge for yourself. Come to our Community Open House on April 27 and 28. Because when it comes to emergency medicine, our center really is a breath of fresh air.

Voters support most incumbents

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Voters opted to keep the status quo. In fact, the big upset in Saturday's election was on the trustees of the Paul Pratt Library.

In a "vote for three" ballot, challenger George E. Haley defeated one of the incumbents, Katharine H. Sturtevant.

That race and the battle for the water commission post were close — so close that election officials decided to run the ballots through the counting machines twice before releasing any results.

Selectman Chairman Rocco Laugelle was returned to office for a fifth term. He polled 1,303 votes to 705 for Richard Barrow.

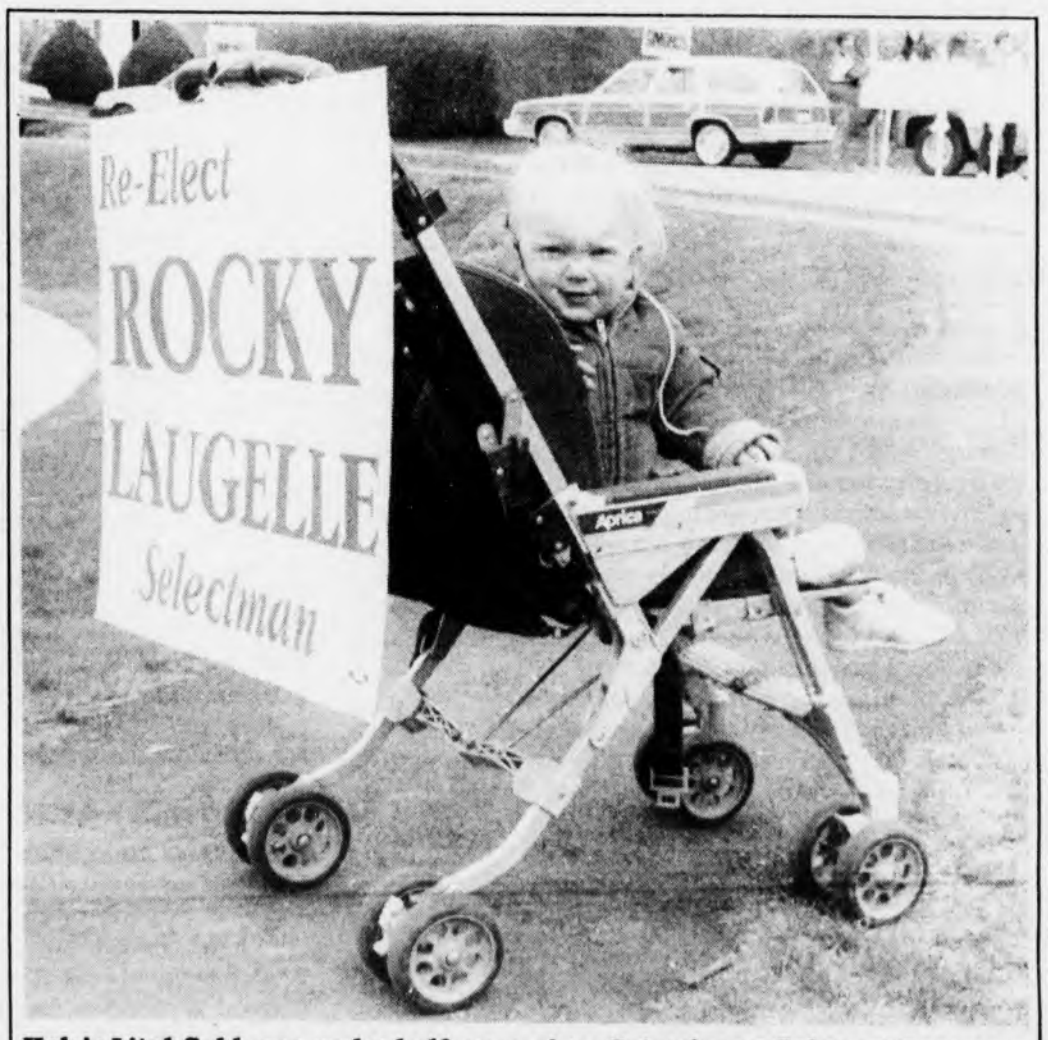
Laugelle said he plans to thank the voters for his return to office.

"I appreciate it," Laugelle said after the count was announced by Town Moderator William D. Weeks.

The top vote-getter on the ballot was unopposed health board member Michael Sullivan, who took 1,549 votes.

The results of the railroad referendum questions gave some ammunition for both sides in the controversy.

The voters overwhelming backed the restoration of the Greenbush line (1,324 to 758). But on the next question, they were almost as emphatic that they did not want to see it translated as a cost to the town.



Three other towns have already voted on the Greenbush question. Cohasset was the first to ask whether voters wanted the line if it were to impact local taxes.

The three towns that have voted in favor of the restoration are Norwell, Braintree and Scituate.

The complete election story was brought to the townspeople live by Wigmore Pierson on Cable Channel 3 Saturday evening. Final results were ready shortly after 8 p.m.

About 45 percent of the town's 4,784 registered voters turned out for the April 13 election. There were 2,157 votes cast, according to Domenic Baccari, election warden.

Charlie Butman remembers the Town Pump

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

If Charles Butman Jr. wants to get a fix on what the original town pump looks like, he doesn't have to visit the historical society. All he has to do is wait for his Dad to wander into the barn workshop. At 94, Charlie Butman Sr. remembers the original town pump well.

After all, Butman's family traces its history on Spring Street back to 1735.

And thanks to Butman and the 40-odd members of the town pump project, Cohasset residents can look forward to pumping water from a wooden pump once more. Workmen hope to complete the project by Memorial Day.

In the beginning, Butman didn't plan on getting involved too deeply. "I said I'd draw them a picture of what I'd do," he recollected as he worked in his Spring Street workshop. But organizer Jackie Dormitzer got him involved hook, line and sinker. In addition to an artist's vision of what could be, the town pump project is getting his craftsman's hands creating what will be.

Butman is quick to point out that the town pump will not be an exact replica.

"They've made it too complex. It was a simple thing, just to pump water," he said. "It was made with an axe and a piece of wood. But nothing's like it was."

A new pump won't be a rough-hewn example of form following function. Butman even created a special lathe to turn the pump ever so slowly. One of his sons made the blade that shaves away the interior. Under Butman's careful hands, a gorgeously-grained piece of cypress is being hollowed out and turned out into a work of art.

Just one of the cap pieces he created is constructed of 40 pieces of wood all splined together.

Although battling cancer, Butman is never at a loss for work. It seems there are more projects in his barn and in process around town than most folks could ever hope to complete. But Butman pushed most of them aside to work on the pump project. He views it as a puzzle, a problem to be solved.

"I'm kind of intrigued with it. It's good to exercise your brains once in a while," he said.

Butman clearly loves finding solutions to problems. His favorite questions begin "Charlie, do you suppose..." He just brings Yankee ingenuity and native intelligence to the task.

"I fished most of 40 years, lobstered when I was a young fellow. When there was no fishing, I built boats," he said.

Butman got his start building wooden boats at the old Quincy shipyard. Then he figured he could make boats for himself as easily as for the shipyard owners. The first boat was supposed to be for him, but someone else made an offer he couldn't refuse.

He's been working in wood ever since.

"Wood has been my life," Butman said. The boat he built for himself, Orca, shows up on every postcard rack along the South Shore.

When he sold Orca, he kept the dory he built to go with it, Orca Too. Today the dory hangs from the rafters of his barn. Another boat he built 28 years ago, Ida Jean, showed up recently for an overhaul at his hands.

When no one wants a boat, Butman turns easily to working on landlubber projects. His most recent jobs included cabinets, an arched garden gate and a conservatory Queen Victoria would be proud of.

"I'll tackle anything," Butman said. "I just keep busy. I feel great when I'm working.

"There are some nice places around town I'd like to get a whack at," he added.

Woodworking isn't Butman's only talent. He designed Subsititute teachers need not be certified

By Donna Cogliano
Mariner correspondent

Cohasset School Supt. Stephen Hart is encouraging people from the community to help out as substitute teachers in the local schools. Substitutes are needed to fill in during times of illness or when teachers are out to attend conferences of special programs.

Applicants should have a college degree and some experience working with children. However, substitute teachers don't have to be certified, according to Hart.

"We sometimes have difficulty in locating people. They don't have to be a certified teacher," said Hart., "We'd like to have qualified people come in." Cohasset schools need substitutes at all levels from elementary to the high school. There is also a need for specialists in the areas of art music and physical education.

Substitute teachers are paid at a rate of $45 a day. After and extended time of 20 days, substitutes are paid $115 a day for long term work in Cohasset.

"It might be a little supplemental income for someone," said Hart. Single assignments pay $45 a day while long term assignments pay about $115 where the substitute takes on full responsibility.

Anyone interested in substituting should call the School Supt.'s office at 383-6111 to arrange to fill out an application.

Regina Schultz has been a substitute teacher in Cohasset off and on for three years.

After teaching in high schools for 10 years, Schultz took time off to raise a family. She has returned to work

Cohasset unemployment

In February, unemployment in Cohasset reached 8.3 percent. The state rate for February was 9.3 percent.

Nationally the rate for February was 65 percent.

According to statistics from the state Department of Employment and Training, 316 Cohasset residents were unemployed in February from a total labor force of 3,786.

The latest unemployment figures for March put the state rate at 9.7 percent,. Nationally the rate also increased in March to 6.8 percent. Figures are not yet available for Cohasset for March.

Coleman to kickoff baseball

Sports broadcaster Ken Coleman will speak at Cohasset Little League's opening day ceremony. Coleman has 33 years of experience broadcasting major league baseball. He began in Cleveland where he broadcast for the Indians for ten years. He then came to Boston where he worked for nineteen years except for a brief interruption in the mid-70's when he announced for Cincinatti's famous big red machine.

This year Coleman will do many of the Baltimore Orioles' games. Known as "The Voice of the Boston Red Sox," Coleman, when he is not in the broadcast booth, volunteers his time working for the Jimmy Fund.

The opening day ceremony will be held at Barnes Field right after the Little League Parade, Saturday, April 27. Players are to meet at the Red Lion Inn parking lot at 8:15 a.m. sharp to march up Main Street to the field.

Pesticide hits the Straits

Straits Pond was scheduled for pesticide spraying this week as part of the annual battle against the midges.

The state Department of Environmental Protection was relectuant to allow the chemical spraying but Hull officials credit state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray with making calls that changed the DEP position.

Abate, a chemical pesticide, was the chosen poison.

The pond borders Cohasset, Hingham and Hull.

More on the override

Selectmen are scheduled to discuss the various override questions during their next meeting on Monday, April 22, at 7:30 p.m. at town hall.

There is a possibility there may be one override question. It is also possible the board will break down the various override items on the ballot of the May 18 special election.

Vo-Tech budget

By Andrew MacLellan
Mariner correspondent

In a painful but anticipated revelation, South Shore Regional Vocational Technical High School Supt. Dr. Clifford W. Easton announced that the school faces a possible $168,681 operating deficit for FY '92.

Depending on the outcome of Gov. Weld's budget proposal the deficit figure could increase to as much as $264,634.

"We're trying to gear up for a worst case scenario," said Easton, after last Wednesday's regional school committee meeting.

In what he termed as the "difficult days ahead" Easton said he must look into every area, including programs and staff, for a means to reduce the already lean budget.

During the meeting the committee approved a list of 18 non-tenured and two tenured teachers who will not receive contract renewals.

Lawrence Mitchell of Cohasset was the only member opposed to the cuts.

State law mandates that schools notify all non-tenured personnel by April 15 of their non-renewal status.

"This is not to suggest that they won't all come back," said Easton in reference to what used to be more of a formality than an outright dismissal.

However, for the past two years, the school has been placing pink slips in with the notifications.

The two tenured teachers were included on the list due to the elimination of the packaging machine mechanics course.

A revamped version of the course, to be funded next year by Procter & Gamble of Quincy, is currently in contractual negotiation.

Easton vowed to share all alternatives with staff simultaneous to presentation before the school committee. He plans to have a list of reductions in hand by the May school committee meeting but will make no cuts until a firm budget figure has been nailed down.

"There is no need to make any cuts before we know whether or not the budget will pass," said secretary-treasurer Robert Kelly.

Of the eight member towns, Scituate and Cohasset have voted for the budget, and Rockland has voted against it.

A majority vote is needed for the budget to pass.

Hanover, Norwell, Abington, Whitman and Hanson have yet to vote on the matter at town meeting.

New Senate rules defeated

Senate Democrats last week rebuked Republican efforts to adopt new rules for joint committees.

Sen. Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth), voted in favor of a motion that would have instructed the Senate Rules Committee to address and correct the present rules that currently deny many Republican members of their voting rights in Committees.

The freshman Senator from Weymouth is a member of the Joint Committee on Commerce and Labor, Taxation, Public Safety and Counties.

The vote to ask senate rules to address this issue was defeated along partisan lines.

Hedlund concluded, "Citizens who are represented by Republicans have been effectively disenfranchised; the Legislature leadership owes all Massachusetts citizens an equal voice in State Government."

Remember! The town override election happens Saturday, May 18

TM accused of anti-business bias

By Andrew MacLellan
Mariner correspondent

As town meeting headed into the home stretch last Tuesday night, some local merchants were angry over what they viewed as exclusionary language in three of the warrant articles.

Daniel Leahy, manger of Kimballs-By-the-Sea, called the article on flags obtrusive, and referred to it as a thinly veiled attempt to misrepresent businesses in Cohasset.

Robert Davenport of Sohier Street, part owner of Sestito's florist shop on Route 3A, termed the Christmas tree article discriminatory, and one resident labeled that article an act of snobbery and class consciousness in favor of downtown merchants.

Alfred S. Moore Jr., chairman of the planning board, presented three zoning articles, defending their content and intentions.

The sale of "holiday trees," was approved on the recommendation of the planning board. Davenport said he believed sale of the trees, authorized by special permit, will affect his holiday business on 3A.

Voters approved the article, however, with only three dissenters.

Leahy protested the article to ban on "strings of flags or pennants, streamers, ribbons, spinners or other moving devices" in commercial zones.

The article also lifted the prohibition of Christmas lights on town store fronts.

In response to the restrictions, Leahy said, "I am concerned about prejudice towards merchants which seems to grow every year."

Moore responded tersely, "If you vote against this article there will be no Christmas lights this year."

Faced with the grim alternative, voters approved the article 71 to 30.

Several residents wanted to know why a warrant article allowed flags (not including the American or state flags) to be displayed by businesses in the downtown area but not on Route 3A.

One woman reminded selectmen and the advisory committee that Cohasset relies on Route 3A merchants for tax revenue and should not set double standard precedents.

Moore replied, "What we've done is to start somewhere. If it works, there is nothing that says we can't expand it [the by law]."

The article passed in an 80 to 20 hand-count vote.

Voters deferred a decision to borrow from the Massachusetts Water Pollution Abatement Trust until town meeting adjournment May 29.

The town needs roughly $2 million to pay its increased share of the cost for the design and development of a new waste water disposal system.

Residents also postponed article 58, which calls for the replacement of culverts at Doane and Beechwood streets, pending issue of a state bond.

Voters indefinitely postponed article 59; essentially denying a request made by fire chief Daniel F. Brock for a new ambulance.

The only article voted down was the acceptance of a parcel of land donated by Abigail Silk Wales. The advisory committee could find no real use for the property, which is landlocked on the west side of Atlantic Avenue. They determined that the town could not afford to lose the tax revenue generated by the property.

Although selectmen recommended acceptance of the donation, voters unanimously opposed it.

Substitute teachers need not be certified as a substitute while her three children are attending Cohasset High School.

Schultz said, "I happen to love kids. I only substitute in high school because I really love the teenage group. I have a lot of respect for them because I know it's a tough time of life."

Schultz hopes to return to teaching high school students fulltime someday but not right now. "For me it's an interim step. I'm not ready to go back fulltime right now. I really feel my family needs me. I'm not ready to make that commitment," she said.

When the telephone rings in the morning, Regina said she never knows what hat she'll be wearing that day. Substituting can bring you back in touch with things that you've experienced such as Spanish or French.

There is tremendous support at the high school from the faculty, according to Schultz. The department chairman meets with you when you arrive and makes sure that the lesson plans and materials are in order.

For Schultz the biggest attraction to substitute teaching has been its flexibility.

Fulltime teaching involves many afterschool activities and meetings. "If I were going to be fulltime, I'd have to be very dedicated," said Schultz who enjoys the subject matter without the longterm commitment.

Last week, Ruth Nedrow was interviewed briefly at the Deer Hill School where she was substituting. Nedrow, who lives across the street from the school, has been substituting for 10 years in the Cohasset schools. "I like the children. For me it's a wonderful job. I practically know all the children in the school. You'll never get rich and you never know until the morning you are called. You sort of plan around it," said Nedrow.

The main thing is knowing the kids and knowing the schedule of the day, Nedrow explained. It can be hard when they try and take advantage of you. "The children are really very nice and very good," said Nedrow.

Many of the subjects Nedrow instruct in at the elementary level are: reading, math, social studies, map skills, spelling, science, health, handwriting, and current events. She teaches an average of two to three days a week.

During a visit to the Deer Hill School last week the students were celebrating Earth Day and were flying color kites at the rear of the school.

Deer Hill School Principal Ken Eckberg said, "It's very important that the people we use as substitutes are good and they're qualified. They need an acute understanding of adolescent children and can relate well with them."

Hart is looking for a group of substitutes to choose from. There would be no guarantee of regular days of work. "It's very sporadic. It can be less than regular," he said.

It could also be beneficial for a perspective teacher to show a school system what kind of talent and skills they possess.

Voters support the status quo

There were 216 absentee ballots cast.

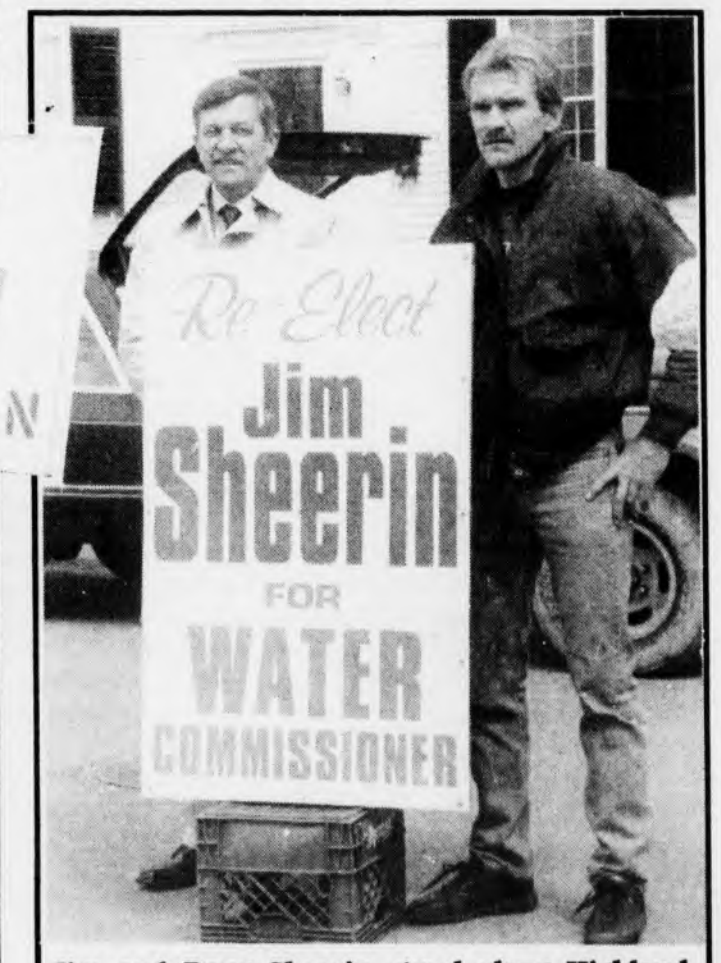
"It was a good turnout," Baccari said as the results were analyzed by local political observers.

Jean Simonds, whose campaign was handled by Polly Locan and Richard Silvia, won an open seat on the planning board. Simonds will be the only woman on the board, a fact she highlighted in part of her campaign. She defeated Terry Atherton by 1,064 to 963 votes.

James R. Sheerin, incumbent water commissioner, was re-elected by a narrow margin over Benjamin Curley, former water superintendent. The vote in that race was 995 to 968.

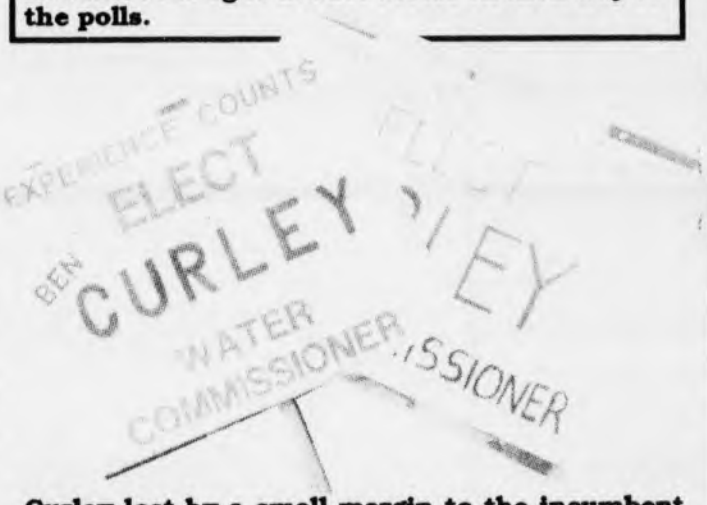
Ryan Barrow, 21-months, works for a relative.

Immediately after the election Curley did not want to comment on the possibility of a recount but several days later he sent a letter to the Mariner thanking the voters.



"It's hard to defeat an incumbent," Curley said after the results were announced showing he lost the seat by 27 votes.

"It was a good close fight," he said, surrounded by family and freinds who sat through the vigil at town hall awaiting the results.



Thomas Wigmore, a lifelong resident of Cohasset, won an open seat on the recreation commission defeating Ely J. Kahn III by 1,084 to 788. Wigmore won a wide margin in his home precinct — precinct 2 — where his vote was 618 and Kahn's was 339.

In the library race two incumbents were returned to office. The vote in that four-way race for the three seats put the challenger Haley ahead of all the incumbents. He polled 1,202 votes. Elizabath Eaton took 1,169 votes, Agnes McCann took 1,087 votes and Sturtevant took 1,079 votes.

In the rest of the ballot incumbents ran without challenge. The unooposed winners are Michael Patriola, assessor; Barbara Bliss and J. Russell Reidy, school committee members; Raimund G. Vanderweil Jr., sewer commissioner, Sullivan on the health board, and John D. Muncey, housing authority.

Jim and Doug Sheerin stand along Highland Avenue, waiting to attract voters on their way to the polls.

Curley lost by a small margin to the incumbent James Sheerin.

Test scores blamed on other system

By Andrew MacLellan
Mariner correspondent

A disgruntled regional school committee, meeting at the South Shore Regional Vocational Technical High School last week, refused to accept the blame for its students' below average basic skills test scores.

Supt. Dr. Clifford W. Easton dismissed the results as meaningless because the test is administered to freshmen at the regional high school only four weeks after their arrival.

"We don't own those freshmen," Easton said, "They have been taught in other schools for eight or nine years.

"All it shows is that we have our work cut out for us - it is no reflection on the South Shore staff."

The test, which is given to third, sixth and ninth graders to identify learning disabilities, focuses on reading, writing, and mathematics skills.

Vo-Tech ninth-graders scored 73 percent on the reading, 78 percent on the writing and 84 percent on the mathematics portions of the test.

The state average is 86, 88 and 87 percent respectively.

Easton plans to initiate his own testing program, using a nationally recognized format to demonstrate his students' aptitude.

The basic skills test measures the percentage of students who receive a passing grade of 65 or higher, but does not record how many students may have slipped in under the wire.

Easton remarked, "It's not unusual to have lower scores among freshmen.

"Many of them come here because they don't like school and see Vo-Tech as an alternative.

"But once they get here they discover that there is more homework and more discipline, and the majority turn around.

"I believe that in four years we can bring any student up at least four grade levels and the tests will prove it."

around town

❑ Congratulations go to Maura and John Dunn on the birth of their baby daughter, Brittany Katherine Dunn. Brittany was born on April 3, and is now very happily residing in our fair town. Grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Terrance Dunn of Harwich and Dedham, and Katherine and Martin Hanley of Weymouth, couldn't be happier. Here's to all of you, enjoy that baby.

❑ Marie Higgins would personally like to thank Bill Higgins, Wayne Sawchuck, Paul Barry, Glenn Pratt and Donald Stasko for their generosity in helping someone that was in need.

❑ Had a nice chat with Scott Ketchum last week, and he sure had some exciting news...he is starring in an old English opera, "Dido and Aeneas", by Henry Purcell. There will be two concerts, the first at the First Parish Church in Norwell on Sunday, April 21 at 3:30, the second to be held at the Hingham Congregational Church on Saturday evening, April 27, at 8. Jeanne Scammell, whom many of you know as the soloist at the First Parish Church, will play the role of Dido, and Scott, who is a soloist at St. Anthony's Church, will be playing Aeneas. Be sure to mark the dates on your calendar, you may even want to see it twice.

❑ Mary Edmonds is off again, this time she is spending time in England with her daughter Joan Lawrence. That family sure know how to have a wonderful time wherever they go, so watch out England. Hope you have a grand time ladies, be sure to let us know all about it upon your return.

❑ Two Cohasset girls make the news this week, Lara Martin and Kate Delima. They were in the Massachusetts Forensic League State Championships last week, and Lara placed first in Children's Literature and Kate placed first in Play Reading. Lara is a freshman at Milton Academy and Kate is a sophomore at Milton Academy. Great going gals.

❑ Cohasset's First Annual 10 Kilometer race walk on May 7th proved a red-letter day for native son 81-year-old Ellery Clark. He walked the course in 75 minutes, which eclipsed the national men's standard for 81 year olds by 3 minutes, 28 seconds. Subject to verification by Peter Logan and the Rotary Club, The Athletic Congress may select Clark as a member of their 1991 All-American Race Walk Team. The standard of TAC excellence for male 81 year olds is any time better than or equal to 78 minutes 28 seconds. Clark's record is a delight to his family, in his winning the over 50 title, to give him a lifetime track record of 49 firsts, 18 2nds, 38 3rds for a winning percentage of .597.

Mrs. Philip C. Shockman, left, and Mrs. Goodwin T. Schramm of the Cohasset Garden Club attend a meeting at the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston to plan for the annual spring celebration "Art in Bloom," which features floral arrangements by seventy Massachusetts and Rhode Island garden clubs paired with the art that inspired them. This year's festival will take place at the Museum April 30 to May 2. There will be guided tours, lectures, floral-arranging demonstrations and an Opening Night Gala on April 29. For information and reservations, call 267-9300 Ext. 395.

❑ Two Norwich University students assisted in saving the life of a 31-year-old Kingston, New York man who was involved in a head-on collision on Interstate 87 on March 3, and one of those assistants was none other than Cohasset's own Greg Nourie. Greg was returning to school after attending a hotel convention at Cornell University when they encountered the accident. Greg aided in getting the man out of the car, then used some of the first aid skills they learned during their semester at Norwich. It was a horrible accident that they witnessed, and the fact that they remained calm is awesome. Greg, we sure commend you and your quick-thinking and calm manner. You are a true hero.

❑ Happy Birthday greetings to Katie Campbell.

❑ Congratulations to Robin L. DeVito, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen DeVito who made the first semester honor roll at Thayer Academy Upper School and to Stephen R. Izzo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Izzo who made High Honors for the first semester at Thayer Academy Upper School.

❑ On the subject of good grades, Amy Lincoln is to be applauded for her efforts at Russell Sage College. Amy, who is majoring in Sociology, made the dean's list.

❑ Todd Henry makes the news this week, he is playing baseball again this year for Washington and Jefferson College in Washington, PA. Todd, a junior, will start at first base. Last year Todd earned All-Conference First Team honors as a designated hitter and led the PAC in RBIs (35) and home runs (6) while hitting .325.

❑ John D. Manning, a senior at Portsmouth Abbey School, has been selected to receive a Scholars Award at Washington and Jefferson College. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Manning, 231 South Main Street. The Scholars Award is presented on the basis of academic merit. To qualify, a student must rank in the top 20 percent of his or her high school class at the end of the junior year and score 1000 or higher on the SAT or attain an American College Test composite of 23 or better. Good work, John.

❑ That's the news for this week, please let me know what's happening at your house.

English opera presented

The Unicorn Singers, under the direction of Margo Euler, will present the well-loved early English opera "Dido and Aeneas" by Henry Purcell at two spring performances this month.

The concerts will take place at First Parish in Norwell on Sunday afternoon April 21 at 3:30 p.m. and at the Hingham Congregational Church (378 Main Street in Hingham Center) on Saturday evening, April 27 at 8 p.m.

Featured in the leading role of Dido, the ill-fated Queen of Carthage, will be soprano Jeanne Scammell of Norwell. Jeanne is the soprano soloist at First Parish in Cohasset and a cantor at St. Helen's Church in Norwell.

Other principal roles in "Dido and Aeneas" will be sung by Dawn MacGarvey of Duxbury, Diane Whiting of Scituate, and Scott Ketcham of Cohasset.

Tickets are $8 and $6 and are available at Noble's Camera Shop in Hingham Square, at the door prior to concert time, or by calling 749-0162 or 659-7919.

obituary

Earl Chamberlain

A memorial service was held on April 17 at St. Stephen's Church for Earl Chamberlain, 84, of Duxbury, who died Saturday at Jordan Hospital in Plymouth of complications from surgery.

Mr. Chamberlain had played the 51-bell carillon at St. Stephen's Church for 47 years until his retirement in 1985.

He was the church music director and organist for 34 years.

For seven years he was the supervisor of music for the Cohasset Public Schools where he founded the high school marching band.

A native of Chicago, Mr. Chamberlain graduated from Brookline High School, attended Boston University, and was a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music. He studied advanced organ composition at the university of Michigan and was a Felloe of the Trinity College of Music in London.

Thanks to our wise advisors

Town Meeting concluded most of its business last week. It left some few items to be concluded by an adjourned session after the override election.

The action of the town meeting showed a great deal of trust in town government, as the voters approved budgets well in excess of the limits allowed under Proposition 2 1/2.

Now it will be up to those who turn out for the special override election on May 18 to decide the final fate of the town's budget.

We understand and agree with the arguments for all the extra spending — from the money for the outreach worker for the council on aging to the maintenance work planned for the schools.

We doubt everyone in town can afford to pay their current tax bill — never mind, a higher bill. But that's something each individual needs to look at.

We believe the funds included in the override request are what the town needs to run town services at about the same level as in the past year. We haven't had anyone call or write with stories of extravagance. In fact the only service that anyone ever seems to question is the town ambulance.

We want to take the space right now to send our own note of thanks for a job done to the town's advisory board.

These people worked long hours, delving into numbers beyond what most of us would care to know. Many of the members of the committee are going through their first year on the board. They studied the issues and developed a reasonable course for town meeting to follow. For the most part, voters at town meeting agreed with the advisors.

We suppose that vote of confidence is thanks by itself.

We want to send them our appreciation.

Arne K. Gjesteby is advisory board chairman. His summary helped make the financial process clear.

The other hardworking members of the board are: Nancy Adams Roth, John H. Mullett, Ann K. Whelan, Roger Whitley, Michael Putziger, Wayne Sawchuk, Christopher Duggan and Peter O'Connor.

Alinda Tangherlini, 2 years, waits while her grandmother, Janet Figueiredo, votes.

Curley thanks his voters

To the Editor:

I would like to thank all the people who supported and voted for me in my recent bid for the position of water commissioner in the town of Cohasset.

Because of a close vote for this position, many of my supporters have asked me to call for a recount.

After considering this over the weekend and knowing that I would have to change fourteen (14) votes from the 2,157 votes cast, in addition to the cost burden this would add to the already troubled town budget, I have decided against requesting a recount.

Once again I would like to thank all who supported me.

Very Truly Yours,
Benjamin F. Curley

The Mother of All Pension Overrides

By Tanna Kasperowicz

commentary

"What's more important - the Town or the employees?" - R.L. That's my favorite quote of the year...as opposed to last year's quote which was calling any and everybody born after Burt Pratt was born: "Johnny-come-latelys."

Tiny Town elections are over, the people have spoken once again. A little about that. In one of my former communities I was a member of a very young and vital League of Women Voters. One year we noticed (probably big mouth me) that no one was running for public office, so...we held a Campaign for a Town. At this seminar, we had newspaper reporters and editors speaking about campaign advertising and press releases. We had former campaign managers talk about running a campaign. The local League published a booklet comprised of campaign facts and figures, and local advertising costs.

We thought it all very wonderful, and the state league did a special write-up on how this wonderful local league was campaigning for candidates for town offices. People came to our forum and people ran for office that year like never before in the history of the town. And, it was awful. No one who won that year won with any majority. Five and six candidates ran for every office, fringe candidates won, and the Town took years to recover from all those damned candidates.

And so, during the years I was 30 I thought everybody should be interested in town government, and lots of candidates meant interesting choices...and then I began to believe that some people shouldn't vote, and/or only informed voters should vote. Even the local league and state league began to make pleas to "informed" voters. And I never "taught" some nut how to run again.

Diana Kornet's sharp. It's the sign of a good politician to have a kind of time-line on when things happen, and to know for what one was not responsible. Please note here that neither Kornet nor Ned Tebbetts were responsible for the "Mother of all Pension Overrides." It was Rocco Laugelle, the guy you just put back on board. After 12 years as your liaison to Norfolk County, where he somehow missed a year and a half of discussion on the override, and the vote, it might be time to send someone else to Emerald City (Dedham). Martha travels well; and/or Tebbetts and Kornet will work hard this year, they're up for re-election.

Dear selectpeople, when your coven meets again, promise the electorate a true and real covenant between yourselves and voters. Watch out for your individual conflicts of interest. Don't make anybody liaison to anything who has an historical and/or very ripe interest in any particular subject. Please don't put any more foxes in the hen house. We can't afford it.

At least one or more citizens suing the town for tax abatements have friends on the state appellate tax board. Here's letting you know we know...and, we've already told some well-placed people.

A little bit about the "Mother of all" pension overrides. The discussion went on from December 1988 through June 1989, when it became effective. It was reviewed and approved by five County boards. The Tiny Town Selectmen and their selectman liaison (Rocco Laugelle, entering his 13th year of office) were sent notices, information, ad nauseam. The liaison was invited to vote on the issue as a member of the Norfolk County Advisory Board. Someday I'll go over to Dedham, take Henry to lunch, and read the minutes of the Norfolk County Advisory Board. In any case, the liaison claims to have "been caught completely by surprise." It would be difficult to have been caught "completely by surprise" on this issue if one was doing its job. One would have had to have been comatose, to not have known about this issue. I knew about this issue standing here doing my wash, scraping my wallpaper off the walls.

And then, on March 19, 1991 Norfolk County held a meeting in Tiny Town on the pension override and five people went. No one from the board of selectmen, neither its executive secretary nor its liaison, attended...knowing all they need to know, as they do.

Last week...interesting letter from Community Center Board of Directors, Tiny Town. Wrong! You guys got snookered. By the time the press got around to writing about the recreation take-over, there were a whole lot of furious people. My advice to CCC and town government types, discuss the public's business in public. If it's aboveboard and worthwhile, there's no reason you can't discuss it in public. Tiny Town Meeting is a case in point. Tiny Town officials were asked what ambulance collections were to date and refused to respond. Only in Tiny Town would the Tiny Town Fire Chief be asked to write the RFP for a private ambulance service, which he is on record as abhorring. How smart of Tiny Town officials to have put him in charge.

Tiny Town Selectman Martha Gjesteby complained about this column a few weeks ago. Tiny Town columnist's response: it is my intention to have them (Tiny Town Selectmen) eat you alive. However, and this is the truth, this columnist has few if any problems with Selectman Gjesteby.

Get back here fast, Jack Silvia, convalescing at South Shore Hospital. Jack and I share a dog. He calls him Buddy. I call him Truman Traitor. I love Jack and Lois because they love my dog.

Rotary gives thanks for a race well done

To the residents of Cohasset,

On behalf of the Roadrace Committee and the Rotary Club, I want to express our most sincere gratitude to you all. Despite record breaking heat and number of runners, you made the 15th Annual Cohasset Roadrace an event in which we can all take pride. Countless runners mentioned the assistance and warm welcome they received, from the hoses and water stops to the congratulations for having participated.

The greatest thanks goes to the many Town Departments which annually make the event happen. Harold Litchfield's and Peter Laugelle's departments as always excelled in presenting the town's natural charm and beauty. The public safety provided by the Police and Fire Departments was in our opinion exemplary. With over 800 runners on the roads, their safety was assured with minimal inconvenience to drivers. On the Common, bursting with spectators there were no accidents or injuries. The response by the ambulance and the assistance by the Cohasset Police and Scituate Fire Departments in transporting the dehydrated runners to the hospital was rapid and professional. I have recently spoken with Directors of summer races (temperature over 80) and they agree we are fortunate to have such emergency capabilities.

Special thanks to the many volunteers who worked before and on the day of the race, without those whose labors the event would not take place. I would be remiss in not mentioning, The Muncey Family, Don Harold, Andy Hailer, The Mariner (great coverage), Sparpless Jones, Rick Curtis and the entire Rotary Club.

Again Our Most Sincere Gratitude
Peter J. Logan

Town meeting voters agreed to empower some town officials with the authority to issue tickets for minor violations of town bylaws and regulations. This new power has been granted to the building inspector, harbormaster, health agent, conservation commission chairman, animal control officer — even the town's executive secretary.

Fit Tips

Normandie Nigh

Dear Normandie,

I am in good physical condition and exercise regularly, but still experience stiffness and soreness many times after aerobics or walking. What could I be doing wrong?

Debbie

Dear Debbie,

The causes of delayed soreness are not yet fully understood, but the most likely person to experience soreness is a beginning exerciser or someone who is increasing the intensity of their workout too rapidly. The delayed soreness you are experiencing may be an increase in intensity or one of a number of other conditions, such as torn muscle tissues, muscle spasms, or even injury to the connective tissue. In the past, the theory was that the soreness was caused by a build up of lactic acid in the muscle. We now know that this is not the case, as lactic acid is removed from the muscle within an hour or so after exercising. This process is enhanced by an active cool-down, which means you should gradually slow down your workout and bring your heart rate back down to a comfortable level before completely stopping.

Whatever the reason for your discomfort, you may find relief by taking more time to stretch and relax your muscles after you work out. I find that I become extremely stiff and sore if I don't stretch daily, especially if I sit for long periods at my desk or spend a great deal of time driving a car. We work very hard to strengthen and contract our muscles and we need to take an adequate amount of time to stretch them, too. I'm sure that tch the muscles used and 2) drink plenty of water. Period.

Exercise should be a positive experience which makes us feel good. It can actually become a 'positive addiction' once we've experienced the tremendous feelings of increased energy, strength, and the control exercise gives us over our lives. But as with any addiction, it's possible to do more than we should be doing. Take a good look at your current workout schedule, Debbie, and be sure that you're giving your body a chance to recover after each strenuous workout. Hopefully, your soreness is a temporary condition which can be relieved by gentle stretching, moderation, and a more gradual increase in your exercise intensity.

AFS needs help and new leaders

To the Editor:

Regrettably, The American Field Service Intercultural Student Exchange Program (AFS), finds itself in jeopardy in Cohasset. As many of you know, this program has made it possible for many Cohasset youngsters to grow through summer and academic exchange abroad. This year is no exception as Doug Schultz, Heather Bass and Mark St. Onge set out to explore Italy, the Dominican Republic and the Soviet Union respectively. In addition, we have hosted many youngsters from every corner of the earth.

AFS, started in 1947 by WW1 and WW2 ambulance drivers, promotes world peace through understanding and a shared growth experience. The organization has been recognized by the U.N. for its extraordinary contributions and has been recognized by the U.N. for its extraordinary contributions and was singled out by Money Magazine as being one of the most effective and efficiently administered educational non-profit programs in the country. Last week Cohasset Selectmen honored our local host families, the John McNamaras and the John Christoffels for their generous support in hosting Tica Scares and Sirpa Rissonen of Portugal and Finland.

This June most all members of the local chapter board will be resigning because of other personal obligations. Thus far we have been unsuccessful in our attempt to enlist new board members to keep the program active. If there is no change, AFS will cease to exist in Cohasset until such time that interested parents/residents resurrect it.

We recognize that these are, indeed, difficult times. Residents' energies and resources are being consumed by numerous important state, local and personal concerns. However, we feel that the young people of Cohasset will be the losers if this remarkable enrichment program is allowed to die. Don't let AFS be another victim of these tough times.

In addition to new board members, we are seeking host families for the fall to host a young person (even if the chapter is not active, strong support for AFS exists in our Cohasset schools and family support would be extended by other South Shore communities with active programs).

Please give serious thought to our plea for new leadership and host families. Talk to your friends. Make a commitment together. Without your help all of Cohasset stands to lose.

We are waiting for your call.

Sincerely,
Judy Dwyer

Duplex at Government Isle still at issue

To the Editor:

I would like to respond to Ned Tebbett's "Value of Town's Property Proved Out" as regards the duplex on Government Island.

First I agree with those who opt for retention of the land as Town property and proper maintenance of the structure.

However, continued use of the structure as a duplex housing unit without a firm commitment to applying affordable housing criteria as a prerequisite for occupancy would be outrageous. Not only is it ethically and morally right to apply such criteria, but it is also pragmatic to the extent that it would add two units to the zero that Cohasset currently has to meet a State mandated objective of 10 percent. Ultimately, failure to show a good faith effort to strive for 10 percent could result in a devastating withholding of State discretionary funds.

I also agree with Nancy Snowdale and others who have observed that the Selectmen have a poor track record as landlords. Until the 1990 $11,000 Septic Repair requirement forced the issue, the Town was collecting only $350/month per unit in rental income. The Town let the units fall into serious disrepair, have had problems collecting their rental income, and have had one unit vacant for an extended period.

Another Town Meeting member observed that using the structure as a duplex housing unit in effect privatizes the property and thereby eliminates the potential of the citizenry to visit the structure in the context of its historical significance. That comment also had merit.

I was disappointed that the Government Island Committee never addressed their long-term vision for the property and structure. Personally, I would endorse spending more than the $30,000 approved at Town Meeting to renovate the structure if it could be made more available to the general population as perhaps a facility for the Historical Commission, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and/or the Rotary Club.

At the Town Meeting, in a rather pompous fashion, Ned challenged anyone to critique his financial analysis; so, that should be addressed, too. My counterpoints would be:

1. If the Town isn't committed to applying affordable housing criteria, why should it seek only a 7.5 percent return on investment rather than Ned's acknowledged commercial rental standard of 12 percent.

2. Ned's analysis assumes $20,000 for capital improvements, but he and the Selectmen asked and got approval for $30,000. So his figures are clearly incorrect. Do the Selectmen automatically apply a 50 percent fudge factor to all capital investments?

3. Although, I do not support sale of either the property or structure; I would point out that the current Selectmen's plan effectively privatizes the property without the benefit of it being included on the Town's real property tax roll.

4. Ned's assumptions are critical and suspect. They assume 100 percent occupancy of both units for a continuous ten year period and they assume only $1,800 per annum in operation/maintenance costs (insurance alone would be costly) while making an assumption that there will be no more capital improvements over the ten year period.

I would also point out that past occupants of the duplex were among those objecting to the use of the adjacent Town parking lot. The parking lot is virtually useless to the Town under the Selectmen's proposal. Ideally, exploiting the maximum potential of the structure and the parking lot should be addressed concurrently.

I recommend that the Selectmen hold a Special Open Town Meeting on the subject and I encourage strong participation by: advocates of affordable housing, The Historical Commission, Rotary Club, VFW, Government Island Committees, Advisory Committee, Capital Budget Committee, and most importantly, the general citizenry.

Respectfully,
Joe McElroy
Member, Capital Budget Committee

and made the heating system for the barn based on a homemade wood stove. The heating system demonstrates the old Yankee adage, "Use it up, wear it out, make it do or do without." In addition to cord wood, Butman stokes the stove with wood shavings and sawdust soaked in used engine oil from his son's boat.

The barn also contains equipment he salvaged and fixed up better than new from a variety of sources.

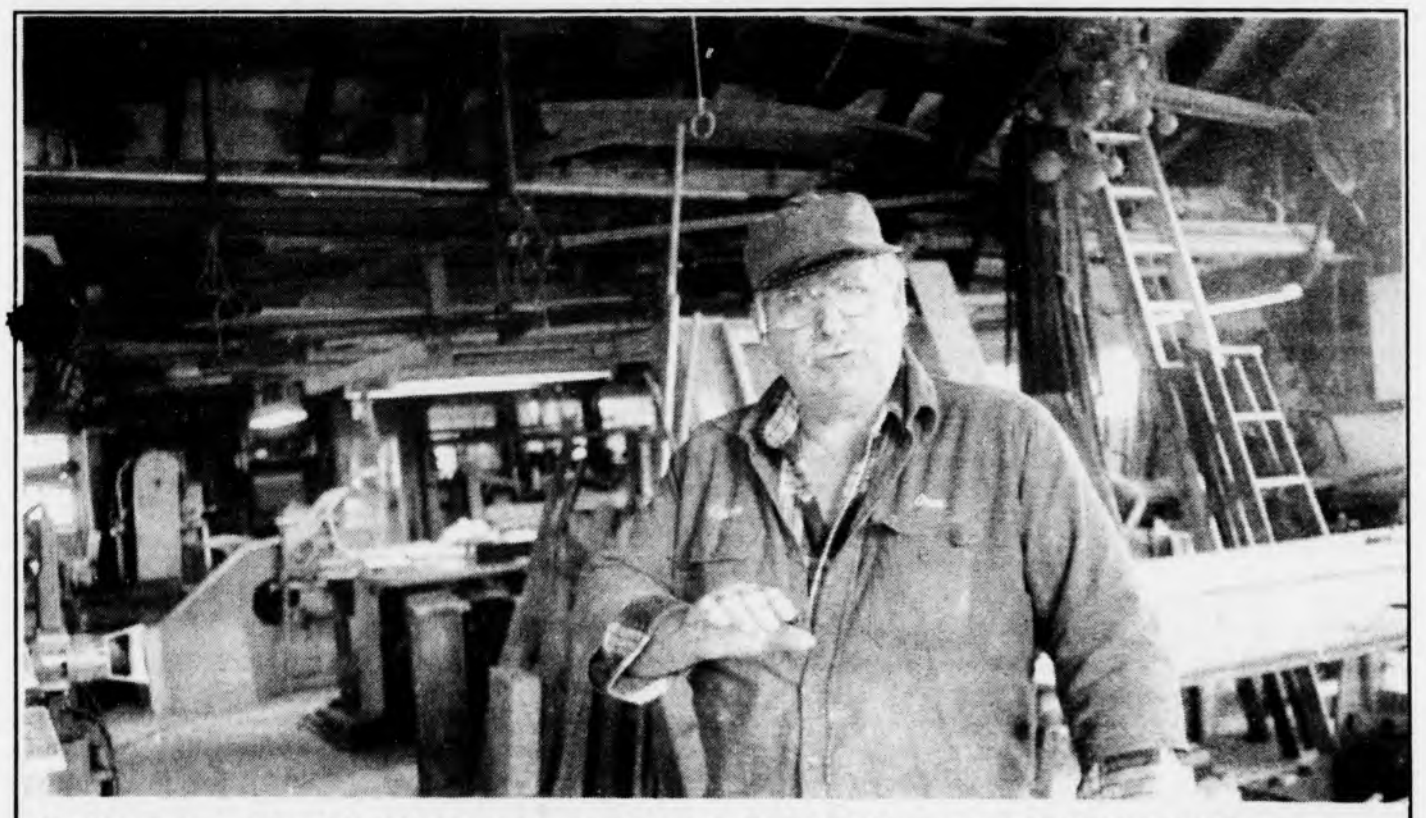
"I don't throw anything away," Butman said.

When the weather turns too raw for him to work in the barn, he simply retreats to his cellar workshop. The main thing is to keep busy.

Although Butman has three sons, none of them followed in his footsteps when it came to working in wood. One son is a machinist, one is a fisherman and one drives a truck. Even his grandson would rather play Ninja Turtle than whittle wood in the barn. It makes Butman a little sad.

"The tradesman is a thing going by here," he said. "Everyone wants to be a chief." But the need for skilled craftsmen remains, forcing America to go overseas to fill the need, he said. Some changes don't signal progress, as far as he is concerned.

Never one to rest on his laurels, Butman is expanding his horizons and his talents courtesy of channel 2's art lessons. He plans to create a mural on his porch wall. He already tried his hand at painting a stone wall.



"Looked pretty good," he said.

Even though he says the lessons are paying off, he can't resist mocking the teaching style of the television artist who babbles on about sun-dappled trees and waves.

"How soft can you get?" he snickered.

Butman's reputation as a storyteller is legendary among the old-timers in town - but his style is more at home by the wood stove than at a lady's tea social or grade school picnic. His language, they say, can be as salty as you'd expect from an old lobsterman.

Having just finished constructing a conservatory using a kit imported from England, Butman wants to make one from scratch. He thinks he can make it better and stronger. Although he hopes someone will give him the chance to try out his ideas, it will have to wait until he's finished the wooden pump.

Butman loves working in cypress because the wood is as sturdy as it is beautiful. He knows the pump will last a long time, if the hooligans and vandals can be deterred. He has a few tricks up his sleeve to help protect the pump.

Charlie Butman Jr. is proud of being a part of the town pump project. And it seems fitting that the fresh, new faces around town and the families with 250-year-old roots are working hand-in-hand to make Cohasset a better and more beautiful community as the town heads into the 21st century.

Save time April 30

The Board of Selectmen will determine the ballot for the Special Town Override Election Saturday, May 18. Deadline to register for this election is Friday, April 26.

At this time, the Advisory Committee has not determined where the cuts would occur if the override fails, and their decisions will be made after Town Meeting. As a public service, further information concerning these issues will be available at a Voter Information Forum, sponsored by the PSO, on Tuesday, April 30 at 7:30 p.m. at the Unitarian Parish House.

At this forum, members of the Board of Selectmen, the School Committee, and the Advisory Committee will present to the public their assessment of town issues pertinent to the May 18 election.

Parents can obtain a list of baby-sitters for Town Meeting by calling Sue Brister (383-2439) or Heidi Maitland (383-2473). For further information, please call PSO President Kathy Walsh (383-9147).

Leo's Exxon Tiger hockey team forfeits to Panthers

By John Kinchla

The Whitman-Hanson Hockey Panthers defeated the Cohasset Exxon Tigers, 2 to 1 in a penalty shortened game on Sunday, April 14 at the Pilgrim Arena.

Cohasset's inability to stay out of the penalty box was a factor in the outcome of the contest. Co-Captain, Sophomore Center Mike Reynolds scored Cohasset's only goal but also collected two penalties. John Murphy collected three penalties and Tim Conroy garnered two. The final penalty was assessed to Brian Buckley. This eighth penalty caused the Cohasset forfeit with 13 minutes remaining to play.

The game was a good match. Both Cohasset and Whitman-Hanson have done well in the 10 team Pilgrim Developmental program. Cohasset was second in the league standings prior to the game at 3-1-1, while Whitman-Hanson was fifth at 3-2-1.

Two factors may have contributed to the loss. Three Cohasset players were unable to play and the Cohasset team was not sufficiently warmed up to begin the game.

Charles Smith, Cohasset's leading scorer missed the game. He is recovering from a shoulder injury, while All Star Cohasset Defenseman Kevin Mulcahy and third line Center Dan DeMichele were on vacation. A missing bag of practice pucks may have caused Cohasset Goalie Jeff Stone to falter in the early minutes of the game since the team was not able to shoot on him prior to the start of the game. Whitman-Hanson scored immediately off the opening faceoff.

The Tigers are a young team and they make mistakes. They appeared to be gathering some scoring momentum when the game was called.

Playing exceptionally well for Cohasset as defensemen were 7th grader Pat Reynolds and 10th grader John Kinchla. Neither boy had played as a defenseman prior to this game, but both boys did an excellent job. While constantly improving 9th grader Matt Graves and 7th Grader Chris McKenna played strong games as wings on the second line.

The third line troika of Mike Riley, Brendan Kinchla and Brian Buckley exhibited some passing finesse and challenged the Panther Goalie with numerous shots on net.

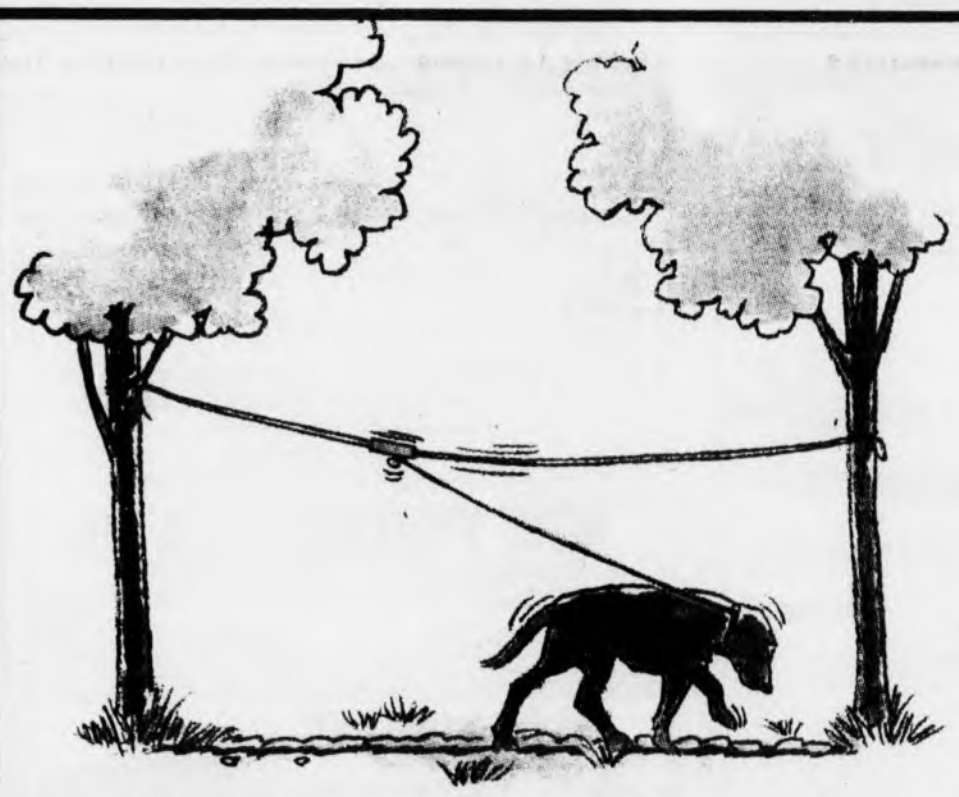
First line wing Matt Kramers deserves special mention for his intelligent and disciplined play. Matt works hard on offense and defense and seldom receives a penalty.

Charlie Shields also remained out of the penalty box and his play contributed to Cohasset's second half surge. The Tigers play Canton on Saturday, April 20 at 7:20 p.m. at the Pilgrim Arena.

CHS Lacrosse team tromps Wellesley 7-2

By Terry Kahn
Special to the Mariner

Cohasset High's lacrosse team, in its first varsity season, ran its record to 2-1 with a 7-2 win over Wellesley High last Thursday in Wellesley.



The Skippers, playing their third consecutive Division One opponent, were led by attackmen Jake Powell and Charlie Endris, who scored two goals apiece. Matt Marks, Bart Weisenfluh, and Chip Anderson added single tallies.

"This was a good win," said coach Ken Ekberg, "and puts us in the right frame of mind heading into spring break." Cohasset next plays Masconomet Regional, its only Division Three opponent this year, on Tuesday, April 23, at Boxborough.

Backing a superb Skipper defense were senior co-captains Ollie Nivaud and Travis Coley, who stopped seven shots in goal. At midfield, Bob Whittaker contributed three assists, a team record.

Cohasset had split its first two games, losing a close contest to Xaverian of Westwood, 8-5, and knocking off Boston College High School, 7-2. Midfielder Weisenfluh and Endris, a freshman and the youngest varsity co-captain in Cohasset sports history, lead the lacrosse team in scoring with five goals apiece.

Spring soccer gets a sunny start

Sunny skies welcomed fans and players in the Spring opener of the Coastal Youth Soccer League this past weekend.

Cohasset is fielding a record 29 teams ranging in age from 7 to 19 years — some 500 boys and girls competing against teams from 13 South Shore towns.

Here are the results of some of Saturday's and Sunday's soccer contests.

Boys under 16-1 team lost a heartbreak to Norwell, 3-2, making a strong comeback after being down 3-0 with Joey Andrade scoring on a direct kick from 30 yards out and a second goal by Tim Brister. Chris Kondrat, as usual, showed fine ball control.

Boys under 14-1 lost to Norwell 2-0 with Patrick Reynolds substituting for Chris McKenna in goal and doing a great job against what may be Cohasset's toughest game all season. Ryan Freeman and Brett MacQuarrie played particularly well.

Boys under 12-1 scored a big 3-0 victory over Hingham with goals by Taylor Devin and Ely Kahn. The third goal was scored by Hingham on its own goal.

Boys under 14-2 team tied Marshfield 1-1 with Kevin McKenna strong in goal for Cohasset.

Boys under 12-2 and 12-3 both reported losses, while Boys under 10-1 won their game 1-0 and Boys under 10-4 scored a giant 4-0 victory over Pembroke with goals by Jake Motley (2), Ronan Buick and Andrew Kinch. Billy Good and Evan Cutler played outstanding defense — a strong performance by all.

Girls under 16-1 team won an extremely close duel with Plymouth 1-0, Cohasset's goal scored by Tara Gallagher.

Girls under 14-1 whipped Marshfield on their home turf, 3-0 with goals by Melinda Johansen, Danielle Nohe and Martina Snyder. Amy Silvia was the star on defense.

Girls under 14-2 triumphed over a tough Norwell team 3-0. Scoring goals for Cohasset were Catie Campbell, Amie Theriault and Kathleen Fitzsimmons. The shutout goes to goalkeepers Kelly O'Donnell and Megan Fahey.

Girls under 12-1 lost to an always strong Hingham 2-0. Alia Afshar and Julie Smith both did a fine job in goal; Natalie Cheel provided good defense, while Ashley Brister did well at forward.

Girls under 12-2 played an outstanding game whipping Hingham at their field 2-1. Lilly Morris was superb in goal. Cohasset goals were scored by Alyssa McNamara and Ali Kinchla. "The whole team looks very impressive this season," says coach Brian Nohe.

Girls under 10-2 scored a big win over Duxbury 1-0 in an away game. Suzanna Candia copped the single goal, while Lydia Crafts was strong at forward; Eileen Rich at midfield and Tara Hedstrom on defense.

Look for results of next weekend's games in this column next week.

Ellery Clark walks away with new senior record

Ellery Clark, 81, scored well in Sunday, April 7's first annual Ten Kilometer (6.2 mile) Race Walk. He was both the senior competitor in the event and the walker who exceeded The Athletic Congress' standard of excellence for age group 80-84 race walkers. That established time is 87 minutes and 28 seconds. Clark was timed by two watches in 75 minutes, 00 seconds. Subject to TAC's decision later this year, the time and distance must be verified by Peter Logan and other Cohasset race officials. Clark can be selected for National All-American race walking status for 1991.

He is the son of Cohasset's only Olympic and national track and field champion, the late Ellery Clark, won both running high jump and running long jump in the 1896 revival of the Olympic Games at Athens, was the national All-Around champion of America in 1897 and 1901, and a great Harvard and Boston A.A. athlete.

Clark, the son, was a well-known runner at Browne and Nichols and Roxbury Latin, then for seven years was a prominent race walker for the B.A.A. Since 1988 he has been Maryland Senior Olympics champion in various track events, including 1,500 meters race walk, and 200 (twice), 400 (twice), 800 and 1,500 meter dashes. Last year, in the 8th Annual Quincy Senior Olympics, he topped his 80 plus age group in one-mile and three-mile race walks, one-mile run, and running long jump.

He is the oldest active, officer of the WWII fast attack carrier Randolph.

"Why Do I Advertise in the Mariner Newspapers?"

Three years ago, when we opened Cabinet Source and Little Effort Shop on Front Street in Scituate Harbor, we tried several forms of advertising to get our businesses started. After several months, we decided to concentrate our ad campaign in the Mariner Newspapers since they were the ones providing results. We are delighted we made that decision. The Mariner continues to bring people into our shop, and their rep, Mary Reppucci, has been extremely helpful and co-operative with advice and ideas. At a time when every advertising dollar has to count, it pays to use the Mariner.

Skippers change their image & win the opener

By Donna Cogliano
Mariner correspondent

It's early in the season and the Cohasset Skippers have proved themselves to be winners on the baseball diamond. Last season Cohasset failed to win a game. Cohasset's losing streak came to a close on the opening day of league action.

Cohasset clinched an 11-7 win over Hull in the league opener two weeks ago. The Skippers held only a 7-6 lead before they scored four runs in the bottom of the fifth inning to secure the victory.

Sophomore third baseman John Maynard slugged three hits in the Hull game and has held a hot bat all week for the Skippers. In fact, he ripped a leadoff triple in the Hull game to start the action for Cohasset.

Simon Payne, the junior transfer from New Jersey, was the winning pitcher for Cohasset as his teammates totalled a dozen hits for the afternoon.

After two weeks of baseball the locals have posted a record of 1-2-1 which includes an 8-8 tie with Weymouth Catholic. The two losses were 12-4 to Rockland and an 8-7 heartbreaking loss at East Bridgewater.

In the Weymouth Catholic game, Payne worked his talents on the mound. Maynard and Peter Fahy were the hitting stars. Fahy had two hits for the day including a two-run homer while Maynard accumulated three hits at the plate.

Four other Cohasset players had two hits each that day: freshman Chris Rolandelli, Ryan Cibelli, Nate Fiori and Payne, who helped his own cause.

At one point in the Weymouth Catholic game, Cohasset held a 7-3 lead. The Skippers came back to take an 8-7 lead but the game was iced by their opponents in the last inning.

Cohasset coach Ted MacDermott said, "We blew a lead but we came back and that's something on the positive side."

Freshman shortstop Joe Andrade belted three hits at East Bridgewater including a powerful double.

Freshman Chris Kondrat made his debut on the mound versus Easties and reportedly showed some nervousness. However he settled down in the third and fourth innings and pitched some good ball, according to coach MacDermott. The game marked Kondrat's first varsity appearance. After two weeks of baseball action, the team has a one week layoff because of school vacation. MacDermott speaks of next week as the second half of the season.

Sophomore Mike Reynolds pitched two solid innings of relief in the 8-7 East Bridgewater loss. In fact he pitched some shutout ball for the Skippers. Cohasset trailed 7-0 after four innings and managed to score seven runs in the last three innings.

Cohasset had the opportunity to tie or win the game but instead left a couple of runners on base. MacDermott said, "But again, the kids didn't quit. They hung in there even though they were facing a 7-run deficit. They scratched back. I know East Bridgewater was glad to get that final out."

Cohasset travels to Norwell Monday to face the Clippers.

Composting advice from state

Did you know that by composting leaves, grass clippings and other yard wastes in your own backyard, you can reduce the flow of trash from your household by as much as 30 percent? Composting saves landfill space and results in a valuable material for your garden and landscape. The State Department of Environmental Protection, is offering a home composting workshop in this area. The workshop will teach participants how to compost at home and will also establish a "Network of Home Composters" who will educate others in their communities about home composting. This is a great opportunity for people who want to get involved in environmental protection on the local level.

'National Days of Thanksgiving'

President George Bush proclaimed April 5 through 7 as "National Days of Thanksgiving" for the allied victory over Iraqi forces. The three-day period will salute all military personnel and their families for their participation and support during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

Our New Emergency Center Opens May 1. Then We Can All Breathe A Little Easier.

The newest Emergency Center in Massachusetts is about to open. And when it does, it's sure to take your breath away. First of all, the entrance is now on Fogg Rd. And to make life even easier, there are separate entrances for walk-in and ambulance patients. There's even a special play space for children.

For convenient treatment of non life-threatening illnesses or injuries, we've created a special Urgent Care area. And even though you'll probably spend less time there, now the waiting area is far more comfortable and comforting.

Our new Emergency Center has many special features. Thirty-two treatment areas, a trauma room for seriously injured accident victims, a special resuscitation room for patients with heart problems, central monitoring of patient vital signs, and an eye treatment room are all a part of the new facility. There's even an emergency radiology suite.

But without a qualified medical staff, what good is it? Here, all the doctors are experienced emergency medicine specialists. And there are forty nurses to further ensure you receive quality care and personal attention.

Combine this highly qualified medical team with the latest in emergency technology and you have an emergency and trauma center that truly is state-of-the-art. Judge for yourself. Come to our Community Open House on April 27 and 28. Because when it comes to emergency medicine, our center really is a breath of fresh air.

10 override questions face voters on May 18

By Andrew MacLellan
Mariner correspondent

After much discussion, selectmen approved the final language and order of Cohasset's proposition 2 1/2 override package Monday night.

Preceding the vote, Selectmen Jane Goedecke and Diana Kornet entered a plea to the advisory board to release impact figures on the FY '92 budget should the town's May 18 override proposal fail.

Seven of the ten questions are general levy overrides totalling $283,822. The others questions deal with debt exclusions for school maintenance, police and fire station renovation project and establishment of a writing laboratory at the high school.

Repairs to the police and fire station, which are already complete, were approved by town meeting last year.

The other projects covered under the debt exclusion questions were approved by town meeting but will not go forth if they are defeated on the ballot.

Questions eight, nine and ten represent first year and principal interest incurred at the issuance of five and ten-year bonds.

A home assessed at $300,000 will experience a rise in annual cost assessment of $116.79 in FY '92.

This figure is based on last year's tax estimate of 10.6 cents per $100,000 in town expenditures.

Although he issued tax rate impact figures for the override, executive secretary Greg Doyan was unable to identify the FY '92 base tax rate.

This year the tax rate is $9.90 per $1,000.

"We don't yet have the new assessed evaluation," Doyan said, "but all things being equal, the only things that will affect the tax rate if the override does not pass will be an increase in the general levy by 2 1/2 percent and adjustments in property taxes due to improvements or new construction."

In order to educate voters as to what cuts would have to be made if the override fails, the advisory board had been asked by selectmen at regular town meeting to come up with both a level-funded and service-funded budget.

However, the board ultimately supported only the level-funded budget.

This leaves in doubt exactly which services will have to be cut and to what extent various departments will suffer if an override is defeated.

Kornet said a fiscal bailout is "doomed to failure if the electorate is asked to vote blindly on the override."

CLH is on the sludge short list for the MWRA

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

Town officials are demanding that the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) talk to them about the status of the privately owned Cohasset Heights Landfill.

Officials have heard nothing about the proposed sale from the MWRA.

According to Health agent Joseph Godzik, even though "the town has no reason not to believe" Barry, reports that the site is being considered officially remain "only hearsay."

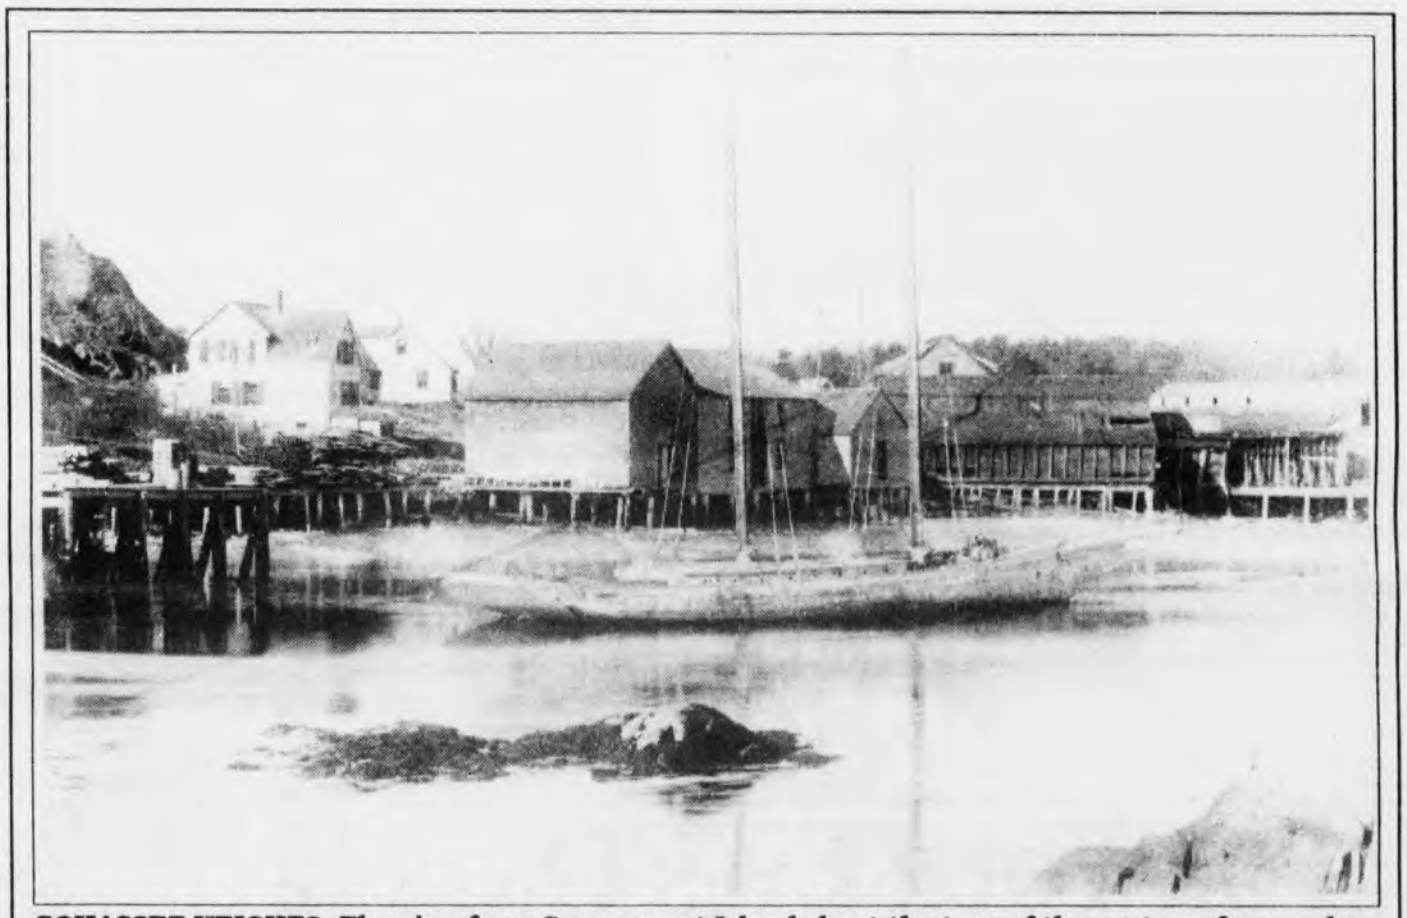
According to Ted Fryer, a spokesman for the MWRA, the list of potential disposal sites is now in the hands of a nine-member committee appointed by Governor William Weld and overseen by Secretary of Environmental Affairs Susan Tierney.

"We really don't know a whole lot about it right now," he said. "It is in their hands."

Fryer confirmed the Cohasset Heights Landfill is one of the sites on a "short list" the committee is reviewing, but he did not know how seriously it was being considered.

"We were contacted by Paul Barry, and he said he would be interested in helping us with our current landfill problem. The landfill would be used mostly for grit, screenings and other debris."

He said the MWRA will not become involved in the process until the committee completes their review over the next few months.



He confirmed that a limited amount of sludge might be brought to the landfill.

In an attempt to get a definite response, selectmen sent a letter to the MWRA demanding answers.

The letter, dated April 10, reads in part: "Local officials have been surprised and dismayed to read in area newspapers that the Cohasset Heights Landfill is on a short list of alternative sites for sludge disposal.

"Residents have been demanding answers from us, and we are increasingly frustrated that no information has been forthcoming from your office."

Health & $$ = stress in the 90s

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

It seemed like a fine idea — doing a story on a chiropractor who had some things to say about stress.

He said something interesting over the phone — he said there was good stress and bad stress.

I wanted to know something more about good stress.

Anyway, the appointed time came for the interview. Dr. Jon Gillespie was at his office at 760 C.J. Cushing Highway, which is Route 3A. I was stuck in the Marshfield office of the Mariner, talking on the telephone to someone with an absolute crisis. I didn't write myself a note on that particular crisis but as I remember it, the caller wanted to get a letter to the editor into the paper.

I explained where the letter could be dropped off or how to fax it down to the office. But I made the mistake of saying I couldn't promise it would run right away.

People never like to hear that space in the paper is tight.

Hey, editors don't like to hear that space will be tight.

So the point is, I began my interview on stress feeling stressed out.

When I arrived in Dr. Gillespie's office, his wife Catherine was handling some paper work at her desk in the reception area.

The Gillespies live in Hingham. But they spend their days in Cohasset at the chiropractic office on Route 3A.

Within seconds, I was ushered into one of Dr. Gillespie's offices. There is an adjustment room, a physical therapy room, an ultrasound machine and an X-ray room all tucked away behind the main desk area.

"Stress is a specific reaction to nonspecific things," Dr. Gillespie began. He talked about how the body reacts to stress with various physical changes. "The

Golfer Barbara Malley gets 'teed' off

By Donna Cogliano
Mariner correspondent

The sweetest words for local author Barbara Malley, of Weymouth, sound something like this: "I couldn't put your book down."

"I'll never get tired of hearing that," said Malley, a former Cohasset resident. In fact, one of her friends complained about being given the book when she was in the middle of moving.

Malley, at 69, rose to instant celebrity status when her book, "Take My Ex-Husband Please - But Not Too Far", first hit the book shelves in early April. The book has received many favorable reviews from local readers who have already enjoyed the book which consists of humor and heartbreak revolving around a 32-year marriage and a resulting divorce.

While dining recently at the Cohasset Golf Club where Malley likes to golf between 5-6 days a week in the good weather, the local author said she hoped to make a million dollars off the sales of her book. Malley plans to share the wealth with her children. "I want to make a million dollars. My children all need help," said Malley.

Finalizing the book has been described by Malley as

Process is unclear, but Bates building will be sold

Selectmen will go along with the non-binding resolution of town meeting to turn the Bates building over to Habitat for Humanity for affordable housing.

The building will be put out to bid according to the state procurement law, then selectmen will determine which of the Economic Offices of Community Development guidelines to follow.

Referring to the decision, selectman Jane Goedecke said on Monday, "We do not take a non-binding resolution lightly. If it is the will of the people and if it is legally do-able then I think it is the responsibility of the selectmen to try to abide by it."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle expressed concern, saying, "If the override doesn't pass, I don't see how can we justify turning over a $125,000 piece of property.

If the building is turned into affordable housing he asked that local preference be guaranteed.

Under current EOCD guidelines, if a property is considered as part of an affordable housing ratio within a town it must assume a 70 percent local preference for occupancy.

If the affordable housing does not fall under the ratio agreement then local preference for occupancy rises to 100 percent.

The building was originally planned as an ecumenical project which would have assured a 100 percent local preference until local interest arose concerning establishment of the property under state mandated affordable housing guidelines.

Laugelle said, "I don't want to see someone from out of town move into that building when there are people in town who are eligible.

"My interests are for the residents of Cohasset."

Patrolman Paul Laugelle, president of the Cohasset Police Association, presents a check for $1,000 to Ralph Perroncello, commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 9146. The donation was amde for the Cohasset Historical Military Memorial which will be constructed at Veterans Memorial Park at Cohasset Harbor. The memorial, proposed and planned by the VFW, will be an extension of the present memorial and will honor those who participated in this country's wars from the Revolutionary War through the Persian Gulf. A town-wide fund raising drive is being planned.

Harborfest wins permits

A committee organizing this year's first annual Cohasset Harborfest met with selectmen Tuesday night and received a permit waiver to continue plans for the town celebration.

The festival, which is sponsored by the South Shore Center for the Arts, will run in conjunction with the 36th annual art festival June 20-23.

It will include a pancake breakfast, chowder competition and parades on land and sea.

The Harborfest will serve as an adjunct to the arts festival and commences with a Saturday morning pancake breakfast sponsored by the Rotary Club and the Council on Aging.

Saturday afternoon from 3-5 p.m. a day of fun at the harbor will include log rolling, life boat racing and a water balloon toss for the youngsters.

The South Shore Arts band will also perform on the common, followed by an evening youth concert featuring "High Tension", in Cohasset square.

Sundays activities will include a blessing of the fleet and a boat parade in Cohasset harbor.

The Coast Guard will be on hand in a 41-foot cutter and guided tours of the ship will be offered.

A parade from the harbor to the common will ensue, led by the Hingham militia. Nine floats are already scheduled and various marching bands and celebrities are expected to participate.

The weekend will wrap up with a chowder competition Sunday evening, as local restaurants and caterers compete for the best tasting chowder in Cohasset.

Cable company criticized

Angered at having their hands tied over a fee hike issue, selectmen accused Continental Cablevision of taking advantage of its monopoly hold on cable service.

Joseph Hayes, a representative of the company which services much of the south shore, and Dr. John Packard, chairman of a town appointed cable television committee, met with the board of selectmen to clarify the company's standing.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle accused Continental Cablevision, formerly American Cablesystems, of breaking an oral contract, allegedly agreed upon during contract negotiations with the town.

The 1983 contract set an annual fee cap at $1 per year.

Over the last eight years rates have risen by $1.40 to $1.50 a year.

"This represents a compound growth of 11 percent while inflation has risen at a rate of five percent," said newly appointed chairman Ned Tebbetts.

Hayes said that he did not recall any such agreement.

When cable television was introduced in 1983, the basic rate was $7.95. The new increase would bring the cost of the package up to $17.95.

Packard cited a 1984 deregulation, which gave cable companies free reign to dictate fees.

"The 1984 deregulation really put us over a barrel," he said, "The rates may go skyrocketing right past what people can afford."

"We should have recognized the $7.95 price tag as a come-on," said selectman Jane Goedecke.

Hayes replied, "It costs $20 to have the Globe delivered to your home for a month and $17.95 for a month of cable television.

"Everyone is reacting to the rate but no one is asking if the product is worth the money, or if the company is responsible, or if they respond to customer complaints."

This prompted Laugelle to fault Continental's ability to answer customer complaints in a prompt manner.

Hayes responded, "We have someone on the phones from 8 a.m. to 8 or 9 p.m. and we answer 90 percent of our calls."

Laugelle also complained about the sparsity of local programming.

Both Hayes and Packard reminded the board that the company promised to provide training and access but can not take on the role of producer as well.

Despite the contemptuous response to the increases, Packard's committee study found that Continental Cablevision is providing an adequate level of service and is fulfilling all of its promises.

"We have gotten very few complaints about the service," he said, "In light of the horror stories in other communities, I think we are very fortunate to have this company."

Tebbetts elected chairman

In a changing of the guard, Cohasset board of selectmen unanimously elected Ned Tebbetts as chairman, replacing Rocco Laugelle who has just won his re-election bid to the board. Diana Kornet of was also elected unaimously to the vice-chairmanship.

Both Tebbetts and Kornet are up for election in 1992.

No locals in new group home

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

Final preparations are underway to open a house for the mentally impaired on Elm Street.

According to John Muncey, the chairman of the Cohasset Housing Authority, the home, which will house eight mentally impaired residents, should be open within a month.

He said that although the house was built with Cohasset's "substantial need" for such a home in mind, the first residents will come from other towns.

Almost half of the home's initial residents will come from a residence in Weymouth the state determined was "substandard," Muncey said.

He said the other residents will come from neighboring towns. To his knowledge no Cohasset residents would live at the residence.

He said that the state's financial crunch is the reason that residents from outside of Cohasset will occupy the house.

He said the state will not approve any new grants, and only those who are currently receiving funding will be allowed into the home.

He said some of Cohasset's mentally impaired population live in other town's homes, so the town is not necessarily getting a less than fair deal.

The $365,000 cost of the home was absorbed by the State Office of Communities and Development.

He said the home will offer its residents independence along with around the clock supervision.

Each of the two units will have four bedrooms, a kitchen, dining room and family room.

He said the location was especially chosen because it was near Cohasset Square where many of the residents might be able to work.

Muncey said that he, another board member, and architect Russ Tremaine have gone through the building to determine a "punchlist" of what has to be done before the residence can open. He said that once they can see what remains to be done they can set a date for the opening.

Muncey said that the board is still trying to build housing for the frail and elderly nearby on Elm Street at the Tettris House.

He said that a state grant for the home has been frozen, putting the project on hold for the present time.

He said there is a great need for the project because many of the elderly are stuck in a housing limbo; they are too frail to live alone, yet too active to be confined to an institution or nursing home.

Local golfer gets 'teed' off

very suspenseful. "It was the longest year in my life because I knew a year ago it looked like it would be a book," said Malley. She compared the suspense to that of a child waiting for Christmas to arrive. "It seems like it will never get here," she said.

"I had a very hard time keeping this to myself when I golfed with my friends last summer," Malley confessed.

The book is full of domestic misadventure from boat sinkings to plane crashes. Malley chronicles her 50-year relationship with Ed her ex-husband from courtship, marriage, divorce and courtship again to everlasting friendship.

Malley claims it was important to her that Ed liked the book even though she wanted to be frank in sharing what had happened. It took him a little time to read the book but once he did, he told her it was great. "I didn't want to spoil the very fond bond. Our relationship is very pleasant," said Malley.

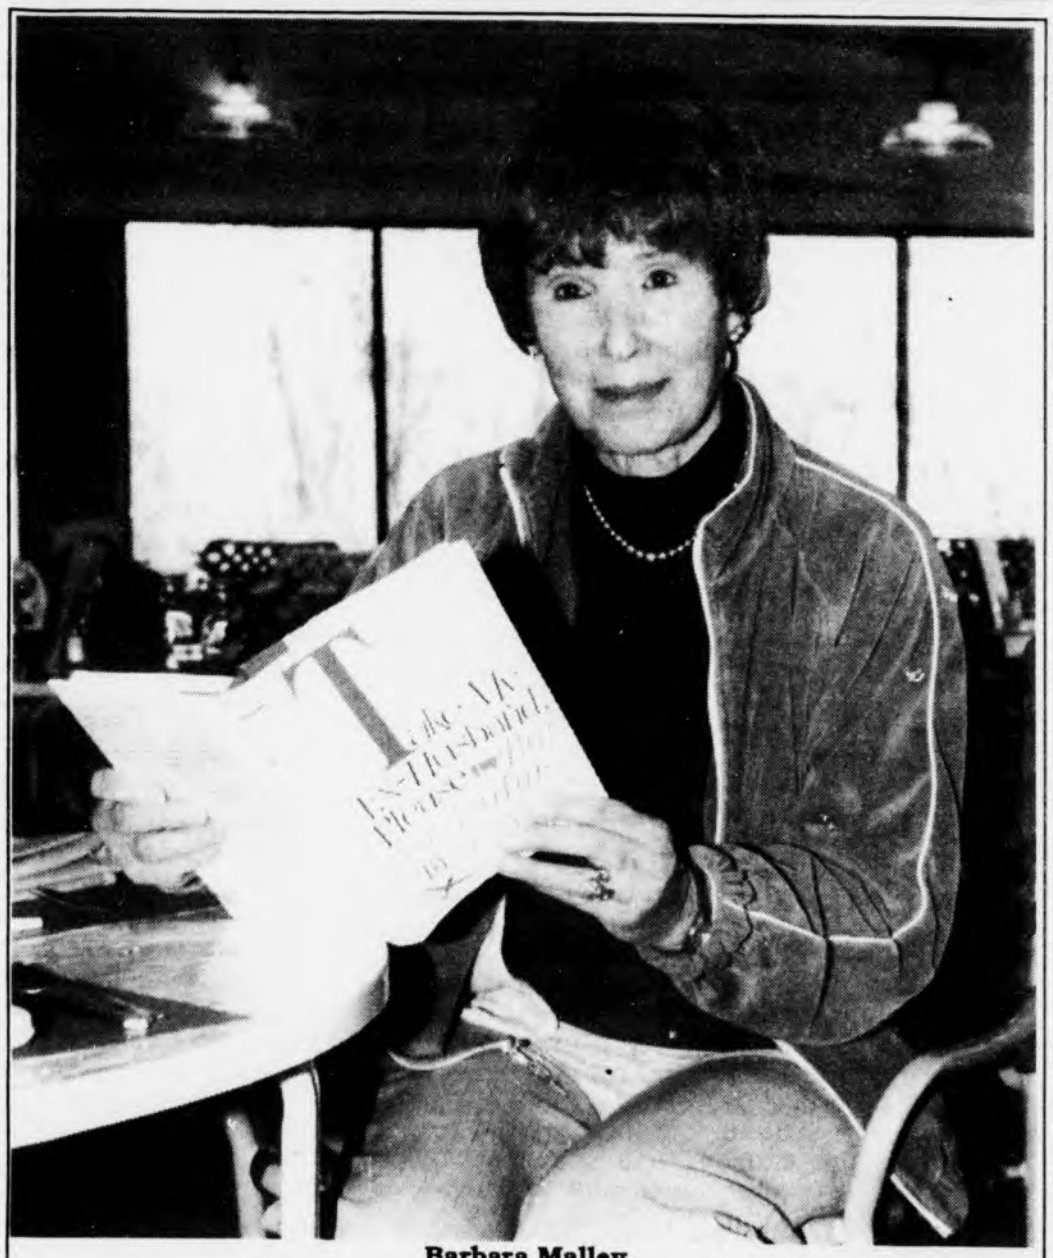
"His opinion is very important to me. I wanted to be frank about our marriage collapsing," she added.

Her writing has been compared to that of Erma Bombeck. However, Malley maintains that she is not a funny person. "I'm really not a witty person," says Malley who golfs with women who supply comic relief and quick comebacks on the tip of their tongues.

"I never thought of myself as humorous. The secret is I married a funny man and had four funny children. I just listened and wrote down what I heard. And I couldn't miss. I recognized humor when I saw it," Malley explained.

The computer delete button is Malley's favorite key on her computer keyboard. It allows her to keep revising.

Malley said, "Something magical happens when my fingers begin to dance on the keys. I attribute it to my typewriter keyboard which inspires me. My computer has a great sense of humor."



The book is set up in chronological order based on writings from Malley's journal. However, the first chapter of the book is made up of correspondence with a friend Darrell McClure based on some boating mishaps. McClure illustrated cartoons in "Yachting Magazine" based on Malley's letters describing boating with her husband. He drew the cartoons free of charge, saying that the letters were entertaining enough.

Malley had begun writing a book of memoirs of her family when a friend Edward Brecher told her that the focus of her book should be her remarkable enduring and unsual relationship with her ex-husband. "This should be the focus of your book," he wrote in a letter. Brecher, who encouraged Malley early on, died after the first 100 pages of the book were completed.

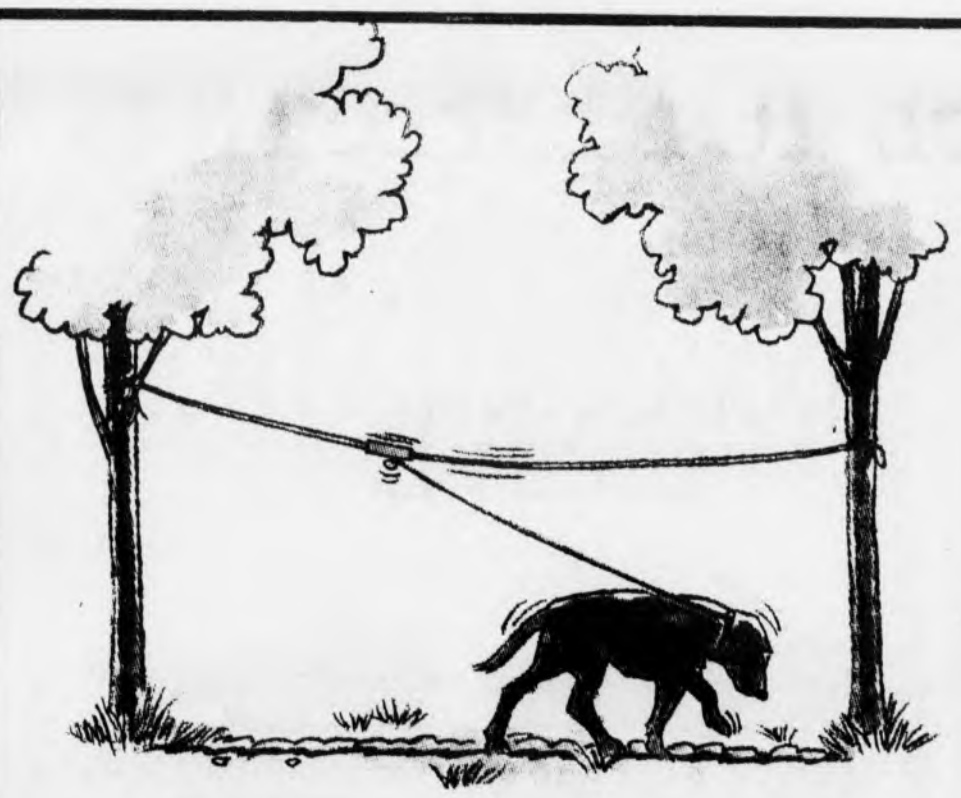
When Brecher passed away, Malley put the book aside for several months and worked on compiling her second children's book. Malley described Brecher as a friend, advisor and some one who offered unconditional help.

Malley, who remains single, is working on her next book which she is calling, "The worst of times and the best of times." It would include material not mentioned in her recent book such as the death of her daughter Vonnie and the car accident that crippled her daughter Kathie.

The next book would also detail an airplane mishap that Barbara had. Both she and her ex-husband Ed were licensed pilots. Barbara was experienced enough that she flew over to Martha's Vineyard and back during the 1970's.

Barbara Malley

Malley's first book, "Poetry with a Purpose" was co-edited by Frances Allen, a Norwell elementary school teacher, and is based on 20 humorous poem's by Barbara's mother, the late Ernestine Cobern Beyer. The verses and exercises are whimsically illustrated by Quincy artist Grace Lawrence.



Drawing on her mother's poems for younger children, Barbara compiled a second activity book, "Rhyme Time" scheduled for publication in late 1991. Lawrence's illustrations will be featured again.

Malley says her mother always encouraged her to think positively. "I like to think she's looking over my shoulder. I like to have the feeling she knows. She'd be so happy for me," said Barbara.

Malley, the grandmother of seven, is frequently seen on the Cohaset Golf Club course as soon as the weather breaks. She golfed a little as a teenager and then again when her children were in school.

Malley describes herself as racing around the golf course during her early years of recreation. "I'd hurry as a mother of four children. I didn't have much time for this fascinating game," she said.

Eventually, Malley joined the 18-Hole Ladies Club at Cohasset Gold Club. "I was nervous at first. I have met wonderful people and delightful friends," she said.

Besides making a million dollars on her book sales, Malley's main goal is to break 100 on the golf course this summer or at least before she turns 70. "It's now or never," said Malley, "How long is this body going to keep doing this?"

Five years ago, Malley was burning up the course as dusk approached and she nearly broke 100. On the 18th green she was left with a chip shot on the edge of the green at 97. "I whiffed which was the cardinal sin. I did make the next two shots and got an even 100," Malley said.

No golfer is ever really satisfied, says Malley who will want to score a 95 once she breaks 100.

"I like being out on a lovely day I like the companionship. I like the challenge. Golf is endlessly challenging," said Malley.

One of the strengths of Malley's game is her chipping for which she won and award last summer in the 18-Hole Ladies Club for Most Chip-ins. She also took honors for most ringers.

The following is an excerpt from one of Barbara Malley's letters to Darrell McClure: 'A few years ago we were on the fifth hole when I hit my second shot into the ditch. We'd had a lot of rain, so there was more than the usual amount of muddy water for the ball to conceal itself in. Poking around with a golf club, Ed gave and exclamation of triump when he spotted it.

"Careful dear, the bank looks slippery," I said, as he started over the edge. He'd been in a hurry to join me, so he was wearing sneakers instead of cleated golf shoes. One foot skidded, then the other, and down the bank he slid, looking rather like an otter, only less playful.

Not neglecting to rescue my ball, Edward clambered up the bank and stood there, his shirt and pants covered with mud.

"You go on without me," he said. "I'll walk back to the club and go home."

It was such a beautiful, balmy October day, easily in the 70's, that I hated to see him leave. "Gee, honey," I said, "It's so warm out, I'll bet that mud'll dry right out. Do you really have to go home? Couldn't you keep on playing?"

"Okay, why not," Ed said agreeably. So we continued on to the next hole. There was a foursome of men on an adjoingin tee. It wasn't hard for them to guess what had happened to Ed.

"And he was going after my ball," I reported. "You must be pretty graceful," one of the golfer said.

"Oh, I am," I said. "But I thought it was a shame he didn't stay in there and find a few more while he was at it. Couldn't convince him, though."

The golfer studied me thoughtfully. "And what is your relationship to him?"

"Well — um— (I could not tell a lie), "I'm his ex-wife."

The foursome looked at Ed as if to say, "No wonder!" and went on their way.'

Barbara Malley will be making two local appearances for book signings during the next few weeks. She will be on hand at the Buttonwood Book and Toys in Cohasset's Cushing Plaza between 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. on Saturday, April 27.

Malley will be available to autograph books at Hingham Bookport between 3-5 p.m. on Saturday, May 4.

The local author has received favorable reviews of the book thus far. "I've just been getting the nicest feedback. It's just beautiful," she said.

Finally, the book and its snazzy cover has arrived. "I knew it was going to be fun. I just couldn't wait for the fun to start. It was a slow drawn out year," said Malley.

And remember when reading Barbara's book, not to skip to the last page or you'll spoil the punchline.

10 override questions face voters on May 18

angered at the lack of budgetary information.

She said, "There is not a community in the state that does not know where their budget cuts will come from. The advisory board knows the budgets inside-out and I feel that the voters have a right to know what is going to happen if the override fails."

The PSO plans to meet on May 7 at 7:30 p.m. at the Unitarian Parish House on the Common to garner support for the override ballot. They hope to attract as many voters and citizen groups as possible to raise awareness of the budget issue.

Goedecke said, "We have asked the advisory board for a service-funded budget but they don't believe that we speak for the people in town.

"It is important for people to be made aware of what the budgetary cuts will be if the override fails."

Selectmen were criticized for itemizing what have been called "mundane expenditures" on the override ballot, including $3,000 for construction at the intersection of Beechwood and King Streets and $4,000 for an outreach worker. Joseph McElroy, a member of the capital outlay committee, questioned whether the smaller items might not have been placed in the bottom line and increased the town's $13 million budget.

Goedecke responded that if the override had been presented as one package and failed, the $60,000 state mandated triennial revaluation would be taken from the existing budget, further reducing services to the town.

She said to McElroy, "Until we received your letter we thought we should break everything out into separate items right down to the $3,000 for the Beechwood intersection.

"We are trying to give people all the choices possible. We are not out to confuse anyone."

Kornet agreed adding, "We want the electorate to know exactly what a yes vote means and what a no vote means."

'People ultimately moved the Storm across the sand'

By Capt. John G. Kuchinski Jr.

The clouds of war in Operation Desert Storm have virtually cleared. The storm front leaves in its aftermath, a national pride and an unparalleled public confidence in the armed forces. Not since World War II has the military enjoyed such tremendous support from the civilian community.

Throughout the confrontation, many in the private sector feared high casualties of much discussed worst-case-scenarios. They were surprised at the overwhelming success of the quick coalition victory.

For those of us in uniform, however, the swift victory fulfilled our personal high expectations. As members of an all-volunteer force, we were confident in our capabilities, rigorous training and unparalleled readiness. Our training and preparation paid off.

High-tech weaponry, most used for the first time in war, was undoubtedly a major factor. Utilized in massive and precise fashion, the equipment performed brilliantly in combat.

Congressional approval and the role of civilian leadership were also key. Congress gave the President and our brave men and women its full support so they were able to overwhelm the enemy with minimal casualties. President Bush promised American this would not be another Vietnam and he delivered. In turn, the Department of Defense utilized the full extent of its resources to provide great bang for the buck.

Public support was crucial, for without it, our warriors would have had neither the will nor desire to fight. Miles of yellow ribbon, tons of care packages, pages of sensitive and supportive letters — every sign of concern and encouragement breathed life into the morale of our men and women, inspiring them to move forward.

Unarguably, though, the single greatest advantage the allied coalition possessed was the manpower waging the battle. Relentless in their pursuit and tenacious in engagement, our men and women delivered a swift knockout punch.

The successful marriage of man to machine delivered huge returns in this battle. And while our inventory of sophisticated aircraft, tanks and ships was certainly instrumental, it was the human touch, guided by years of complex and consummate training that made possible this awesome demonstration of firepower. From machinist mate and jet mech to aviator and battalion commander, it was people who ultimately moved the Strom across the sand.

At South Weymouth, we mobilized approximately 400 Navy and Marine Corps Selected Reservists in support of Desert Storm. Collectively, more than 21,000 Naval reservists were activated for the effort. During this evolution, the reserve program received numerous accolades for its outstanding overall support, and achieved new respect.

Each of us should savor the satisfaction of the accomplishments associated with Desert Storm. Some of you may have been disappointed that you weren't able to be more directly involved, but the fact remains, there are no small roles, only small actors.

While not on the front lines or anchored off the coast of Kuwait, your contributions to the Allied team effort were felt in the end result. Now is the time to show your patriotism and take pride.

Capt. Kuchinski is commander of the South Weymouth Naval Air Station. He made these remarks in his column "Captain's Call" in the April issue of The Defender, the base newspaper.

Public support was crucial, for without it, our warriors would have had neither the will nor desire to fight. Miles of yellow ribbon, tons of care packages, pages of sensitive and supportive letters — every sign of concern and encouragement breathed life into the morale of our men and women, inspiring them to move forward.

❑ Congratulations go to Tony Morgan this week! Tony, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Morgan, was recently named to the winter dean's list at Choate Rosemary Hall in Wallingford, CT.

❑ It's a boy for Jeannine and Tom Colburn. Thomas Colburn weighed in at 9 pounds 9 ounces on April 18...needless to say all are excited and beside themselves with joy; just take a look at Roger and Ann Pompeo the next time you see them. They are in seventh heaven. Congratulations to all.

❑ Donna Jaggard, daughter of Mrs. Richard Flint, was recently chosen as the Number One Flight Attendant at the New York base of Pan American Airways. Donna was nominated by her peers and supervisors from the 2500 attendants based in New York. This is the first time that an attendant has ever been chosen three years in a row. She is a purser and is in her 23rd year of flying. We certainly congratulate you, Donna!

❑ Ralph Perroncello, Commander of Veterans of Foreign Wars Post #9146, is a happy man as his post's plans get underway for the Cohasset Historical Military Memorial which will be constructed at Veterans Memorial Park at Cohasset Harbor. We take our hats off to the Cohasset Police Association who donated to the cause. Don't worry, you'll get your chance too; a town-wide fund raising drive is being planned. This will be an extension of the present memorial and will honor those who participated in all of the nation's wars from the Revolution through the Persian Gulf.

❑ Cohasset lost one of its finest men last week, Ray Remick. No matter what the task, you knew that Ray could be counted on...the number of people that he lent a helping hand to are too numerous to count. Think of all the seniors that he transported to wherever they wished to go, the cancer patients that he drove great distances for their treatments, the various boards that he served on and lent his expertise to, the people he helped with their problems, both old and young...on and on and on. Ray touched so many lives, we all loved him and he will be missed.

Sophie Redfield at Cohasset News enjoys her work. She sold a winning Mass Cash ticket for $100.00 to Christine Mackay of Boston.

❑ We have a celebrity in our midst. Jeff Nothnagle, to be exact. Jeff ran in the Boston Marathon last week, and he finished in 4 hours and 5 minutes (this was his first marathon, folks, isn't that wonderful?!!) Some are wondering if the fact that Jeff's 50th birthday on April 26 could be a contributing factor...hmmm. Anyway, we extend a Laurel Wreath to you Jeff, and wish you a very happy birthday with many more to come.

❑ Sure hope that Russ Reidy is feeling much better as he reads this, and that he is all better real soon. As the old saying goes, "You can't keep a good man down," so that's enough said.

❑ Hats off to Polly Logan, so well known in these parts for her activities in politics. Polly recently went to El Salvador for a week to watch the mechanics of the electoral process and to help improve the atmosphere in which the elections take place. Knowing Polly, she had the whole place shipshape before she returned; she sure is a dynamo.

❑ Don't forget that the Cohasset Little League is holding its dance this Saturday (April 27) from 8 p.m. to midnight at the Cohasset Community Center. The tickets are $10, and there will be door prizes, raffles, hors d'oeuvres, etc. Call Jody Caron or Barbara Leahy at 383-9705 or Peggy Lewis at 383-2076, or see any of the Little League coaches. Have fun.

❑ Let's hear it for the three winners in the Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards, Kate Barrett, Renee Prisble and Ere Sakamoto. The fact that it is the most prestigious art show in Mass. makes it all the more prize-worthy. Keep up the great art work all of you.

❑ Congratulations go to Holly Perreira, who won the Humanitarian Award at the high school. Students voted based on the fact that she shows outstanding kindness and consideration to others, and has a spirit of cheerfulness.

❑ The next time you see Jack DiLorenzo, be sure to welcome him. He and his wife, Pam, and daughters Allison and Jessica are now Cohasset residents and we are sure that they will add a lot to our fair town!

❑ Be sure to call with your latest event; 'tis what makes the news possible.

Services for seniors

Services for Seniors is a service which helps make homemakers, home health aides and nurses more accessible to elders in need of assistance with personal care, meal preparation, light housekeeping, shopping, companionship, or respite care. Names of these workers are provided free of charge to elders, who then negotiate directly with the workers. Those wishing to learn more about the program are encouraged to call Mary Beth Worrick, Program Coordinator, at 383-0771 or 383-0821, Tuesday or Thursday from 9 a.m. until noon. Services for Seniors is a program of the Social Service League of Cohasset and is partially funded by South Shore Elder Services.

The board requests an answer as to whether or not Cohasset "is proposed as a sludge disposal site, and if so, how it came to be considered one of the alternative sites for MWRA sludge."

The letter, signed by Executive Secretary Greg Doyon asks that MWRA officials meet with the town, if it is a considered site.

According to Barry, he has offered to sell the landfill to the MWRA for use as a sludge dump for approximately $20 million.

He said he has not heard from the MWRA since the offer was made and he has been kept in the dark.

"They have been very quiet," he said. "A lot of what I know right now has come from the newspapers."

Barry said if the MWRA took over the landfill, no more than three or four loads of grit, which would be tested for toxic waste, would be off-loaded each day.

He said the site could be used to deposit and treat sludge, but only in small amounts because the MWRA has a plan to convert sludge into fertilizer pellets.

Barry said that there would be a "major compensation" for the hosting community.

He said the sale would benefit the town because the MWRA could make several improvements at the site, including the removal of contaminated water from the site. He maintained that there would be no affect on nearby Lily Pond, the town's drinking water source.

While he waits to hear from the MWRA, Barry will have to prepare a supplemental report for the Draft Environmental Impact Statement for the expansion that was rejected by the secretary of environmental affairs.

In her rejection, Tierney said the project has "changed substantially" from the proposal initially presented in the 1988 environmental notification form.

Tierney said "the regulatory climate had changed" since the project was filed, and there is now a DEP solid waste master plan to contend with.

Barry is seeking to expand the facility by 27.5 acres.

Tierney said the DEIR contained several changes and additions that were not included in the initial application, including: an increase in the rate of refuse filling from 229 tons per day to 500 tons per day; the possibility that a 300 tons per day recycling facility would be constructed; the possibility of the construction of a 100 tons per day materials processing facility; and the elimination of composting.

Tierney said the "DEIR does not contain sufficiently detailed information for the public and reviewing agencies to be able to evaluate the potential impacts of the project."

In the decision, she said the expansion will be subject to a three-tiered review process including: MEPA review, a site assignment process administered jointly by the board of health, DEP, and Department of Public Health.

She said the supplemental report must contain information on regulatory standards and requirements, and a discussion on the progress of the South Shore Coalition's plan to develop a regional solid waste plan and how the CHL fits into that plan.

Tierney said the report must address surface water controls, impacts to wetlands, increased traffic resulting from the expansion, odor control, and a hazardous waste and radioactive materials screening program.

She demanded more information on the possible effect the expansion would have on the town's water supply at nearby Lily Pond.

Tierney wrote that, even after reviewing the various studies, "it is extremely difficult to draw any definitive conclusion as to the potential impact of the landfill on...Lily Pond."

Tierney also told Barry to address the issue of visual impacts and provide specific plans for mitigation and improvement.

Barry said the rejection is not a major setback and he has already begun preparing the supplemental report. He expects to have the report completed within two months.

Health & $$ = stress in the 90s

blood pressure and pulse rate goes up, the adrenals pump out cortisone," he explained.

He talked about the various indicators of stress, how scientists can quantify stress and predict that someone under certain stress will be likely to experience a major illness.

"Each individual has a different threshhold of stress," he said. "By and large health and finances are the major causes of anxiety in 1991."

But then he moved on to the point, he talked about coping mechanisms.

Dr. Gillespie advocates deep breathing, the sort of breathing taught in childbirth classes and medication courses.

He breathed slowly in and out.

He talked about preparing for whatever lies ahead as a way of coping. He talked about exercise as a way of coping. The type of exercise advocated by Dr. Gillespie is the mild, aerobic sort. Walking rates well on his scale.

He advised moderation and quickly went on to talk about diet — caffeine and alcohol are not included in his suggested diet — but the diet talk is separate and coming soon.

He talked about the "Relaxation Response" which he said is brought about by 10 to 20 minutes a day of a sort of meditation. The important part of creating a relaxation response is finding a passive attitude, he said.

That's when Dr. Gillespie admitted he is a Type A (high energy) person. And that's when he brought up the idea of good stress. He said people can use stress to accomplish various goals.

"I like to talk about being high strung but fine tuned," he said.

He pointed out that without stress little would be accomplished.

"Moderation, that's the key," he said.

Dr. Gillespie gave his stress lecture last weekend. It was the first in a series of lectures at his office. The next lecture in the series is on exercise at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, May 21. Nutrition is the next topic at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, June 18. The last in the series is "Chiropractic and spinal maintenance" at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, July 16.

Down to Earth Day

Celebrating Earth Day means more than recycling a few plastic bottles.

We want to acknowledge the good people of Cohasset for being willing to put up with mandatory recycling at the Recycling and Transfer Station, the RTF.

We have gone so far as to recycle newspapers, glass and other bits of old debris. We deserve some applause.

Recycle is a great word. Who isn't in favor of taking something old and finding new use for it?

The Village Renaissance is in the process of recycling the corner of Main and Elm streets. The project is scheduled for completion around Memorial Day.

Noel Ripley and others from the Historical Society are in the process of recycling bits and pieces of Minot's Light over at Government Island.

The Chamber of Commerce and some other organizations are in the process of recycling the already successful summer weekend of art on the common into a full-scale Harborfest.

And now Burtram Pratt and others from the Veterans of Foreign Wars are ready to recycle the harbor park into an unusual and highly appropriate war memorial.

They call the new project the Cohasset Historical Military Memorial. The new walls would be built in the same style as the wall that now holds the list of the men who died in this country's wars.

The larger project would list everyone from Cohasset who has served in one of the country's wars.

The project is expected to continue for some time since one of the problems is the lack of a list of the names of those who served in some of the wars.

There are quite a few valuable projects underway in town these days.

The citizens involved are down to earth people who understand the concept of recycling. They also understand what community involvement means.

Dave Vona of Newton, the first place winner in the Rotary Race, crosses the finish line.

Art is in the eye of the beholder

To the editor:

In last Sunday's Boston Globe there appeared an article discussing Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray's crusade to end obscenity in art. This reminded me somewhat of Rita Burke's attack on the Robert Mappelthorpe exhibit at the I.C.A. earlier this year (No, Rita, I.C.A. doesn't stand for It Can't be Art!). I found it scary, but nonetheless surprising, that Cohasset produced two such closed minds.

But I understand that their hearts are in the right place; they are both women I respect for their strong voices. It is important to respect other people's ideas and it helps to see where the other side is coming from every once in a while. It's obvious, though, that most of our political leaders and legislators are not artists, or open-minded for that matter, because they try to define art, something no artist would ever do. Our representatives and fellow citizens hear about the "atrocities" of today's artists and, in an attempt to preserve their own standards of decency for everyone, they decide that funding these people is definitely not in the public's interest. It seems that some of these elected officials have been thinking in terms of the "public," but defining the public's interests according to their own beliefs. The cycle of censorship and restriction that is so flagrant in Massachusetts and in the rest of the United States right now poses more of a threat to our society than any painting or work of art. Something that encourages a one-sided, apple-pie view of the world will not only rob people of their freedom of expression, but it will make art boring (that is an atrocity). Undoubtedly, this movement to stop funding of "indecent" art will trigger a movement in the art world as well...it'll probably come to be known as the Repressionistic period. The way to approach the decisions of the NEA and the MCC is not to holler "sacrilege" upon hearing a rumor about that disgusting exhibit that is being funded with our tax dollars. Respect people's creations, help them nurture them, and decide for yourself what they're about – without deciding for everyone else.

Remember, you don't have to like it in order for it to be art. In response to the Globe article, all I have to say is: If your child is going on a field trip and you don't know what's there, it's not the artist's fault. As for the "good of the society," at least museum-goers and art-lovers will come to exhibits with an open mind. I doubt if Mary Jeanette or Rita will come at all.

Fred Petersen sets editor straight

To the Editor:

In the issue of the Mariner dated April 4, 1991, there is a front page story headed "Rotary Club runs 50th anniversary," by Patricia Desmond, member staff. The first sentence of this story reads: "None of the original group of Cohasset Rotarians are left. But 50 years is a long time." Yes Patricia, 50 years is a long time but as of today I am 85 years, 4 months and 7 days old, and like the late James Michael Curley I have set my goal for 125.

It was my privilege to be a charter member of the Cohasset Rotary Club, and its first secretary. There are, to the best of my knowledge, two other charter members who might appreciate being acknowledged as living: Dwight Agnew and Robert "Bob" James. I handled the ticket sales for the Charter Night Great Event, and 500 persons were in attendance. Burt Bristol was president, Charlie Stegmaier, vice president, Fred Petersen, secretary, Ed Mulvey Sr., treasurer, Milt Kerr, sergeant at arms. Rotary International is a truly great organization.

I do not know if rotary still holds its meetings in that old landmark the "Bates Building," but if it does I sincerely hope the town will have decided to keep the property in its possession. This building really is a part of old Cohasset, and it has been of great value in accommodating various operations. The first school lunchroom was there, the rationing board during World War Two, it was the office of the water department, the commissioners met there, the health board, Red Cross, etc., etc., and I think the V.F.W. should be able to use it.

It is becoming a bit difficult for me to push out a letter like this with my pick and peck typing, legally blind, and again, yes Patricia, 50 years is a long time, but I will always treasure Cohasset as my "home town" and want to keep it on track. It was such a beautiful town in the days of the great horse show, Tower Brothers Store, the Red Wing, etc. There was standing room only at town meeting when my dad, Gus Petersen and Willie O. Souther held forth on the town hall floor.

Signing off.

Agreement to reduce acid rain signed

By Julie Belaga
Regional Administrator
U.S. Environmental Protection Agency

Recognizing that pollution does not respect national boundaries President Bush and Prime Minister Mulrony signed a historic agreement addressing transboundary air pollution. Through cooperative and coordinated action, pollution reductions could benefit both Canada and the United States.

The agreement contains specific emission standards for reducing sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxides emissions, the precursors of acid rain. For sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxides, the agreement commits the United States to implement the requirements of the Clean Air Act Amendments, which were signed into law by President Bush in November, 1990. It also commits Canada to implement current air quality requirements, and to adopt several stringent new requirements for controlling pollution.

The U.S. has committed to reduce sulfur dioxide emissions to 10 million tons below 1980 levels by the year 2000 and to establish a permanent national cap on sulfur dioxide emissions of 8.95 million tons per year for electric utilities by 2010.

Canada will reduce sulfur dioxide emissions in its seven easternmost provinces to 2.3 million tons by 1994, and cap emissions at that level from 1995 through 1999. Mr. Mulrony has also agreed to adopt a permanent national emissions cap of 3.2 million tons of sulfur dioxide per year by 2000.

Both the U.S. and Canada will reduce total annual emissions of nitrogen oxides by the year 2000.

Our two countries will no longer view their mutual air sheds as divisible. We look to mutual development of technologies and regulatory principles to benefit both countries, including market-based approaches to regulation pioneered in the Clean Air Act of 1990 that get the greatest environmental protection at the lowest total cost to each of us.

This collaborative effort is an historic one for the two nations. The agreement sets a standard of excellence that challenges both countries. It's a challenge we look forward to meeting.

Override questions scrutinized

To the Selectmen:

If the 4/16/91 Ledger article "10 Questions Likely for Override Ballot" is accurate, it reflects a lack of confidence by the Selectmen in the ability of the electorate to vote intelligently.

The following should not be override articles:

Cost	Item	Reason
$60,000 (45)	Real Estate Revaluation	State Mandated
$20,000 (9)	Paint Town Hall Maintenance	Normal
$ 4,169 (31)	Council-on-Aging Outreach Worker	Small Amount
$ 3,000 (14)	King and Beechwood Street Reconfiguration	Small Amount

Capital items greater than $10,000 that represent new investments in property or equipment should be override articles, but it is the responsibility of the Selectmen to include predictable cyclic maintenance in the operating budget. Jane Goedecke opposes any electorate review of the almost $13,000,000 Article 3 operating budget as suggested by Gerard Keating because "people will be in the voting booth all day." However, you (Selectmen) apparently aren't reticent to waste the voters' time on state mandated revaluation, routine maintenance, and $3,000/$4,000 articles ($3,000/$4,000 items are important, but should be part of the Operating Budget as recommended by the Advisory Committee and Selectmen). I feel like a dog being thrown a bone.

As I stated at the Saturday Town Meeting, you have set the stage for an approximate 8-10 percent budget increase:

$12,978,722 (3)	Operating Budget + 4.15% (including Water Dept.)
30,556 (4)	3% nonunion increase
225,000 (est)	assumes 3% union increase (precedent set by Article 4)
115,000 (27)	School Windows
25,000 (28)	School Writing Lab
60,000 (45)	Revaluation
30,000 (19)	Government Island Duplex
20,000 (9)	Paint Town Hall
4,169 (31)	Outreach Worker
3,000 (14)	King/Beechwood
13,500 (32)	Maintenance Equipment
9,800 (17)	Garage Roof
25,000 (21)	Health Insurance
2,500 (44)	Harbormaster Toilet
8,204 (S-4)	Replace Harbor Dock
1,716 (S-5)	Harbor Patrols
40,864 (S-6)	Fire Department Overtime
- 1,000 (38)	Rebate: Reroofing Town Hall
- 11,656 (39)	Rebate: Reroofing Osgood School
13,580,375	(+1,118,844 or +9% versus 1991 Fiscal Appropriation)

The above list does not include article 33 (Resurfacing Roads $76,500) and article 56 (Sewer Construction - borrowing $481,000) which were postponed for later consideration.

As you know, the Capital Budget Committee had identified Fiscal 93-96 requests totaling $8,866,000. In addition, loans authorized and unissued total $3,533,656.32 as of December 31, 1990 (although, that amount would be - $2,200,000 if current sewage estimates prevail and even less if the Sewer Commission successfully realizes its alternative solution).

It seems to me that articles 32, 21, and S-6 (if possible) would have been better choices for override articles than articles 45, 9, 31, and 14.

Also, I don't accept slight-of-hand rationalizations that try to suggest Water Department increased costs don't come out of the taxpayers' pocket, or that borrowing/alternative financing arrangements won't ultimately be costed to the taxpayer.

Let the voters know the facts and their collective wisdom will equal or surpass that of the Board of Selectmen. Personally, I prefer to support intelligent local overrides rather than hold the Town hostage to the grotesque State/Federal bureaucracy and their handouts.

Respectfully,
Joseph R. McElroy

P.S. Was the Conservation Trust $50,000 contribution to the Lilly Pond land taking included in Water Department anticipated revenues?

Sports coverage hit hard

To the Editor:

I am currently a freshman at Flagler College in St. Augustine, Florida. Cohasset High School sends me the Mariner every week and I enjoy reading about events at home. I played baseball and football for C.H.S. from eighth grade through graduation. My younger brother, Chris, is now a freshman playing baseball and football.

I am writing because I do not feel that you are doing an adequate job covering sports in Cohasset. With budget cuts due to proposition two and a half, voters need reason to override. With some positive support from you by writing more articles in support of our extremely young, up and coming varsity sports teams, the Skippers can be saved from the evil proposition two and a half.

Remember the 1987 football (9-1), basketball (state champs), and baseball (South Shore Division champs) teams? Given a chance, Cohasset sports can once again reach that height. The talent is there and the numbers are there, but the support is only half there. With some of your support, the ball can get rolling again.

Michael Rolandelli

Fine dining praised by writer

To the Editor:

One of the best kept secrets on the South Shore is La Dalat, the restaurant in Hull serving Vietnamese and Chinese cuisine. Easy to miss, tucked away near the arcades at 181 Nantasket Avenue (telephone 925-4587), south of the carousel, La Dalat offers a delightful break from the rigors of preparing a meal at home. The food is light, but the size of the servings is ample. They open for economical lunches at 11:30 a.m. and have a full bar stocked with your favorite beer, wine or tropical drinks.

The soups are a marvel, particularly the La Dalat Special Soup — an interesting blend of white asparagus and real crabmeat in a soothing broth. The appetizers include a healthful salad made of excruciatingly thinly sliced cabbage and carrots, topped with shrimp and peanuts and a heavenly spicy sauce. Entrees include standard chicken, pork and beef options as well as vegetarian dishes. The house specialties range from such seafood favorites as the Special Hot Pot, Neptune Delight, Nha Trnag Fisherman, and Golden Prawn with La Dalat Sauce to Hunan Delight, Viet Namese Pizza (not at all like the Italian kind) and General Gau's Chicken.

For a nice evening across from the ocean in a gentle immaculate atmosphere with a family touch, try La Dalat the next time you want to eat the best food available on the South Shore.

Now is the time to protest state aid cuts

To the Editor:

The question facing local officials in your community and across the state is how to decrease local budgets enough to absorb another $300 million cut in state revenue sharing without decimating basic local services.

The answer is that they can't.

Now that the state has released its estimate of what communities will receive from the state and the cuts for communities are known, it will be possible for your readers to assess the amount of disruption to the public safety, education, and public health services these decreases will cause in your communities.

If the Governor's proposal to decrease state revenue sharing is accepted by your state Representatives and Senators, this will be the fourth straight year of such cuts and the fourth year that some portion of the services that all of us depend on every day will be diminished. The 1.2 million voters who supported Question 5 in November, seeking to provide some protection for their local services, and the residents of the state who opposed by 73 percent this $300 million cut in state revenue sharing in a recent Becker Poll are not being heard by state government.

State revenue sharing supports local services. It is a share of the taxes that the state gets from the same people who live in the communities in Massachusetts and rely on these essential services. It is time to make certain that some of these dollars come home to support the costs of police and fire coverage, local public school education, libraries and elderly services.

Over the next few weeks, the Legislature will be considering the Governor's FY92 budget proposal, which contains these cuts. Now is the time to inform your legislators about the importance of your local programs and services and your opposition to deep cuts in state revenue sharing.

Sincerely,
Sheila Cheimets

Old Boys defeat Exxon Tigers

By John Kinchla

Spectators at the "Patriots Day Old Boys" hockey game had a lot to cheer about, and it wasn't all hockey. The game between the high schoolers (Cohasset Exxon Tigers) and the "Old Boys" was also a celebration and homecoming for two returning "Desert Storm" participants, brothers, Brian and Tim Curran.

Brothers were in abundance at this contest. For the "Old Boys," the Bowens (Jack and Dan), the Durkins (John and Joe), the Evans (Larry and Rick) and the Currans (Sean, Brian and Tim) played.

For the high schoolers, the Reynolds (Mike and Pat) and the Kinchlas (John and Brendan) played.

Familiar Cohasset faces among the "Old Boys" were Don O'Neill, Lee Wilson, Frank Mahoney, Phil Smith, Steve Daley and Ed Straughn.

The "Old Boys" gave the youngsters a clinic once again, though the kids buzzed "Old Boy" goalie, Phil Smith before they accepted their fates.

Tiger goalie, Jeff Stone faced a ferocious barrage from the "Old Boys" while turning away 25 shots. Jeff tried to assert himself in the net, but the "Old Boys" were too tough for the kids.

High school defensemen, Tim Conroy, Charlie Shields, Mike Noble and John Kinchla played well against the "Old Boys," but not well enough to prevent the through-the-crease-passes and the attendant scores.

Forwards Mike Reynolds, John Murphy, Pat Reynolds, Brendan Kinchla, Matt Graves and Chris McKenna played exceptionally well against the older, more experienced "Old Boys."

The Tigers played without high scoring forward, Charlie Smith, Dan DeMichele, Anthony Wigmore, Brian Buckley and All-Star defenseman, Kevin Mulcahy. The "Old Boys" played without a fourth Curran brother, Daniel, who is still in the Persian Gulf.

The next "Old Boys" game is scheduled for Thursday, May 23, at the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham at 7:40 p.m. We hope at that time to have Daniel Curran in hockey uniform for the "Old Boys." The Cohasset Exxon Tigers are sponsored in the Pilgrim Arena's High School Development Program by Leo's Exxon on Route 3A.

Fiori's hockey Tigers defeat Canton

Stellar goal-tending combined with a courageous offensive effort and a tenacious defense vaulted the Exxon Tigers into a first place tie with Quincy for top honors in the Pilgrim Arena's 10 team High School Developmental Spring Hockey League.

The Tigers came out flying in this contest. The team's intensity was evident from the opening faceoff. Cohasset goalie, Jim Rosano, playing for Jeff Stone, turned away several Canton shots, before his defensemen finally settled in. He then proceeded to awe the 150 spectators present with his acrobatics in the net. Rosano, appearing in his first game since the end of the high school season in February, played a spectacular game for the Tigers. He shut out the dead-eyed Canton shooters for 30 minutes while Cohasset accumulated 2 goals of their own.

Cohasset 7th grader, Jeff Tosi, replaced Rosano in the nets at the 27 minute mark. Tosi, playing in his first varsity appearance ever, played magnificently. During his time in the net, Tosi turned away 14 Canton shots. Both he and Rosano stopped several Canton breakaways, while chilling the audience with their coolness.

With a 2 to 0 lead, and with Jeff Tosi in the net, Cohasset's 3rd, 4th and 5th offensive lines played zealously against Canton's 1st, 2nd and 3rd offensive lines. Mistakes and penalties caused by inexperience and fatigue reversed Cohasset's momentum, and Canton scored twice to tie the game.

At this point, Tosi left the game to a thundering applause and the elder Jim Rosano was reinstated. Cohasset's more experienced 1st and 2nd lines returned in- tact and stepped up the pace. The game's outcome was to be decided over the final 9 minutes.

Cohasset Co-Captain and All Star defenseman, Kevin Mulcahy took immediate control. Mulcahy took the puck from behind the Cohasset net, rushed the length of the ice, angled in on the Canton goalie and snapped the puck between his pads. Two minutes later, Mike Noble scored his third goal of the evening. Two minutes later, Mike Reynolds potted an open net goal.

The team played three games and had one poorly attended practice over school vacation week. Prior to the game, the team had concerns about missing and vacationing players. First string goal tender, Jeff Stone; Winger, Brian Buckley; Winger, Dan DeMichele; and Winger, Charlie Smith did not play, while Kevin Mulcahy and Anthony Wigmore returned just in time to play. While versatile 8th and 9th grade wings Mike Shields and Charlie Endris are unavailable until after the varsity lacrosse season ends.

During the last two weeks, Cohasset's outstanding 9th grade, 1st string defenseman Tim Conroy has carried the team forward with his fortitude. In this contest, several other players stepped forward to inspire the win. Defenseman/winger Charlie Shields played his best game ever in a Cohasset uniform. Shields blocked shots with his body, cleared the puck well when he did skate into the corners, and carried the puck with confidence out of his end. He held the puck intelligently when necessary until he found either an open man or open ice. In this game, he showed the potential to be a South Shore League All Star next season.

First string winger, John Murphy skated hard into the corners (a la Wayne Cashman) and made the smart centering pass. He stayed out of the penalty box this week and he provided the solid on-ice leadership that this young team needs to see for it to be successful.

Mike Reynolds, Kevin Mulcahy, Mike Noble, John Kinchla and Pat Reynolds power skated through the opposition. Each of the above boys played excellent games. They played unselfishly. They skated out of their usual shifts and frequently out of their usual positions.

Improving and contributing younger players among the Tigers who saw considerable action in this game were Matt Graves, Brendan Kinchla, Chris McKenna, Anthony Wigmore and Mike Riley.

This was a game that the boys worked hard to win and the fans enjoyed.

Cohasset plays Marshfield next Saturday, April 27, at 8:30 p.m. at the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham. The team concludes their spring season on Sunday, May 5, at 3 p.m. against Stoughton. Admission is free.

Showers stall spring soccer

By Carol Riley

A record four inches of rain last weekend forced cancellation or postponement of many Coastal Youth Soccer League games on Sunday. Here's how Cohasset teams fared in Saturday's contests:

Boys Under 10-1, the "Hotspurs," chalked up their third victory and second shutout of the Spring Soccer season by defeating another Cohasset team, Boys under 10-3, by a score of 7-0 at Miliken Field. The "Spurs" had several firsts. This game marked the first time this season in which every member of the team was involved with the scoring, either by making saves as goalkeeper, by assisting on the scores, or by kicking the ball into the net. Steven Sceery scored the first goal, which also was his first goal of the season. Nick Herzog also scored his first of the season as did Doug O'Brien. Both Charlie Dean and Scott Chisholm scored twice to round out the scoring. Eric Hanian and Charlie Dean assisted on three goals. Other "Hotspurs" who chalked up assists on scoring plays were Marc Verrochi, Dennis Rooney, Ben Peterson, Jay Rasmussen and Chris Golden. Wiley Wakeman and Nick Herzog split goalkeeping duties and pushed aside four shots each. Game captains were Marc Verochi and Jay Rasmussen. The team is coached by Charlie Dean. The previous weekend, the "Hotspurs" whipped Hanover 3-0, with Charlie Dean scoring a hat trick. An outstanding game by all players, especially talented rookies: Doug O'Brien, Mark Verrochi and Ben Peterson. The shutout was shared by stingy net minders, Eric Hanian and Dennis Rooney.

Boys Under 8-1 had their first victory of the season over Cohasset's Boys Under 8-4 team with a big 6-1 win. Goals were scored by Paul Previte (4), David DeVito and Curtis Kahn. Carter Noon made the single goal for BU8-4. Despite the loss, John Cotter was outstanding in goal and Jimmy French was a star at forward.

Boys Under 12-1 lost a heartbreaker to Marshfield, 5-0. Goalkeepers Ely Kahn and Pat Hurley were valiant in the net.

Boys Under 12-2 scored a 4-0 shutout over Marshfield in an away game. Scoring goals for Cohasset: Greg Bilton (2), Jeff Thompson and Nate Cotter. Stephen Kovach was outstanding at halfback, while Ryan McWilliams played strong defense, according to coach Paul Cotter.

Boys Under 14-1, playing with only two subs, lost to Kingston on their field 3-1. Pat Reynolds scored Cohasset's goal. Kennie Leahy was very strong at forward, while Chris McKenna made several great saves in goal.

Girls Under 14-1 destroyed Hingham on their home turf 5-0, with Cohasset goals by Danielle Nohe (2), Melinda Johansen, Molly Pease and Martina Snyder. Goalkeeper Emily D'Urso had

The Cohasset High School varsity boys' tennis team opened its season with a 3-2 win over Rockland. The victory was clinched by the second doubles team of freshman Tim Brister and sophomore Bill Jordan.

After winning the first set in a tiebreaker, Brister and Jordan lost the second set 1-6 and came on strong in the third 6-2 to capture the match victory.

The Cohasset Skippers are under the direction of first-year coach Rich Chamberlain who follows the late Eddie Amaral as coach.

Senior co-captain Pat Milligan continued with his undefeated mark of last year as he beat his first singles opponent by a score of 6-0, 6-0.

"He's a very powerful player. I can't see anyone beating him. He could very easily be state champ," said Chamberlain.

It's doubtful that Milligan has a weakness in his game. His strokes are consistent and powerful. "He's got a strong serve and volley game. He defintely plays a power game. He hits the ball very hard on both the forehand and backhand. He's a real competitive kid," said Chamberlain.

Milligan is planning to attend the University of Florida next year.

Senior co-captain Caleb Slotnik is playing at the number two singles spot. He lost to his Rockland opponent 1-6, 4-6. "We're looking for a strong season from him. He's also a strong leader on the team," said Chamberlain.

After a slow start, the Cohasset first doubles team of Mike Cisneros and Dan DeMichele took care of Rockland in three sets. Having lost the first set, 5-7 the Skipper team posted wins of 6-3 and 6-2 to take the win. "They had some trouble getting warmed up," said Chamberlain.

This team of Cisneros and DeMichele ran a record of 10-1 last year losing only to Norwell. "They compliment each other well. Cisneros, who got accepted by early decision to Harvard, is described as the team technician while DeMichele is more of and enthused and emotional player, accroding to Chamberlain. DeMichele is only a junior.

Junior John Brister lost his third singles competition by a score of 3-6, 3-6. He'll be working to build his confidence. "He's got a great backhand," says Chamberlain. "He really hits the ball extremely well. He's very consistent. Very steady."

Eighth grader Joey Slotnick is sidelined with a broken ankle which he injured before the start of the season. He was expected to get his cast off last week.

Senior Doug Drysdale will probably see some action at second doubles. Two more players rounding out the squad are junior Oroande Alli and sophomore Safche Ordelheide who are expected to be a doubles team of the future for Cohasset.

During recent practices Cohasset is concentrating on conditioning. Chamberlain has the players running sprints, the bleachers as well as doing situps and pushups. He is working to increase their level of physical training as well as the tennis drills.

"If they lose, it won't be because they ran out of gas," said Chamberlain. "They have a good hardworking spirit. They're wanting to work hard. They've been very motivated to work hard."

In dedicating the season to their late coach Eddie Amaral, several of the team players are wearing his initials on the back of their tennis shoes. "Any success the team has will be attributed to him," said Chamberlain.

Golf team headed by Franey

The Cohasset High School golf team is under the direction of longtime coach Jim Franey.

The Skippers suffered an opening (8-1) loss to Rockland before the start of school vacation. Cohasset is hoping to improve on its record of 3-11-2 of last year.

The team has been described as a group of veterans. Senior Mark Batts has been put at the top spot because of his steady golf. Junior Joe Gagliano is considered to be consistent for Cohasset.

Senior Jon Mitchell had a tough start but has rebounded. "He works very hard on his game," said Franey.

John Hunter, a senior, is considered a good team player. Junior Brendan McCarthy has shown steady improvement. Franey is expecting a good season from Mike Burns.

The two alternates on the starting team are Chris Brown and Ryan Sawchuck. Two senior girls are enthused about the season and they are Jen Plante and Melissa Christoffel.

Rounding out the team are Matt Morris, Robin Ordelheide, Jason Porter and Jason Sullivan.

her second shutout of the season. Playing fine defense were Liz Corcoran and Jessica Snow.

Girls Under 14-2 lost a close one to Plymouth 2-1. Megan Fahey scored on an assist by Catie Campbell. Coach Sandy Theriault commended midfielders Jayne Singleton, Jessie Sandell and Beth Bestick for their fine play.

Girls Under 10-2, playing with only one substitute, lost to Hanover in an away game 0-2. Both goals were scored near the end of the game when the players were exhausted. Coach Nino D'Urso praised goalkeeper Jacqueline Kahn who made many saves and also stopped a penalty kick. Outstanding on defense were Alexandra D'Urso, Karyn Gray and Kyralea Cogill.

Schools lose $170,000 without override

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

If the override fails, the school system will be asked to absorb most of the cuts.

It would mean school reductions of:

- two teachers
- five support staff and substitutes (these first two items would save $70,215)
- higher athletic user fees to save $25,000
- $25,000 in maintenance items – including the painting of Osgood School.
- $41,730 in educational supplies including texts.
- plus cuts of $6,400 for other categories, including standardized testing.

School Superintendent Stephen Hart said the cuts can be likened to termites eating away the infrastructure of the school system.

Last week members of the advisory committee and other town officials began working out the budget plans in the event the override fails.

Monday night school committee worked on its list of cuts which comes to $170,000.

The override election is May 18. At that time voters will be asked to approve a $142,000 general government override plus nine other exceptions. The full amount of the override requests amounts to $283,000. Most of the projects included in the override - like the painting at town hall - would be dropped if the related question fails.

But the revaluation will be done whether or not voters agree to the $60,000 request.

School Committee Chairman Barbara Bliss explained that due to the need to find the money for state-mandated revaluation, the actual budget cuts for town government would come to $202,000.

"I wasn't at the meeting but as I understand it they are asking the school system to take a greater share of the cuts because the other budgets were already level-funded and we went into town meeting with a level-service budget."

Hart said he finds the process "very distasteful."

He pointed out that the override would mean $90.40 more in taxes a year for a home assessed at $300,000 "not to diminish its importance but to highlight what its actual cost will be," Hart said.

He said he would make the cuts in a way that would

Congregational church celebrates new expansion

By Donna Cogliano
Mariner correspondent

Nearly 250 people gathered at Cohasset's Second Congregational Church for the dedication celebration of the new addition to the church building on Sunday.

The addition located at the rear of the church includes a small steeple and a children's chapel. There are several new offices, children's classrooms and a nursery included in the building's extension.

Plans for the addition began several years ago and the groundbreaking was held last July.

A dedication service was held at 3 p.m. on Sunday. The United Brass Quintet performed along with the church choir. Members of the quintet were Ted Haines, Arthur Mahoney, Robert Ferrante, Robert Nichols and Steven Shaw. The music was directed by Robert Leavitt.

Rev. Gary Ritts spoke at the morning service comparing the new addition to planting a garden. He said, "We have the plant. Now we need to bear fruit."

The church building provides the framework for people to reach out to other, said Ritts. The building

Cove will be dredged by the state in the fall

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

This fall Cohasset Cove will be dredged by the state to reduce the navigation hazards lying near the channel.

The cove is located southwest of Cohasset Harbor and is bordered by Margin and Border streets.

The cove was dredged in 1968 as a part of a federal project. The channel and inner harbor were dredged in 1978 as part of a federal maintenance project.

The state Department of Environmental Management has applied for permission to dredge the cove. Dredging of the harbor will have to wait until more money is available.

According to the Environmental Notification Form for the dredging, the project will "improve navigation safety and provide additional mooring area" in Cohasset Cove.

The DEM has $225,000 funded for the project, which is estimated to cost $200,000.

Work will be restricted to between the months of November and March, "a period of relatively low wildlife density and not a period of active...fish migration," according to the report.

A federally sponsored maintenance dredging of the channel and inner harbor was conducted in 1978.

There has never before been a state sponsored dredging of the cove.

Sediment from the cove will be dredged and trucked away. Boulders, which create a safety hazard for passing boats, will be removed at five locations, the report said.

Approximately 19,000 cubic yards of sediment and 640 cubic yards of rock will be removed.

Because the dredging exceeds a threshold of 10,000 cubic yards a MEPA review process was required.

Nucci Vine Associates of Newburyport, a consultant for the town, handled the ENF and is coordinating the review process.

According to Harbormaster Irving Gadow, the dredging will make the cove safer and will allow for more moorings.

Beer kegs to be tagged to track those buying alcohol for minors

By Andrew MacLellan
Mariner correspondent

In a presentation that has been lauded by both the board of selectmen and local police, drug and alcohol committee chairman Kenneth Knowles outlined plans Monday night to adopt a new town-wide alcohol prevention plan known as "Tag a Keg".

Already standard operating procedure in much of Plymouth County, the plan regulates the dispersion of kegs of beer which often find their way into underage parties.

"If police are called to a party where a keg is used to serve minors, the adult who bought the beer may be traced through an identification number on the keg," said Knowles.

"This includes kegs found in fields or that have been improperly disposed of."

In addition the deposit price on a barrel of beer will rise from $10 to $50.

"Suddenly, the deposit money becomes very dear," he said, "especially among younger kids who may try to have someone buy the keg for them."

The program began in Greenfield and has gained impetus through MADD (Mothers Against Drunk Driving). Concerned citizens are also actively lobbying the ABCC (Alcohol and Beverage Control Commission) to implement this precautionary tactic on a state-wide level.

Knowles also discussed preliminaries for holding a "drug awareness weekend" in Cohasset during the last

Cohasset Savings reports loss

Cohasset Savings Bank has reported a loss of $13,000, or $.01 per share, for the first quarter ended March 31,1991. This compares with net income of $57,000, or $.06 per share, for the first quarter of 1990.

"While the regional economy still continues stagnant, the steep decline in the bank's earnings that has occurred during the past year appears to be slowing down, " Donald E. Bates, President, stated. "This marginal loss is the smallest in the last four quarters and we have been able to reduce our quarterly provision for loan losses. We have also been able to maintain a strong capital position of 17 percent.

The provision for loan losses in the first quarter of 1991 was $150,000, compared to $680,000, $500,000 and $337,000 for the fourth, third, and second quarters of 1990, respectively.

At the bank's annual meeting held on April 18,1991, stockholders re-elected the following four directors for three-year terms under the staggered board plan: Peter A. Cook, Marshfield, Chairman of the Board, Claims Monitoring Services, Inc., a health insurance company; Gordon E. Flint, Cohasset, former Cohasset Town Treasurer; Arthur L. Lehr, Jr., Cohasset, former owner and Chief Executive Officer, Lehr & Barnes Insurance Agency, Inc.; and Wayne H. Robbins, Cohasset, President and Treasurer, Robbins Garage.

Cohasset Savings is a community thrift institution founded in 1845 and serving a popular residential area of Massachusetts' South Shore. Assets at March 31,1991 were $66,675,000 and stockholders' equity was $11,457,000 at that date.

Official pare $ if override fails

After several town departments responded as to what kinds of cuts each could suffer least painfully, selectmen began to scale back the FY '92 budget by $75,000 Monday night.

Executive secretary Gregory Doyan had sent messages to those departments under selectmen auspices, inviting them to make up their own list of cuts if the proposed $200,000 override does not pass at special election.

This information was then passed on to the advisory board who will take further action.

The cuts, which total $75,876 affect almost every department.

Selectmen were concerned that a few of the cuts were too severe and should reconsidered.

A suggestion to close the town hall on Fridays and scale back employees hours by five percent was offered as a possible alternative to drastic cuts to the Council on Aging budget, the further reduction of town hall custodian hours from 35 to 20 hours, and the elimination of the town accountant's computer system.

No unanimous decision was forthcoming, as selectmen cited problems with combining hourly cutbacks with a wage freeze proposed by the advisory board.

Budgetary concerns and the override issue will be discussed in open forum on May 8 at the Unitarian Parish House, sponsored by the PSO.

Selectman chairman Ned Tebbetts, school committee chairman Barbara Bliss and others will discuss the same issues May 9 on Cohasset cable station 3.

Citizens to go to 'Jail'

Some of the South Shore's most prominent citizens will be "arrested" and go to "jail," all in the good cause of helping the fight against cancer, as the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society stages its third annual "Jail and Bail" caper at the new Presidents Place complex in Quincy Square on Wednesday and Thursday, May 15 and 16.

"Jail and Bail" is a unique fund-raising project that involves the "all-in-fun" arrest of individuals, their "sentence" on outrageous charges, and their need to call friends and business associates to bail themselves out of jail.

Mayor James A. Sheets of Quincy is Honorary Chairperson of this event with Bruce J. Ayers, Quincy City Clerk John M. Gillis, and Martin E. Paul as Co-Chairs. Representatives from the nine communities served by the South Shore Unit make up the committee: Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth.

Surprise arrests can be requested by making a tax deductible donation of $25 to the American Cancer Society. For information call the American Cancer Society area office, 341-4210, or any local committee member.

Interior LifeStyles. DECORATING

NEW LIFE FOR AN OLD ROOM

A print fabric can be the starting point for the color scheme that will breathe new life into a stale room. Decorating with a lively floral, a vibrant stripe, or, a sharp geometric print can bring a revitalized look to a humdrum room

Select a printed fabric with a deep rich background color, and one where the pattern ties together the colors that you have to work with in the existing room.

You can create the most impact by using your print at the windows, perhaps, in a soft quilted valance over draperies, or a gracious balloon shade, or for a more contemporary feeling, on vertical blinds.

It is not always necessary to have the pattern on your upholstered pieces, although that can create a most dramatic change. Instead, the print can be introduced around the room with lots of accent pillows on sofas and chairs.

Probably the most effective way of using your new print is by draping a sturdy inexpensive wood table. There is nothing more luxurious than the feeling created by a skirted table. Keep in mind that the skirt should not only touch the floor, but for added elegance it should be a couple of inches longer than the height of the table so that the skirt flairs out gracefully. An alternate treatment could be a solid colored skirt in a less costly fabric, topped with a generous square of the print.

Another charming way to bring the fabric vertically into your room is with a folding screen. Your choice could be to gather the print on a frame, or use it to cover hollowcore boards.

Mixing and matching prints and colors can bring even more vitality into a room. The trick is in how you treat the different scales of the patterns and in matching the colorways. Professional interior decorators not only have the eye to see what goes with what, but they have learned through training what works to make a beautiful, comfortable, and coordinated room.

New addition dedicated at Second Congregational will bring people in and serve people to help them grow spiritually, he added.

He spoke of energy and life in raising spirits. "Our building is just a means to an end," said Ritts.

Rev. John Benbow, former minister, now minister at First Congregational Church in Milton, was a guest speaker at the dedication service. He read from an old sermon where the Milton church was first dedicated. He said, "The building itself is but a meeting place."

Hubert van der Lught, chairman of the building committee, was also a keynote speaker at the service. He said, "We did not always agree. We often disagreed but the momentum was always forward...We learned about each other's strengths and weaknesses. We learned this is a congregation of chiefs." The church people responded with laughter at that point.

"It is now up to the entire congregation to do things with the new building...new energy," he said.

Hubert said, "I predicted that you would feel like inviting the neighbors and having a party. Well, here we are."

In closing he said, "Let us furnish this church with intense education programs for children ages one to one hundred...Let us be grateful to be here. Let us enjoy it one day at a time. Today is one special day."

Rev. Terry Martinson of the Old South Union Congregational Church of South Weymouth spoke at the church ceremony. "I congratulate you on the wonderful job of building and remodelling...It's marvelous," he said.

Martinson outlined three things that

Second Congregational Church
United Church of Christ

come to mind when you hear the word church: building, hour of worship and people. "The challenge for you is to be God's hand at work in the commonwealth in the community of Cohasset with this congregation and with in the world," he said.

Martinson said that when people finish a project that they have a tendency to sit back and admire what was done. Martinson cautioned the congregation not to relax or coast. "Your work is just beginning. What you've just finished is the easy part. Now comes the difficult part of building the church... of helping the church come alive. But now is the time to begin a new chapter in the history of the Second Congregational Church. Now is the time for all of you to create new memories to be passed on from one generation to another," he said.

Ushers at the church service included: Herb Marsh, Ralph Coley, John Campbell and Stu Pratt. Those who did readings at the dedication ceremony were: Ralph Coley, Maren Cameron, Jessica Jenkins and Brian Conant.

The Second Congregational Church is affiliated with the United Church of Christ. The "Second" stems from the church's origin as a group of people who separated themselves from the town's first church (First Parish Church on the Common) because they were dissatisfied with the liberalism of the minister. After meeting some time in the home of one member of the group, they decided in November 1824 to form a new congregation, build a meeting house and call a minister.

This resulted in a bitter controversy

Second Congregational Church
United Church of Christ

which reportedly persisted for many years. The new church, once established, grew slowly. After 30 years, the building was too small and an extension was built to the front of the building in 1854. In 1878, the building was raised several feet and Bates Hall was constructed.

Further expansion created a kitchen and new classroom in 1928 just before a disastrous fire in 1929. Most of the interior was rebuilt after the fire.

The Christian Education addition was completed in 1964. An elevator was installed in 1985. Second Congregational Church is accessible for the handicapped.

Mosquitos transmit deadly disease

One tiny mosquito can make great big problems for your dog.

Heartworm disease is a potentially fatal condition transmitted to dogs by the bite of an infected mosquito.

"Heartworm is on the rise in the Northeast and has been reported throughout the United States and in Canada," said Dr. John Rush, a cardiologist and assistant professor of medicine at Tufts University School of Veterinary Medicine.

"Although heartworm disease can be treated, the procedure may be complicated and costly. Prevention of the disease is definitely the best cure," he said.

As part of your dog's annual veterinary check up, a simple blood test is the first step in preventing heartworm. In the Northeast, testing is recommended in early spring, just before mosquitos emerge. Following a negative blood test, dogs can be protected from infection with preventive medication.

"Dog owners have the choice of giving either a daily or monthly tablet through December," Rush said. A preventative should never be given until a dog has a negative blood test, because a severe reaction may occur if the disease is active.

Unprotected dogs are at risk themselves and also become a potential source of disease for others. When a mosquito bites an infected dog, the blood it draws contains the young worms, or microfilariae, of the nematode Dirofilaria immitis, which then mature into infective larvae in the mosquito. These larvae are then passed along when the infected mosquito bites a healthy dog.

Within a few months, the larvae move into the blood and migrate to the dog's heart, where they mature into six- to 14-inch worms lodged in the heart and adjacent pulmonary arteries and reproduce, sending out microfilariae into the dog's blood. There may be from one to several hundred adult worms in a severe case.

Adult worms can cause extensive damage to a dog's heart, lungs, liver and kidneys. Signs of heartworm disease include difficulty breathing, coughing, exercise intolerance and vomiting. Treatment of the disease requires injections of an organic arsenical drug that kills the adult worms. Untreated dogs eventually die of heart failure or damage to other vital organs.

Although the disease primarily affects dogs, Rush said that cats and some wild species such as foxes, wolves and ferrets may also be affected. Human cases occur, but they are extremely rare.

weekend in January.

The event would mimic the "drug-free weekend" recently started in Belmont.

During the two-day event, residents sign a pledge to remain drug-free for the weekend, including abstention from nicotine and alcohol.

Programs and activities such as basketball games and the possibility of a semi-formal would be offered throughout the weekend.

"This is meant to be a cross-generational thing," Knowles said. "It's a good way to break up the winter doldrums."

Belmont has encouraged towns across the country to turn the weekend into a national celebration against chemical dependency.

Schools lose $$$ without override have the least impact on the educational program.

"But the number of areas are getting fewer and fewer. There's a problem putting any list together.

"I have to say that any cuts will have an impact on our educational program."

He developed a list, which was not released, of specific items he would cut.

The committee's consensus was to release a less specific list pointing to the areas where cuts would be made.

"It would be easy to say this translates into six teachers, but I wouldn't cut six teachers," Hart said.

He talked about the fact that Cohasset's per pupil cost is far lower than Weston. He pointed out that there are 4.3 administrators in Cohasset while the average for a suburban community is 8.6.

What happens if the override fails?

Upon receiving input from the departments directly under their control, selectmen have compiled a list of possible cuts which may be implemented if the May 8 $202,000 override ballot question fails.

The school money is not included in these figures.

- Wire department part-time position - 15,215
- Town accountant as previously recommended - 2,196
- Town accountant computer - 1,804
- Fire dept. miscellaneous expenses - 4,500
- Selectmen 3% - 4,685

- Conservation 3% - 574
- Conservation clerical - 2,000
- Building inspector - -0-
- Animal control officer - 205
- Tree and Park dept. (reduce position to 1/2 time) - 12,032

Little League grows too fast for the fields

Fees are on the way for use of the town fields

Outlining a proposed list of rules and regulations, Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle asked selectmen Monday to give him the power to assign fees for the use of town fields, in order to offset his shrinking budget and a rising number of sports teams.

Laugelle also requested a hand in scheduling teams and events on the fields to prevent conflicts in game times and maintenance.

Rates for field use would vary from $100 to $400 per season depending on the sport and expected attendance.

Recreation department head Jack Worley argued that it would be unfair to force residents to pay both for programs and field use but selectmen decided that it would simply be a matter of fully allocating users for field rights which are now paid for by the taxpayer.

Vice-chairman Diana Kornet said, "You have to understand that we are being asked by the state to take a hard look at how we pay for services."

Laugelle complained about overuse of the fields, "In the last three years little league has grown to 400 kids and 28 teams.

"15 years ago there were 15 kids playing lacrosse. Now there are 80."

Selectmen approved the nature of the list of rules and regulations and pending technical corrections approval is expected.

South Shore Vo-Tech teacher starts resume service

John Cheney, a computer teacher at South Shore Vocational Technical High School, saw a need and he filled it. The school is looking for ways to integrate its academic subjects with practical applications. A large number of students visit his computer lab in conjunction with their shop related work and their academic subjects.

Cheney began working with a few students encouraging them first to do personal research on birth places, residences, important dates, schools, clubs and hobbies. Then they began working on high school courses, sports and extracurricular activities. Next he encouraged them to write about their work experience. Finally these students started to give some serious thought to long range goals. As the resumes began to come together (and the revisions seemed to be endless) students began to realize the importance of a resume and that during a job interview it is too late to try remembering important facts. When Cheney reviews the final copy with the student, he is impressed with what his students have to sell and he notes that the students have gained a large measure of confidence in themselves to be able to go out into today's difficult job market and maybe to have a little edge on their peers.

Cheney's goal is that every senior who graduates from South Shore Vo-Tech this year has a professional looking, polished resume in his possession along with his diploma.

Voter information forum

The date of the PSO sponsored Voter Information Forum has been changed to Wednesday, May 8, 7:30 p.m., Unitarian Parish House.

This was done to allow the Advisory Committee members an opportunity to attend the Forum.

Representatives of the Board of Selectmen, Advisory Committee, School Committee, Council on Aging, and other town departments and groups will be presenting information pertinent to the override election on May 18. Questions and comments will be taken from the audience, and any input is welcome from voters before the Forum.

Cable television will tape the Forum for broadcast at a later time for anyone unable to attend that evening.

Cove will be dredged

He said since the last dredging the condition of the cove has greatly deteriorated.

Rock outcroppings are visible at several points in the shallow water; at some points the depth has been reduced to less than three feet.

He said the dredging will greatly improve passage and safety.

"This will be very beneficial," he said. "It will eliminate most of the navigational hazards (in the Cove), such as rock piles, and ledge located in the mooring areas."

He said that when the dredging is completed it will enable him to "position moorings more effectively to make navigation safer for boaters."

According to the ENF, the major activities at the cove are lobstering and fishing.

Of the 302 boats that use the harbor each season, approximately 40 are fishing boats.

During the boating season between 40 to 60 boats are moored in the the cove, including sail boats and motor boats.

Gadow said it would be difficult to determine how many new moorings would be created until after the project commences.

The dredging is not expected to have any negative impacts on the area, Gadow said.

A "clam-shell bucket-loading barge operation with offshore disposal" will be used for the dredging, according to the ENF.

The notification said that the cove is not known to be a habitat for any rare or endangered species.

In a letter to the DEM, Dave Marks, the town's shellfish warden, said if the project proceeds according to plan there should not be any impact of the shellfish population.

The dredge material will be deposited at the Massachusetts Bay Disposal site located about 15 miles east of Boston Harbor.

Both the town landfill and the private Cohasset Heights Landfill were approached to accept the debris, but were determined to be inadequate.

According to the ENF, the Cohasset Heights Landfill is currently involved in monitoring salt levels as part of a state review.

The landfill's owners were afraid that the dredged material could upset that review, it said.

Gadow said that the dredging will only affect the inner-harbor area and the entire harbor will have to be dredged in the near future.

He said the entire harbor has not been dredged since the 60s.

Gadow said the major obstacle to dredging the entire harbor is a lack of federal funding.

He said the Army Corps of Engineers, which handles major dredging projects, has faced budget cuts and does not currently have funding available.

Override debate yields honest information

Stephen Hart, school superintendent, could tell you that a failed override would mean the layoff of six teachers — but he won't.

He could tell you that the $170,000 loss to the school system — if the override fails — would mean the destruction of athletics. But he won't do that either.

Instead of propagandizing, he has come up with a list of potential cut items that he believes would have the least impact on the educational program.

He backs the override but he refuses to use scare tactics or lies to prove the case.

We respect Hart and the school committee for being willing to be honest.

As the school committee talked about the list of items on the cut list Monday, April 29, the members worried whether the voters would care that Hart was recommending there be no student activities treasurer, no painting on the exterior of the Osgood School, etc.

In Marshfield a school will close due to the failure of the general levy override that included funds for the school system.

In Norwell there are plans to close a school, if their own override fails.

In Hingham the general government override was carried by 16 votes. If the override had failed, there would have been a layoff of 19 teachers.

This a dire time for many school systems. We are extremely lucky to live in a community where disaster is not hovering around the corner.

But our luck could run out if we don't invest in the school system.

Classes are slowly increasing in size. The children attending our school system are bright. They continue to learn. They continue to develop into successful learners.

School Committee member Chris Ford spoke about the override vote as a vote of confidence for the school committee this week.

He said that the committee believes the money is needed to operate the schools.

We want to offer our own vote of confidence. School supplies, maintenance of the buildings — these are all part of the operation of an effective school system. Obviously, we need to do more than pay the teachers to stand at the front of the class. We need to support the educators with materials. We need to keep the buildings safe from deterioration.

Good news for Cohasset environmentalists. It seems that the MWRA never had any plans to locate the Nut Island sludge dump at Cohasset Heights Landfill after all. According to Commissioner Paul Levy, he has "no idea who could have spread the word."

Pumping up the override questions?

By Tanna Kasperowicz

If one didn't have absolute faith in the Tinytown selectmen to make clear, decisive choices, one might think some of the override questions were full of hot air. However, the PSO and the education selectmen will explain away our fears at their 7:30 p.m. May 7 meeting at the Parish House on the Common.

Large problem with Question 7 being a levy override. If this only happens every three years, why would Tinytown selectmen attach the entire $60,000 to the budget every year? (note to reader, a levy override becomes a part of the budget forever). Tinytown selectmen say they need $60,000 for the triennial revaluation, but if this article is passed they'll actually get $180,000 (over three years). Is this a trick or a boo-boo?

Same kind of problem with Question 3...asking for $20,000 to paint the old town hall and doing related exterior repairs. If you vote yes on question 3 you'll be painting the old town hall for the rest of your natural lives.

If you vote $3,000 for the reconstruction of the intersection of King Street and Beechwood, once again you'll be reconstructing the intersection every year.

Remember the opponents' chant about question 3 in the gubernatorial race last November? "It goes too far..." Well, Tinytown selectpersons' Question 5 asks for $30,000 for the government island duplex. There's no doubt the duplex could use $30,000...probably could use $400,000. $30,000 is like putting a bandage on a broken arm. $30,000 is something a slumlord would do.

No one will ever be able to convince me that the above articles couldn't in fact be debt exclusions...because we know Tinytown selectpeople have the money. How do we know? They're planning to sell the Bates Building for $1. If they can afford to give property away then taxpayers really can't take Tinytown selectmen's pleas for an override with any alarm.

Oh, yeah, Tinytown selectmen...really happy you're watching out for our cable bills...keep watching the small stuff closely. You're forgetting the great stuff cable brings...the Celtics, the War, Wiggy (Wigmore Pierson's "Pierson to Person")..and, our very own Tinytown selectpeople—(best show on Monday nights but don't watch it alone - it's too scary).

Results of referenda...yes, yes, yes, yes, yes, yes, yes. Although instructions were clear as all get out, who else but Tony Fasciano would try to vote in person, and then his ballot was so messy it was impossible for the election worker to read...he had to be issued a new ballot. Dick Straley of Cards 'n Shards tried to call in his vote (doesn't even live here)...and Karin Bartow called to "allege" that there were no budget hearings on the referenda, said the advisory committee should have made recommendations, and said while she liked some of the questions, she found them to be convoluted.

While you were watching the War on CNN...did you ever, ever...somewhere on the edge of you mind...wonder why Superman didn't show up to put out the oil well fires? I've asked this question to five or ten people and almost without exception they noticed how American Superheroes remained closeted. One of them added: "When you see the newsreels of the oil fires and the slicks which will ultimately effect the whole world...kind of makes you wonder if Tinytown recycling is like —— —— in the ocean."

Do you know what's exciting about Joe McElroy? He has a vision; he has a plan; and he's taken steps to execute that plan if the parties (the VFW, Rotary, etc.) are interested and/or feel they can raise renovation/operational funds in a down economy. If the Rotary and VFW get sparked up over Joe's proposal (complete proposal elsewhere in this newspaper) it looks very supportable...for all the reasons Joe pointed out in his letter(s).

* * *

Many, many thousands of years ago before professional sports teams men fought wars over religion, land, jewels, spices, the Indians, gold. Modern fighters own or coach professional sports teams, and get their jollies watching Larry Bird run around with a broken back and Kevin McHale run around on two broken feet. All Saddam Hussein needs is a national sports franchise (or a newspaper column) where he can continue to abuse men legally.

New use for Government Harbor duplex proposed

(The following letter was sent to the Mariner for publication.)

Picture yourself on a large comfortable deck in front of the Duplex – chewing the fat with goats, lobstermen, veterans and other Cohasset residents with the surrounding grounds resembling a park beautified by the Garden Club and other public-spirited organizations. Cohasset Harbor in June as the vista.

To: Commander, Cohasset VFW and President, Cohasset Rotary Club

From: Joe McElroy

Subject: Renovation of Government Island Duplex

I propose to initiate an immediate publicity campaign to support the following resolution:

"Resolved that the Town of Cohasset lease the Government Island Duplex for $1 per year per unit to 1) the Cohasset VFW Post 9146 and 2) to the Cohasset Rotary Club."

My concept would be:

– The VFW and Rotary would organize a drive to raise money and contributions of material and self-help labor to renovate the structure to include a common use meeting room that would be available to Cohasset area organizations at least eight days per month at a minimal fee to cover usage/clean-up costs.

I am prepared to:

– Pledge $300 to the publicity campaign and $700 to the renovation project.

– Coordinate the publicity campaign which would initially involve a full-page ad in the Cohasset Mariner, a mailing to all Cohasset residents, solicitation of organizational support, and distribution of leaflets at the May 18 special election. Estimated publicity cost, $1,300.

– Participate on a committee which would prepare the detailed renovation plans and execute them.

Time is of the essence because the publicity campaign

Sandy Beach seeks contributions

To the Editor:

In a few days the Sandy Beach Association will be mailing its annual appeal for donations. The appeal goes to all 1800 households in Cohasset. The Beach needs such support since it receives none from the Town nor does it benefit from the parking sticker fees which go solely to the Town.

This year a special appeal is being made in addition to the annual request for donations - the raising of $3500 for the construction of a 160 foot wooden walkway at the beach. This will provide access to the high-tide mark for wheelchair people and for elderly or others who find it difficult to navigate the sand. The walkway was proposed by Cohasset's Commission for the Handicapped and is modeled after one built last year in Marshfield. Some special donations have already been received (Sandy Beach Association, 130 Linden Drive, Cohasset 02025) in generous amounts. In addition, Hingham Lumber Company donated a significant part of the material cost. Larry Shults and Ken Cisneros are the builders.

The usual, annual donations from Cohasset people (about 17% of households responded in 1990) are needed for the life-guards, beach cleanup, utilities, taxes, insurance and Beach supplies - all subject to rising costs and inflation. The Beach Association is looking for increased participation in giving in 1991 as well as higher dollar amounts. The regular beach functions and the new walkway really need such generous support again this year.

DeNucci says Teacher Pension Proposal circumvents Prop. 2-1/2

State Auditor A. Joseph DeNucci said today that his Division of Local Mandates has ruled that the Administration's fiscal year 1992 budget proposal requiring cities, towns and local regional districts to pay $31.3 million toward teacher pensions would circumvent the local mandate provisions of Proposition 2-1/2 and force local governments to assume these costs.

Cohasset was to pay $46,420 according to the plan.

This House budget proposal cited by DeNucci would require cities, towns and regional school districts starting in fiscal year 1992 to pay 10 percent of the employer's share of teachers' retirement costs which have been, since 1914, assumed entirely by the state. Boston, the only municipality which has its own teachers' retirement system, would forfeit $2.8 million in state reimbursement, representing 10 percent of its employer contribution costs, beginning in fiscal year 1993.

DeNucci said that the text of this new proposal contains the clause "notwithstanding the provisions of section twenty-seven C of chapter twenty-nine," the local mandate law. The result of its enactment would clearly override the mandate provisions of Proposition 2-1/2 and therefore effectively negate any mandate court challenge filed by a city or town on this issue.

The Auditor's ruling is in response to petitions by State Rep. Thomas P. Kennedy (D. Brockton), Lynn Mayor Albert V. DiVirgilio, the Massachusetts Municipal Association and several other towns to DeNucci's Division of Local Mandates. Each requested that DeNucci determine whether this pension-charge proposal would violate the mandate provision of Proposition 2-1/2, which requires state funding of new laws and regulations imposing financial obligations on cities and towns.

"This budget language," Auditor DeNucci said, "would circumvent the mandate protections provided under Proposition 2-1/2."

Auditor DeNucci stated, "All cities and towns are already struggling under extremely tight fiscal restrictions, particularly with the impending reductions in state aid. This is a difficult time to place an additional burden on them which would essentially require the reduction of $31.3 million worth of existing services. The local mandate statute was included in Proposition 2-1/2 to prevent precisely this type of state intrusion over local finances."

Hospital sunscreen with free clinic

With summer approaching, South Shore Hospital is offering a free skin cancer screening clinic May 9 from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. The clinic, open to all South Shore residents, includes an examination by a dermatologist and information on precautions to avoid increasing the risk of skin cancer.

The most common of all cancers, skin cancer strikes approximately 600,000 Americans every year, according to the American Cancer Society. The ACS reports that the vast majority of cases are highly curable. The most serious skin cancer, melanoma, will be diagnosed in about 32,000 persons in 1991.

Skin cancer will cause about 8,500 deaths this year, 6,500 from malignant melanoma and 2,000 due to other skin cancers. According to the ACS, the incidence of melanoma has been increasing steadily by four percent each year for the past several years.

Appointments for the clinic are required and may be made after April 29 by calling 340-8239 between 8 and 10 a.m., 2 and 4 p.m., and 7 and 9 p.m.

South Shore Hospital Dermatologist Glenn Dobecki says, "Early detection is critical to curing skin cancer." Dobecki is one of five dermatologists who will be examining clinic participants.

"With summer approaching, we want to make people aware that some simple precautions will greatly reduce their risk for skin cancer, and that getting screened is a good idea, especially for those at risk."

Risk factors include excessive exposure to the sun; fair complexion; and occupational exposure to coal tar, pitch, creosote, arsenic compounds or radium. Skin cancer's warning signs include any unusual skin condition, especially a change in the size or color of a mole or other darkly pigmented growth or spot.

The clinic is sponsored by South Shore Hospital's cancer management program, the American Cancer Society and the American Academy of Dermatology.

would have to be accomplished in time to defeat override article 6 which asks taxpayers to approve $30,000 for renovation of the Government Island Duplex as rental housing units.

– At the April 6, 1991 Town Meeting, both the Advisory Committee and Capital Budget Committee recommended against appropriating $30,000 to renovate the Duplex for continued usage as rental units.

– The Town approved $11,000 for Septic Repair in Fiscal 1991, and is asking the voters to spend another $30,000, but Selectman Goedecke acknowledges that even those expenditures will leave the units in substandard condition for market value waterfront housing. Selectman Laugelle stated at the April 22, 1991 Selectmen's meeting that he "thinks it will cost more than $30,000 to do the proposed renovations" which will still leave the units in a substandard condition.

– The Town has had problems collecting rent, let the units fall into serious disrepair and has had one unit vacant for an extended period.

– My financial projections indicate the Town would continue to operate the units at a loss to local taxpayers.

– Usage of the units for housing privatizes a historic site on the only Town-owned waterfront/harborfront prime property that should be enjoyed by all Cohasset residents.

I recommend a joint meeting to occur before Friday, May 3, 1991.

Respectfully,
Joseph R. McElroy

Leo's Hockey Tigers tie Marshfield

By John Kinchla

As a result of this week's tie with Marshfield and a loss by Quincy, the Exxon Tigers have taken over sole possession of first place in the Pilgrim Arena's Spring High School Developmental Ice Hockey program with a record of 4-2-2.

Several new Tiger heroes emerged from last Saturday's tie with Marshfield. Tenth grader, John Kinchla scored his first varsity goal with a wraparound stuff and 9th grader, Mike Riley kept Marshfield honest with his dogged penalty killing. Eighth grader, Brendan Kinchla continues to impress with his passing and 7th grader, Chris McKenna is emerging as a force on right wing.

Sadly, last week's Canton game hero, Charlie Shields, received a roughing penalty with six minutes remaining against Marshfield. The penalty killing effort forced the Tigers to play defensively over the final minutes to preserve their effort against Marshfield.

Last week's hero was not this week's goat, Shields played well throughout this contest. But his mental error prevented Cohasset from capitalizing on an otherwise lackluster Marshfield team. Cohasset was definitely on the offensive and had successfully worn down Marshfield. The Tigers played all 22 boys and had 5 lines working throughout the contest.

Four veteran Tigers played brilliantly in this contest, Mike Reynolds, Patrick Reynolds, Kevin Mulcahy and John Kinchla. Each of the above players scored a goal. Each of the above players kept the pressure on Marshfield for a full 60 minutes.

Veteran goalie Jeff Stone was shaky in the first few minutes of this contest. Two Marshfield goals were posted before rookie goalie, Jeff Tosi took over. The rookie played well giving up only one goal over 20 minutes, before Stone returned to the lineup for the final ten minutes.

The lead seesawed throughout the game, both teams were tense. Lines changed. Personnel changed, but the Tigers couldn't find their offensive spark.

Cohasset's brilliant center iceman, Mike Reynolds missing his first line mates, Matt Kramers and Charlie Smith exhausted himself with his two-way play. Reynolds dogged efforts were assisted by a new Tiger star, 9th grader, Mike Riley.

Riley assisted on penalty killing assignments and skated a strong right wing. Riley's skating complemented Reynold's playmaking and forced Marshfield to defend him with at least one man.

Five different lines played. Both goalies played. Different player combinations emerged as the Tiger penalty situation created difficulties. Coach Kinchla sought to capitalize with his personnel but the Tigers could never get more than a one goal lead.

Lacrosse team scores win

Led by co-captain Charlie Endris' four goals, the Cohasset High School Lacrosse Team blanked Falmouth Academy 7-0 Friday at Milliken Field, running its season record to 4-1.

The victory was the week's second for the Skippers, who topped Masconomet Regional of Topsfield, 6-1 on April 23.

In the Falmouth Academy game, dominated by Cohasset, senior co-captain Matt Marks added a pair of goals, and junior attackman Chris Bartow scored his first. Goalies Travis Coley and Brandon DeVoe combined for only four saves, bolstered by a defense led by senior Bill Baird.

Against Masconomet, the Skippers were pressured early. "They had the first half dozen shots of the game," said Coach Ken Ekberg, "but Travis played his best game in the nets." Coley finished with 13 saves.

Sophomore midfielder Doug Ellinger led Cohasset with two goals, and Endris, Marks, and midfielders Bart Weisenfluh and Willie Adams all had single tallies. Endris, a freshman, is now averaging two goals a game.

Cohasset hosts Masconomet this Saturday afternoon at 2:30 at Milliken, then faces Xaverian of Westwood on Friday, May 10, at 3:45. "Those two games could go a long way towards determining whether we see post-season action in the state tournament," said Coach Ekberg. The Cohasset Lacrosse Team is in its first season as an official varsity sport, Ekberg noted. "But if we beat Masconomet again, I guess you could call us Division Three champs," he joked. Cohasset and Masconomet are currently the only Division Three schools in Eastern Massachusetts playing the sport.

Tennis team scores success over Norton

The Cohasset girls' tennis team soundly defeated visiting Norton on Monday 5-0 to pick up its fourth win of the season. The Skippers, now 4-2, overall are back on track after suffering losses to Norwell 3-2 and Scituate 4-1.

In first singles, Sophie Redfield won her match by a score of 7-5, 6-3 against her Norton opponent. Redfield is sporting a 3-1 record which is a fine showing for a player in the first singles spot.

Sophomore Karyn Murray has won four matches to date including her 6-0, 6-1 win in second singles versus Norton on Monday.

Junior Nicole Bieryla is undefeated in four outings at third singles. Her latest victory came with scores of 6-0, 6-0 against Norton.

Cohasset coach Betty Zadel speaks of all her singles players as strong. She wants them to work on their aggressiveness.

At first doubles action, Ellen Schramm and Rebecca Jordan look promising having lost in only one match. The twosome combined for a 6-3, 6-3 win over Norton. They are destined to be a couple of All-League tennis players according to Zadel.

Little League season opens on a 'made for baseball' day

Cohasset Little League players and coaches opened their season on a made-for-baseball warm sunny Saturday last weekend. Opening ceremonies in front of a freshly painted back stop followed the traditional Little League parade. The enthusiastic V.F.W.-sponsored farm team hoisted the flag while the Deer Hill Band played the national anthem. John Smoot, 1991 President of Cohasset Little League welcomed the crowd. Spirits were high. John Kinchla received a plaque of appreciation for his efforts as past President (only minutes after he completed the job of lining the field). Ken Coleman, former Red Sox radio commentator spoke to the dreams and wishes of the hundreds of uniformed hopefuls on the field. The refreshment stand was bustling, offering new items like pizza and french fries as well as the traditional hot dogs, donuts, cold drinks and coffee. A well organized event led into the season opener.

The annual major league kick off game focused fans' attention to the field and the mound where returning Red Sox pitcher Joe Magner pitched a one hitter, striking out 16 players of a possible 18 players in six innings. Joe gave up four walks and the Mets Taylor Devin had the base hit. Rookies from both teams looked strong. The Mets' Joel Puorro turned in a solid defensive effort behind the plate and Tom Leahy at third fielded some hard hit balls. Red Sox rookies Jamie DeMichele and Kevin DeVito had clean base hits their first time up in the majors. Returning Red Sox players Pat Hurley at third base (3 for 3, scoring 3 runs), Justin Golden at short stop (2 for 3), and Andy Hamilton, at the plate who threw out a runner on an attempted steal helped the Sox to a 14-3 win.

The successful Saturday evening Little League Dance was followed by a cool breezy Sunday when the new expansion team, Coach Steve Baker's Cardinals made their debut. Starting pitcher David Payne is new to Cohasset but clearly not to the mound. Payne provided the team with a strong starting performance for the first part of the game, and as first baseman, showed a nice backhand stab for an unassisted out later on. Relief pitcher Alex Schwerin, another ten year old, showed great promise. His effort and the terrific defensive work and leadership provided by Charlie Dean behind the plate is the kind of young talent that gives the new Cardinals much optimism for this year.

The Pirates were into base hits on Sunday, with Keith Jackson landing a single and a double, Jarred Batts a double, and Robbie Buckley two singles. Fly catching by Ben Smoot at the plate, Derek Bugley in left field and David Buckley at the mound, plus Buckley's one hitter performance gave the pirates the 8-3 win. For their part, the Cardinal swung the bat hard, too. Centerfielder Nate Cotter made solid contact in each of three at bats including a single to right field. Designated hitter Charlie Toppan blasted a hit to right field. Lloyd Workman had a long drive snatched from left field. Workman at first base and Ted Goff at second grabbed an infield fly apiece. Fabulous speed and aggressiveness were shown by Goff whose hustle on the base paths led to two of three Cardinal runs. Hitting star Nate Cotter scored in the fifth with the third and final run in the Cardinal first performance.

The Dodgers-Athletics game will be reported in next week's summary.

second doubles for a 6-1, 6-1 win versus Norton.

They're showing that they can play," said Zadel.

A couple of singles players giving the team depth are senior Nancy Greco and 7th grader Laura Slotnick. "We're very lucky to have that depth in singles. I can call on any one of these five," Zadel said.

Senior Katie McNamara is expected to see action for Cohasset. Rounding out the roster for the Skippers are Jessica Pyfrom and Alexis Zerendow. "They practice as hard as everybody else and I expect they will see some action," said Zadel.

Having lost to Norwell 3-2, coach Zadel was slightly disappointed. "I'm looking for a better showing against them next time," she said. Cohasset has 10 matches remaining as of this writing.

'Harborfest' set for June 21

In this day and age of negative economics on the local, state and federal levels, people need and want to work on something positive. Several Cohasset citizens have decided that "something" would be a Harborfest. Presented by Jim Lagrotteria, the idea received support from representatives of the Chamber of Commerce, Cohasset Rotary, the Social Service League and the Cohasset Clergy Association, who decided to link the event with the South Shore Art Center's 36th South Shore Art Center Festival on June 21-23. The Harborfest Committee hopes to join the many different elements of the town in a project whose purpose is just good old-fashioned fun.

The Art Festival will begin Thursday evening, June 20, at the Art Center with the openings of the President's Choice Exhibition featuring works on a circus theme by nationally renowned artist ALI, and the always popular Festival Members' Exhibition which will be accompanied by a Community Garden Club Flower Show interpreting the art. On Friday, the Juried Art and Photography Exhibitions will open under the tents on Cohasset Common, against a backdrop of a colorful craft market, art demonstrations, and musical performances.

Harborfest activities will interact with the art festival's continuing program on Saturday and Sunday, and will include a Pancake Breakfast, Water Games at the Harbor, The Blessing of the Fleet and Parade of Boats, a "Hometown" Marching Parade and a Chowder Contest by local restaurants.

Community arts groups are helping to advertise the event, and the Cohasset Dramatic Club will present "The Kids of Konahasset," based on historic fact and specially written for the Festival, to be performed by Cohasset youngsters. To round out the weekend, there will be several concerts including the famed Carillon of St. Stephen's Church, a benefit by New Black Eagle Jazz Band on June 21 at the Nickerson Theatre, daytime music by the South Shore Conservatory, a performance by The South Shore Band on the Common, and a youth concert in Cohasset Village.

South Shore businesses and community groups may show their support by advertising in the Festival Brochure, sponsoring awards, and volunteering. Please contact members of the Harborfest Committee which includes Reverend Gary Ritts, Cohasset Clergy, Bob Martin, Chamber of Commerce, or Don Harrold of the Cohasset Rotary, Jim Lagrotteria, or Meg Robbins, SSAC Festival Chair at 383-9548.

Health fair is May 16

Members of the Sixty-Plus Club are so very grateful for the many gratuities that are done for them during the year that they wish to do their bit for others.

If has been their desire to donate this year a gift to the Social Service League of Cohasset, and the South Shore Hospice organization.

Lazy eye clinic May 15

Under the auspices of the Cohasset Social Service League, trained volunteers will carry out a townwide screening for amblyopia (lazy-eye) on Wednesday morning, May 15, from 9 a.m. to noon. All 3- and 4- year olds not presently enrolled in nursery school should be tested that day.

Dr. Fishbaugh to speak

Little League Baseball and the American Orthopaedic Society for Sports Medicine have joined forces to offer local Little League coaches, umpires, and administrators throughout the country a course entitled "Prevention and Management of Little League Baseball Injuries."

On Sunday night, May 5, at 7 p.m., at the Deer Hill School cafeteria, orthopaedic surgeon William F. Fishbaugh, Jr., MD, a specialist from the sports medicine clinic at Braintree Hospital, will conduct the course for all Cohasset Little League coaches, assistant coaches, and volunteers.

The course will focus on the twelve most typical Little League injuries and their management. Dr. Fishbaugh will bring a professional sports trainer with him to assist in the instruction. The Little League District Administrator for our area will also attend.

Those coaches and volunteers who received mail notification of the course should note that the notice incorrectly stated Saturday as the day on which the course will be held instead of the correct day of SUNDAY.

The meeting will start promptly at 7 p.m.. Sunday, May 5.

Hedlund's office hours

Tuesday, May 28, 1991, from 10 a.m. to noon, at the Cohasset Town Hall meeting Room, has been set aside by Sen. Robert Hedlund to meet with constituents. For those unable to meet with the Senator, please call the State House at 722-1646.

Church holds auction

On Saturday, May 4 bargain hunters will be at the First Parish silent auction when the doors open at noon, submitting their hopeful bids on a dining room set complete with table, chairs, hutch and buffet, on an IBM computer keyboard, on an antique period love seat, a 9x11 oriental rug, a bumper pool table or any one of dozens of other items. Auction Chairman Max Pounder has opened the daytime component of the auction to the public. Bids are silent, not secret, so you may return towards the end of the auction to raise your bid if you like. Buyers need not be present at the close of the auction. A team of volunteers has been organized to call bidders who are not present to learn what treasures they've acquired. The Rev. Ed Atkinson remarked: "Besides the fact that the auction benefits the church, it is always a lot of fun!" Donations are still pouring in and a final catalogue will be available by the time of the auction.

Anyone with questions about the auction may call the church at 383-1100.

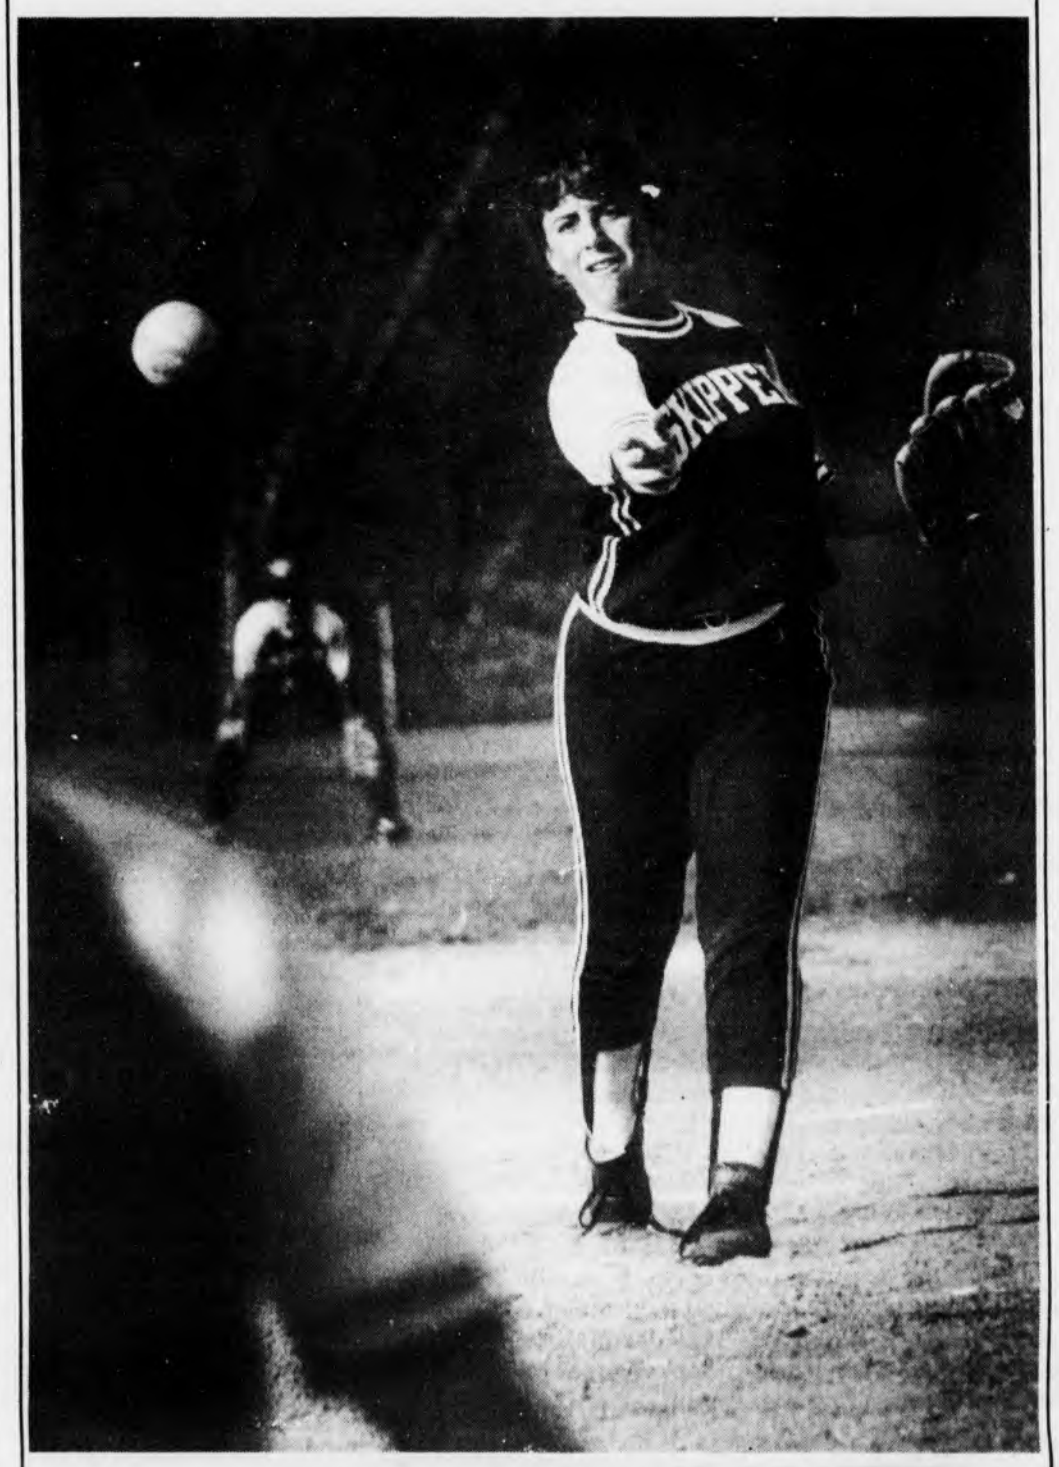
Errors plague Lady Skippers as season begins

By Donna Cogliano
Mariner correspondent

Visiting Norton triumphed with a 15-7 win over the Cohasset girls' softball team on Monday. According to Skippers' coach Mike Gill, Cohasset lost the game due to errors in the field.

Cohasset scored three runs in the third inning and another three in the seventh as the Skippers ended the game with the bases loaded. "We were rallying but it didn't last long enough," said Gill.



Gill says his team needs to practice its execution. "They make the right plays but we just made a lot of bad throws. They threw it to the right bases. It was just accuracy," he explained.

Cohasset scored seven runs Monday on 11 hits and normally that would be enough to win. "I think we got ourselves to the point where we're a pretty good hitting team and fielding team. We just have to execute our throws," said Gill.

Cohasset is holding steady at a record of 3-3. Last week the Skippers were beaten 12-2 by the Abington Green Wave. Earlier in the season, Cohasset recorded wins over Hull, Rockland and Norwell.

Cohasset shortstop Alison Ludlow had a good showing at the plate going two for three. Ludlow, the fine defensive shortstop for the Skippers, is batting .421 this season. First baseman Tyree Pienemann contributed two hit in her four plate appearances. She is helping Cohasset with a .350 batting average.

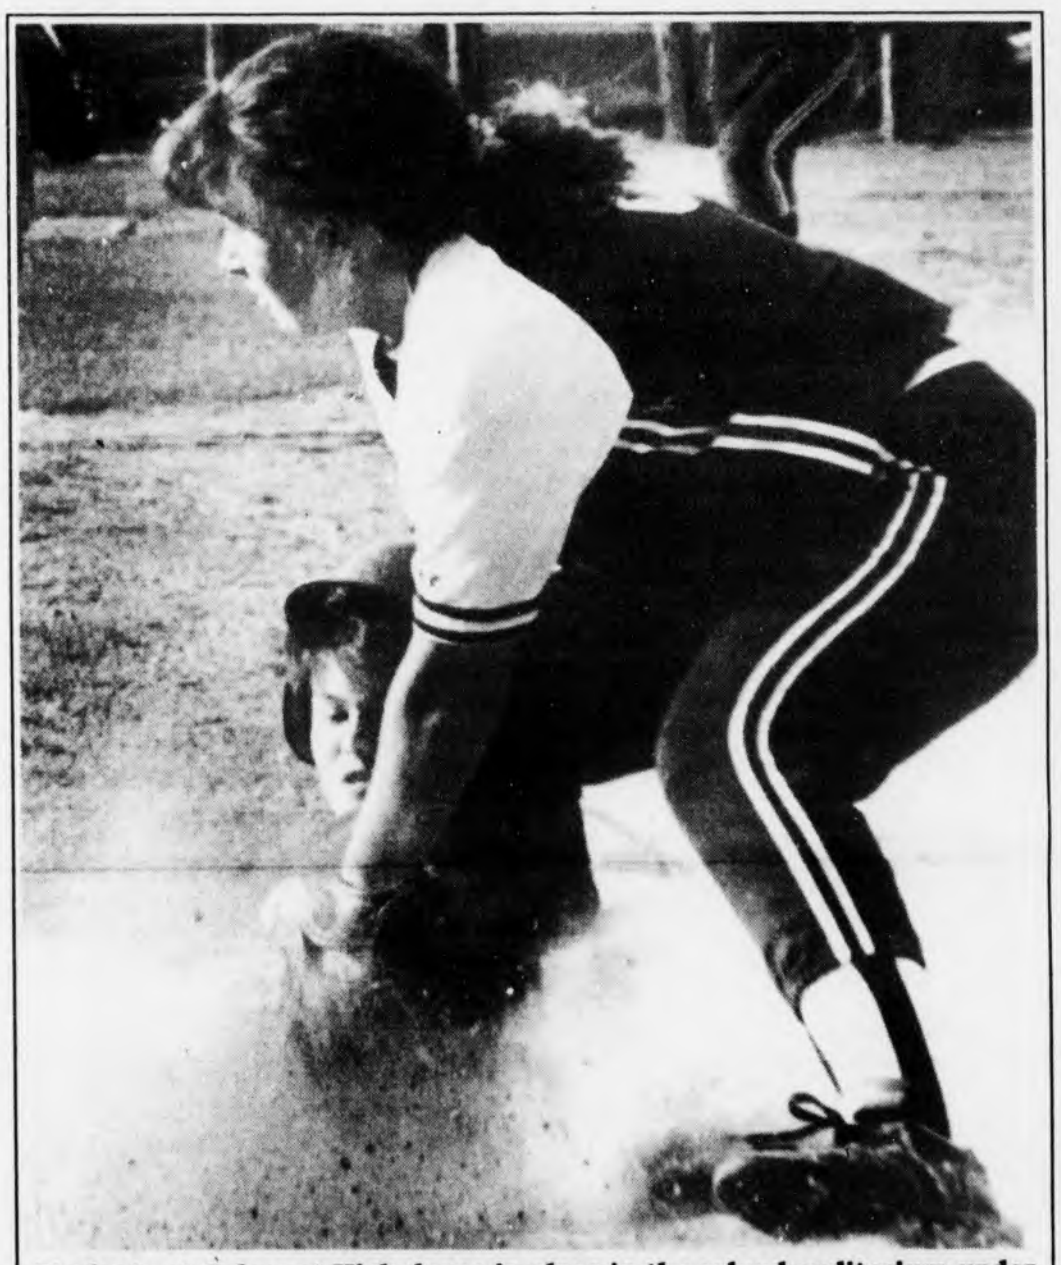
Cohasset gave up four runs in each of the third, fifth and sixth innings. There were too many big innings, according to Gill.



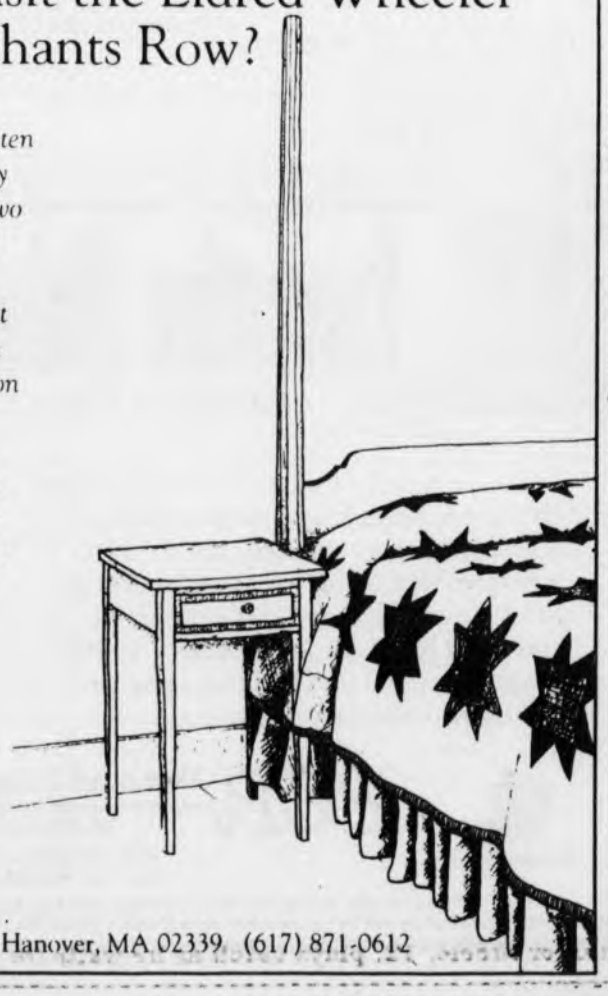
Senior Kay Long is batting .416 and has been covering right field for the Skippers. Her twin sister Maureen Long is also a member of the team.

Heather Bass, who plays third base, is batting .313 for Cohasset.

All-star center fielder Barbara Lagrotteria, a senior, is considered to be one of the league leaders in stolen bases. "I would say that she's one of the best center fielders in the league," said Gill.

Senior Nicole Barry is reportedly improving on the mound for the Skippers. She has earned starting pitching duties this season.

Other team members rounding out the roster for Cohasset are: catcher Jen Knowles, Danielle Shaughnessy, Bridget Leung, Lisa Schramm, Jen Anstead, Rebecca Tosca and Carol Smith.



Students at Cohasset High dance in place in the school auditorium under the direction of Nikki Hu, a professional dancer brought to work with the students under the artist in residence program of the PSO.

Shaughnessy wins award

Danielle Shaughnessy of Cohasset has been nominated to represent Cohasset Junior/Senior High School at the 14th Annual Massachusetts Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation Leadership Seminar. The four-day, expense-paid seminar will be held June 6 to 9 at Bentley College in Waltham and will include more than 200 of the top tenth-graders from the Eastern part of the state.

The conference provides these outstanding students an opportunity to interact and discuss the American Incentive System with prominent leaders from business, government, education and the non profit sector. It challenges its participantsl to make critical decisions about our current societal condition and formulate strategies to improve this environment in the future.

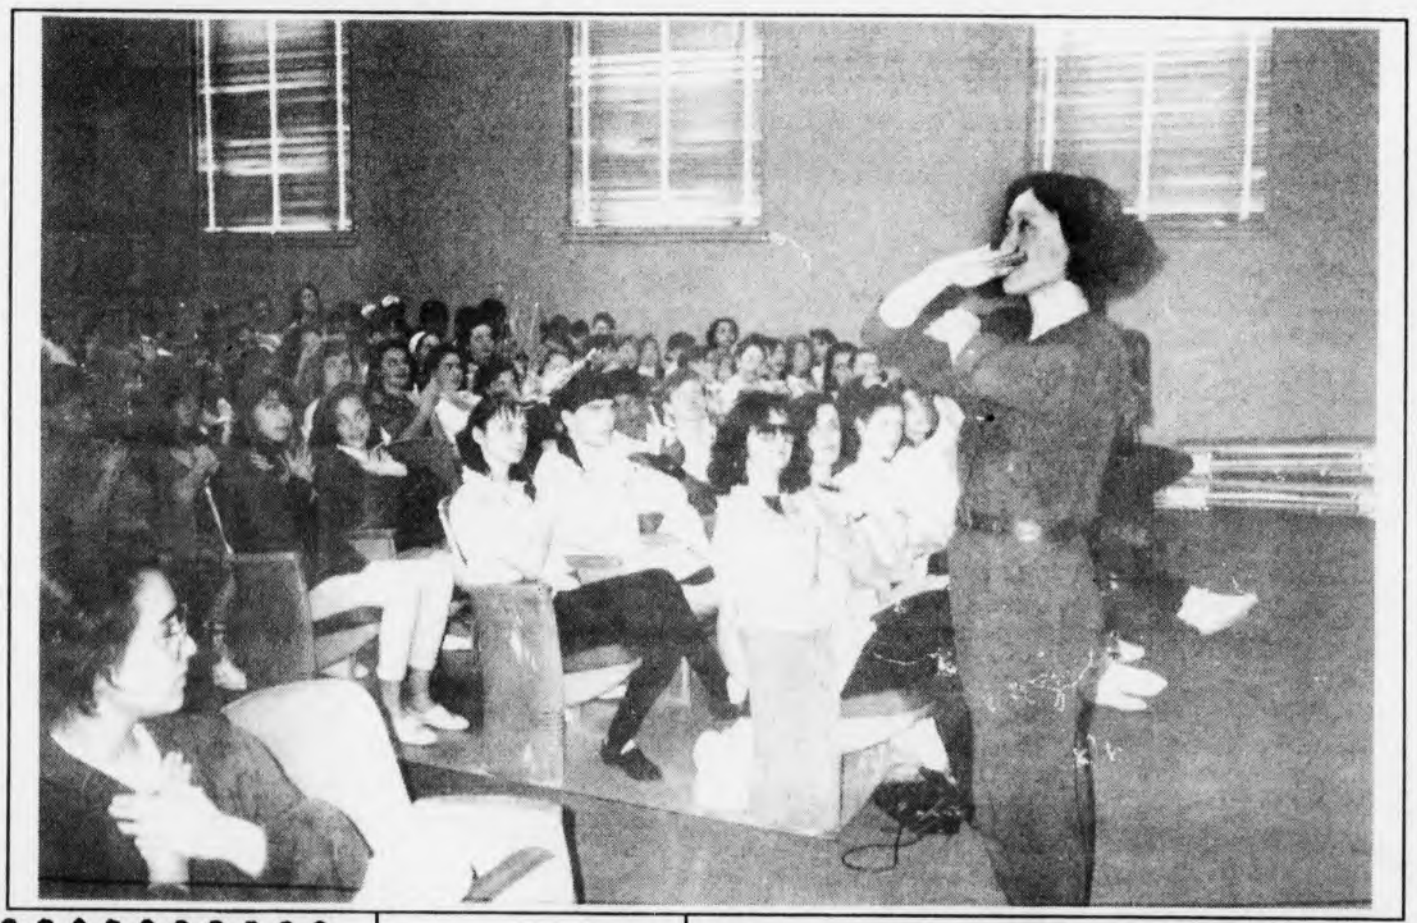
Founded by actor Hugh O'Brian more than 30 years ago, the program's basic philosophy is to seek out, reward and stimulate leadership potential in high school sophomores. The seminar is funded by local service organizations and businesses throughout the state including Schrafft Charitable Trust, Coca-Cola and John Hancock.

The Massachusetts Hugh O'Brian Youth Leadership Foundation hosts the state conference, which this year for the first time will be held in two locations, Waltham and Springfield. In 1991, 220 outstanding tenth-grade leaders will participate in the conference, with two students selected to attend the World Leadership Congress in Chicago, Ill.

Talent search stops here

Lilian Faulhaber, Megan McNamara, Abigail Pease, Ryan Sawchuck, all seventh graders at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School, have been selected to receive awards for their achievement in the Talent Search Program sponsored by Johns Hopkins University.

Cohasset High School has participated in the CTY Talent Search for the past eight years. Talent Search is a program sponsored by Johns Hopkins University's Center for the Advancement of Academically Talented Youth. The goal of the program is to identify the most academically talented seventh graders, offer those students summer educational programs, and provide them with recognition at state and regional ceremonies. Each year for the past eight years the Cohasset Public Schools have received a Johns Hopkins Certificate for Distinction in this competition.



Initially, students are selected based on their scores on the SRA tests administered each year. Students scoring at the 97th percentile or higher on those tests in the sixth grade are encouraged to participate in the program. If they wish to enter, they take the Scholastic Aptitude Test of the College Board in December of the seventh grade. If their scores approximate the averages of eleventh and twelfth graders taking the test, they are singled out for distinction or to receive awards at state or regional ceremonies.

Selected to receive a Certificate of Distinction are Lilian Faulhaber, Megan McNamara, Abigail Pease and Ryan Sawchuck. The state and regional awards will be presented to qualifying students at a ceremony to be held on Sunday, June 9, at Boston University.

High scoring students

Cohasset High School has been notified by National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC) that: John Brister, Cecilia B. Candia, Jason T. Hunter, Rebecca A. Kirk, John B. Kisiel, Brenden J. Murphy and Maureen J. Smith have been designated High Scorers in the 1992 National Merit Scholarship Program. The Principal, Mary Ellen Gallagher, announced this week that these juniors placed in the top fifty thousand (50,000) of more than one million participants in the 36th annual Merit Program.

While all 50,000 "high scorers" have shown outstanding academic potential, only about 15,000 of them (the top scorers in each of the 50 states) will be honored as Semifinalists. The other 35,000 will be commended for their performance on the PSAT/NMSQT, but only Semifinalists will have an opportunity to advance in the competition for some 6,000 Merit Scholarships to be awarded in 1992. Neither Semifinalists nor Commended Students in the 1992 Merit Program will be informed of their standing until September, when they will be notified through their principals.

Slow Drains?

You'll never have a slow running, or clogged drain again!

The secret? Clean drains don't run slow. Slow drains, or periodic clogs, are signals that a thick layer of "gook" is choking your pipes. This gook coats the entire length of your pipe- from sink to sewer, or septic.

Conventional drain openers cannot remove this build up. Even a small tunnel through the waste lets them flow through the pipe, leaving the gook behind!

Now, with just a few minutes each month, you can easily clean out your pipes like new... and KEEP them clean with Plumb Clean. Its totally unique formula clings, and penetrates deep into the gook. That allows it to liquefy even years of build up. Plumb Clean will clean the entire length of your pipes. It will make your drains run like new, when used as directed. This penetrating action is so revolutionary, Plumb Clean is money-back guaranteed!

Save Money. A 1 lb. container of Plumb Clean holds up to 41 drain treatments. Even if drain openers could fix slow drains, you would have to buy over 10 quart bottles to get the same number of treatments. Plumb Clean costs about 35¢ per treatment. We don't know of anything that cleans drains for less.

Safety. Conventional drain openers are dangerous chemicals. They can injure eyes on contact. They can release deadly vapors, in some situations. Some, may damage your fixtures. Plumb Clean will not burn skin, or eyes. It will not release harmful fumes. When used as directed, it is 100% safe for people, and of course for all plumbing.

So, if your drains are signalling you, get safe, guaranteed Plumb Clean today! Available at:

Safam to give concert

Safam, one of the top Jewish musical groups in the United States and Canada, will make one of its rare appearances on the South Shore when it performs during the celebration of Rabbi Stephen Karol's 10th anniversary as spiritual leader of Congregation Sha'aray Shalom of Hingham.

The concert will highlight a weekend of special activities and will take place at 8:30 p.m. Friday, May 4, at the South Weymouth Junior High School.

It will be preceded by a Shabbat Havdalah service conducted by Rabbi Karol.

A Shabbat service at 9 a.m. May 4 will begin the observance.

CAREGIVERS' SUPPORT

The Cohasset Council on Aging will sponsor a Caregivers' Support Group for families and friends caring for an elderly person to discuss common concerns in an informal setting. The Caregivers' Support Group is open to residents of Cohasset and surrounding communities. The first meeting will be held May 7 from 7 to 9 p.m., at the Senior Center, 3 North Main Street, Cohasset.

LET'S WORK TOGETHER

Cohasset has a great deal at stake with the upcoming override questions on May 18. It is incumbent upon all of us to get as much information as possible and access what impact the override will have on us and also what impact the override failure would have upon our community.

We should all be making it a point to attend the Community Forum on May 8, at the Unitarian Parish House, 23 North Main Street, Cohasset at 8 p.m. Cohasset has much to benefit by this override on May 18. The quality of life in Cohasset needs to be preserved. Voting is a great privilege of our citizens and should not be taken lightly.

As town citizens, we're all in this together and we should all be working together as one community for the total betterment of our town. Remember, it is a wonderful town to live-in, grow-up in and retire in! Isn't that why we all want our town to be the very, very best?

Music Circus plans late season opener

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

In a move that could set local businesses reeling, the South Shore Music Circus, feeling the crunch of the recession, has been forced to shorten its season.

Despite a later than usual start to the season, Music Circus management has assured Cohasset High School that it will be able to continue its tradition of holding its commencement under the tent.

In past years the Music Circus has opened its season in early June; this year the first scheduled show is slated for mid-July.

Notable acts scheduled to appear under the big top this year are, Roseanne Barr, Reba McEntire, Ray Charles, Olivia Newton-John, Kenny Rogers, Randy Travis, and John Denver and Gallagher.

Many of the bigger acts will command ticket prices in the $35 to $40 range

According to Edward Kasses, the production manager for the theater, the shortened season is a reaction to the region's rough economic climate.

"There are less ticket dollars to go around," he said.

Kasses said the shortened season will not necessarily mean a shortage of acts.

He said that instead of cutting stars from the line-up, an effort was made to

Selectmen seek halt to Government Island fight

By Andrew MacLellan
Mariner correspondent

The proposed renovation of Government Island came closer to realization Monday night as selectmen met with Joe McElroy, chairman of the new Government Island duplex citizens committee.

McElroy and the 17 others have agreed to aid in the stabilization and renovation of the town-owned property and hope to present plans that "will not be a drain on town assets and will benefit the citizenry at large."

The committee's objective is to "make the Government Island duplex and immediately surrounding acreage accessible to Cohasset residents and community organizations for public use, enjoyment, and recreational activities."

Furthermore, in their letter of intent the committee cited benefits to the town through the historic preservation of the duplex, providing community assistance in beautifying the grounds and maintaining a site for community organizations, and in possible revenues generated through use of the land.

Selectmen were receptive to the committee's offer but were wary about McElroy's insistence that the override ballot question six, which allots $30,000

Sargent pumps up work

By Donna Cogliano
Mariner correspondent

Kevin Sargent, 32, can't imagine working in an office all day. Instead, Sargent, a Cohasset resident makes his living outdoors in the world of masonry. He specializes in brick work and stone walls.

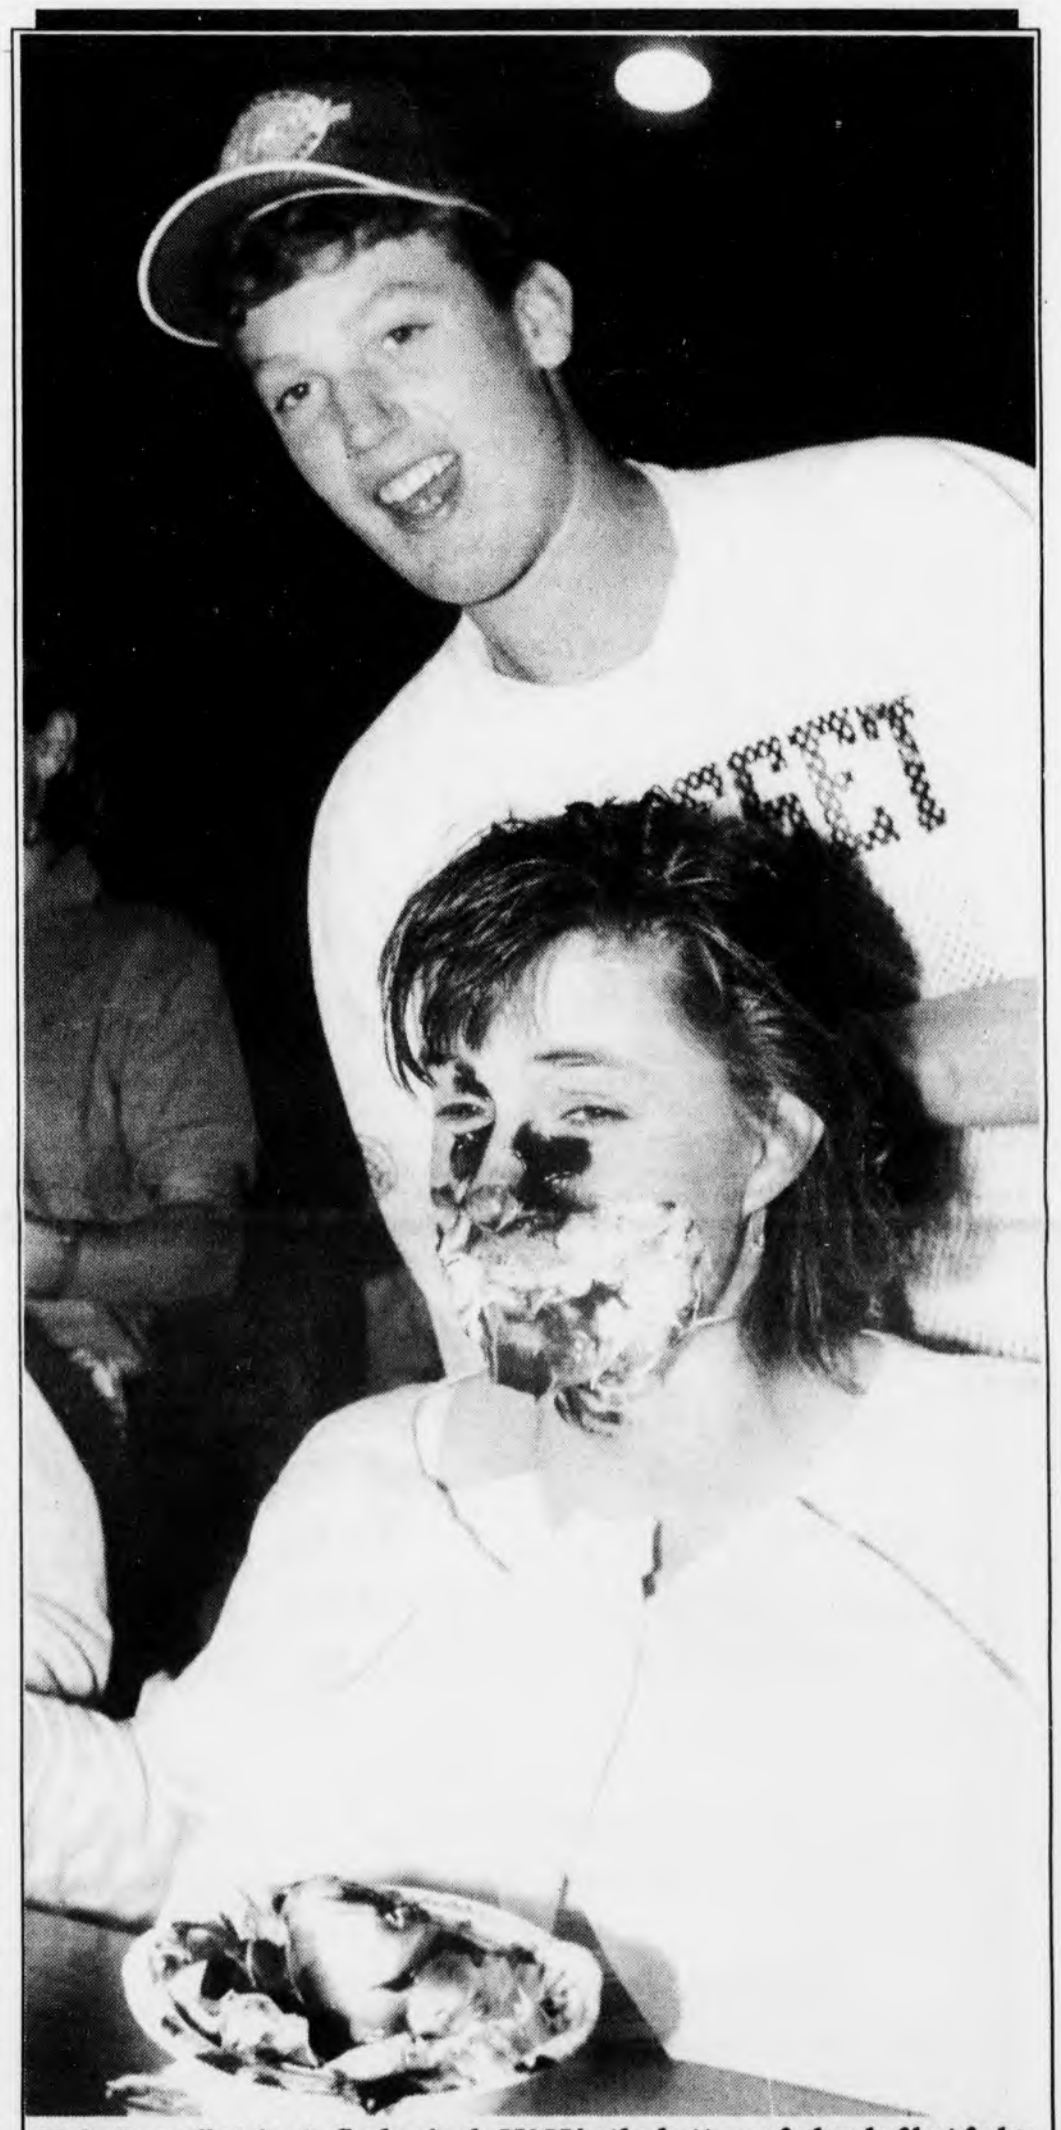
Ninety-five percent of his work is outside and he loves being outdoors. "I couldn't see being confined to an office. It not for me," said Kevin. Plus you can get a pretty good tan while you work, he added.

Kevin and his cousin Raymond Sargent are involved these days in the town pump project in the center of town. As recent as last week, Kevin and Raymond completed the cobblestone work surrounding the new town pump which was has been constructed by Charles Butman Jr. Several townspeople have donated their time and labor toward the project as have Kevin and Raymond.

The cobble stone surrounding the town pump well is about 35 by 12 feet in area. It consists of a half circle and was put together with stone dust as opposed to concrete. This way you can dig up the walk and replace it at anytime.

The two cousin will also be putting in a brick walkway near the hardware store in that downtown area. It is hope that the project would be completed by Memorial Day.

Cobblestones lined the streets of Boston many years ago. Raymond says that he heard that cobblestones allowed the horses to get more of a grip on the roads.



In another history lesson, Raymond explained that cobblestones were used to weight down boats that traveled over from England empty. The cobblestones would be removed and cargos put on board for the ride back. Cobblestone were used so that the boats wouldn't travel over empty.

Kevin Sargent says he had the best

Pierson takes the gold for TV talent

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Wigmore Pierson walked away with the Golden Tape for cable TV's Best On-Air Talent during ceremonies May 1 at the Barker Tavern in Scituate.

The win delighted the Cohasset showman who prides himself on dealing with questions of substance.

One of the segments shown to the judges from the six-town Continental Cablevision region involved Pierson taking on then Selectman Chairman Rocco Laugelle over the issue on-air of what questions could be asked.

It seems the judges loved the banter because Pierson took the top slot despite some stiff competition.

The other nominees were Bob Detwiler of Norwell, who took the silver award for his work on Detwiler's Journal, Children's Corner and Election Coverage; Christine McDonald, a channel 53 anchor; Bob Pietrzak; Gail Bell; Marc Delorey and Peter Whitfield.

The judging was based on three minute tapes watched over the course of one evening by a large panel of judges from the six twon region.

The awards were broadcast live on Cable Channel 53.

In a mock Emmy ceremony, Joe

CDC plays town hall

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will be performing Jane Martin's "Talking With... " a series of one woman vignettes, at the town hall auditorium, May 21, and 28 and June 4, 11 and 18 from 6 to 7:30 p.m.

According to members Lynn Eisenhauer and Gayl Varallo, the play, which will be directed by Joe Doniger consists of 11 monologues by a variety of women who share their enthusiasms, passions and secrets. Tickets are $8.

Beach licenses held up

Selectmen put a halt to all licenses issued for the Sandy Beach area until they are able to obtain a variance from the zoning board of appeals.

Six licenses have already been approved by selectmen - five for food and ice cream vending, and one for the sale of dry goods.

The permit issue delay comes as the result of a letter from Robert Davenport, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce, which was sent to Cohasset building inspector Robert Egan.

The letter prompted Egan to confirm that beach vending was not allowed under town bylaws and would require a variance to continue.

According to executive secretary Greg Doyan, downtown merchants took exception to the fact that dry goods, consisting of clothing, were to be sold in the Sandy Beach area.

Selectmen will meet with the zoning board of appeals at their next scheduled meeting June 6, and will ask for a quick decision to be made on the matter.

Blue laws still in force

After a request for guidance from Police Chief Joseph Kealey selectmen voted to adopt a policy not to allow stores to open until noon on Sunday, unless already operating.

The request came in response to a letter sent out by Peter Torkildsen, the Commissioner of the Department of Labor and Industries, localizing Sunday sales permits.

Chief Kealey, who is the Sunday permit issue authority, asked for selectmen's input as to what the town consensus might be.

An open hearing was posted for Monday night May 6 but since no one showed up, selectmen advised Chief Kealy not to issue permits except in cases of inconvenience when a business has lost hours.

The stand was redundant, as an assistant attorney general reminded towns in a follow up letter that Torkildsen's edict was without merit.

The blue laws, which are still on the books have been upheld by state legislature despite two recent attempts by Gov. William Weld to roll them back.

Mixed Doubles partners Jim and Claudia Story and Florrie and Rich Reddick of Cohasset anticipate the Cohasset Community Center Round Robin Tennis Tournament Benefit to be held June 29 and 30. Call 383-0088 to register by June 10.

Peripatetic pupils head for the water

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

If this is May, can end-of-the-year field trips be far behind?

This year, seventh and eighth grade students will travel by land and water to learn something about science, history and math. Teachers will also use the trips in the language arts curriculum. Both field trips required school committee approval because they involved water transport.

Eighth-graders will take to the briny deep on a whale watching expedition conducted by a marine biologist. Although historically the whale watching trip has been taken in the sixth grade, this crop of students missed the boat when the trip was not offered during their sixth grade year.

The whale watch trip is slated for June 3.

Although there is no guarantee that the students will see whales during the trip, this is the time of year that whales are migrating back to their feeding grounds in the Stellwagen Bank off Massachusetts.

Seventh-graders will learn about the Cape Cod Canal and its marine environment in a classroom presentation and field trip. The program was created as a cooperative outreach program by the Army Corps of Engineers and Bridgewater State College's education department. It is already part of the Barnstable school system's science curriculum.

The classroom presentation consists of a lecture and slide show on the construction of the canal presented by a representative from the Army Corps of Engineers. The field trip consists of a two-hour cruise on the canal.

According to science teacher Kenneth Cisneros, the program fits into the science, world cultures, math and English curricula. The program presents information on winds, tides and marine life, covers the history and geography of the canal project and demonstrates the career application of computer study and navigational computations. Students will be expected to answer questions based on the classroom presentation and field trip.

Cisneros said the Cape Cod Canal trip, slated for May 24, is one of the least expensive field trips offered by the school system. Total cost of the trip is $4 per student.

Smoking banned at schools

Students, staff and visitors beware. As of July 1, smoking will be banned in school buildings at all times. Additionally, no smoking will be permitted anywhere on school grounds when school is in session. There are no designated smoking areas under the new rule entitled "Smoke-free environment."

The school committee adopted the new policy in a unanimous vote Monday night. No one appeared to register any comments about the policy, pro or con.

According to Superintendent Stephen A. Hart, the proposed policy was posted in the schools and staff comment was invited. No comments were received. Hart said most of the students and staff seem to be looking forward to implementation of the new policy.

Group seeks school stones

Organizers of the Cohasset Historical Military Memorial project want to construct the memorial using stones from a large stone wall on school property. The wall is on property acquired by the school system when it planned to enlarge Deer Hill School.

Supt. Stephen A. Hart said organizers believe they can save as much as $10,000 by mining the wall for appropriate stones.

Although the school committee raised no objections to the donation, they voted only to approve it in principle pending review by other town boards.

Committee member Ralph Kidder suggested there might be historical questions since the wall is on the grounds of the old Oaks Farm. The military memorial committee will also be asked to approach the conservation commission and the cemetery committee for approval before final action will be taken by the school committee.

The memorial, to be erected on the harbor, will honor Cohasset residents who served the nation from the Revolutionary War through Operation Desert Storm.

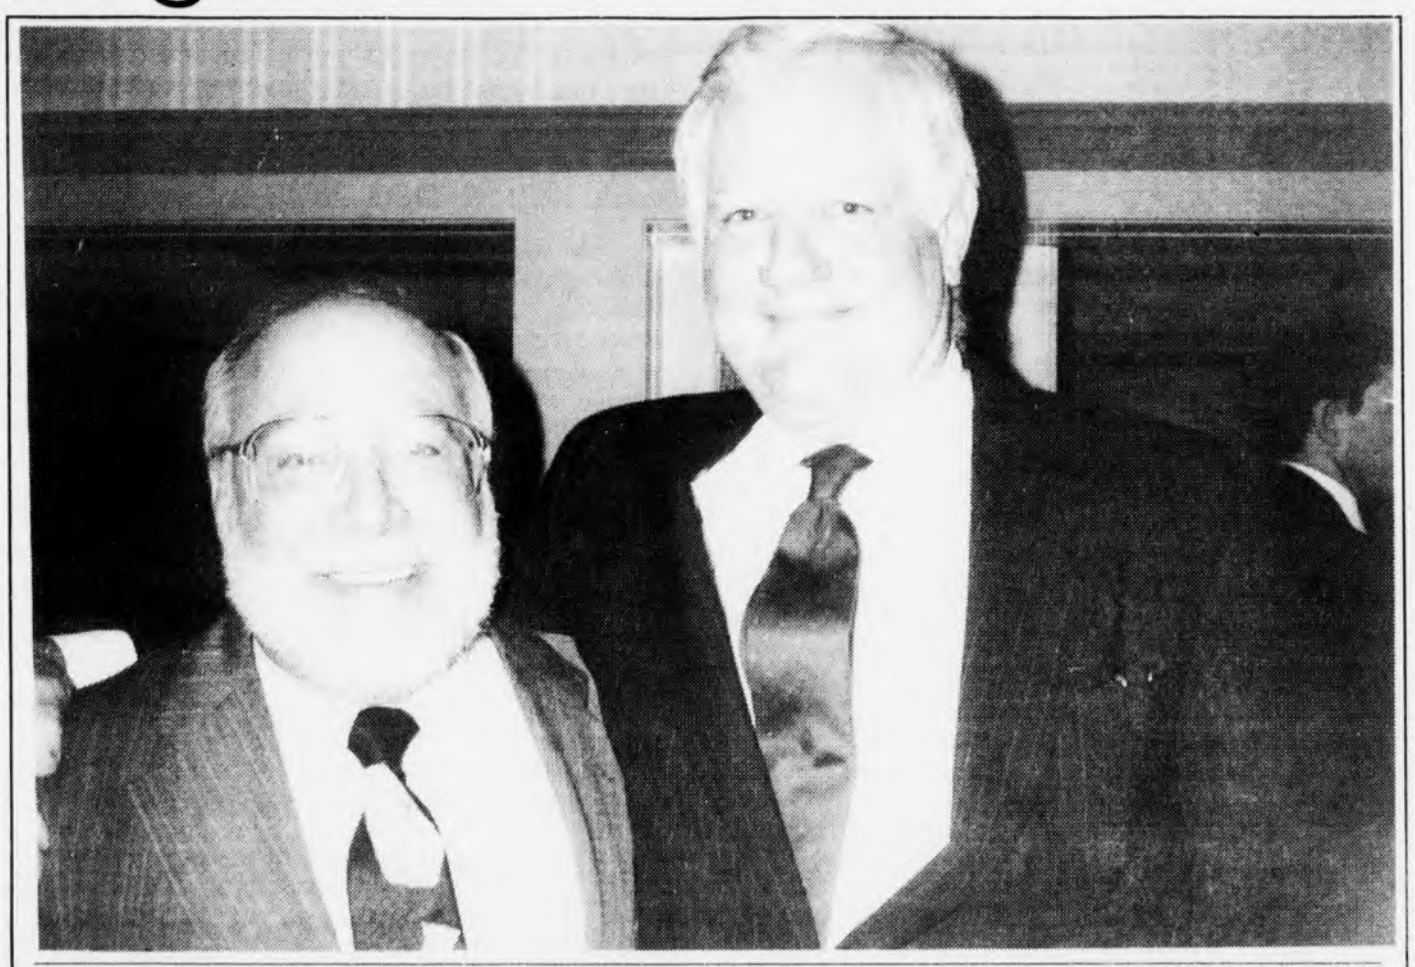
Shortsleeve from WBZ introduced the announcers who then announced the winners of the placques. Cable's own Wendy Forman provided some strong assistance.

The Plymouth River School production of "Kids Talk" won the gold for Best Producer under 13. The students from Cohasset's Deer Hill School grade 6 were also nominated for the award for their Quiz Show.

Other nominees for the various awards included: Normandie Nigh for The Fitness Connection in the educational category; Michael McNamara also in the educational category; Cohasset High for Videotime, which was in the Best Producer under 18 category;

There were some interesting relationships at work.

Marion Barnes won the volunteer of the year award for Norwell. Her son, Mike Barnes won awards in several categories. So did her husband, Ralph.



Mike Barnes won the Continental Award, given for technical ability.

His parents walked away from the ceremony with some tapes or their own as the Hanover couple earned recognition together and separately. Ralph and Marion won the applause and acknowledgement of the gathering of community television supporters. The couple were the winners of the Producer of the Year award. There is no runner up in that category.

Jim Sinatra of Cohasset won a silver award for his "In the Wings" program in the Best Director category. The gold award went to Mike Finnerty of Hanover. Finnerty also took the silver for Best Camera.

Art Ducharme of Hanover won the silver tape for Best Special with his work on the Plymouth Philharmonic Holiday Pops.

A large screen TV played small segments of the winning tapes as the awards were distributed.

Music Circus plans late opening

shorten multiple shows by a particular performer.

Instead of his usual four shows, Kenny Rogers will only take to the stage twice; Willie Nelson will have one show instead of two.

Kasses is still optimistic that the Music Circus, a non-profit organization, can still make a decent showing, and contribute a sizeable sum to several charities.

"We anticipate this being a better year," he said, adding that the theater had its best season two years ago.

Kasses said the Music Circus will target couples and families who may no longer be able to afford a week away for their vacation.

He said the ad campaign will stress day trips; a show at the circus and dinner at a nearby restaurant.

"Our slogan this year is 'An at Home Vacation,'" he said. "We try our best to be a conduit to the rest of the businesses in the area."

The emphasis on patronizing area businesses may help take some of the sting out of the impact of the shorter season, he said.

Despite the gesture, many businesses are worried about the potentially devastating effect the shortened season could have.

Dan Leahy has been running restaurants in Cohasset since 1982. He started as the manager of Hugo's, and now runs Kimball's-by-the-Sea, a 130 seat restaurant and pub with a 55-room hotel.

He said that as much as 80 percent of the hotel's summer business comes from entertainers at the Music Circus.

He said the shortened season means the loss of six "key weekend dates" that will sharply cut into his profit picture. He estimated he could lose from $50,000 to $100,000 this year as a result of the new schedule.

Leahy said the Music Circus has a large impact on the economic structure of the town.

He said it is "responsible for the success of the business nucleus of the town" and that many businesses derive at least 50 percent of their gross during the weeks the Music Circus is open.

"The way the Music Circus goes, so goes the economy of Cohasset," he said. "It is going to have a very noticeable if not devastating result on the tax receipts of the town."

He said 2,200 people are "forced into the community" for every show, and, on average, they spend at least $5 each.

Leahy said the short season won't force him to lay-off any employees, but it will mean a freeze on summer hiring.

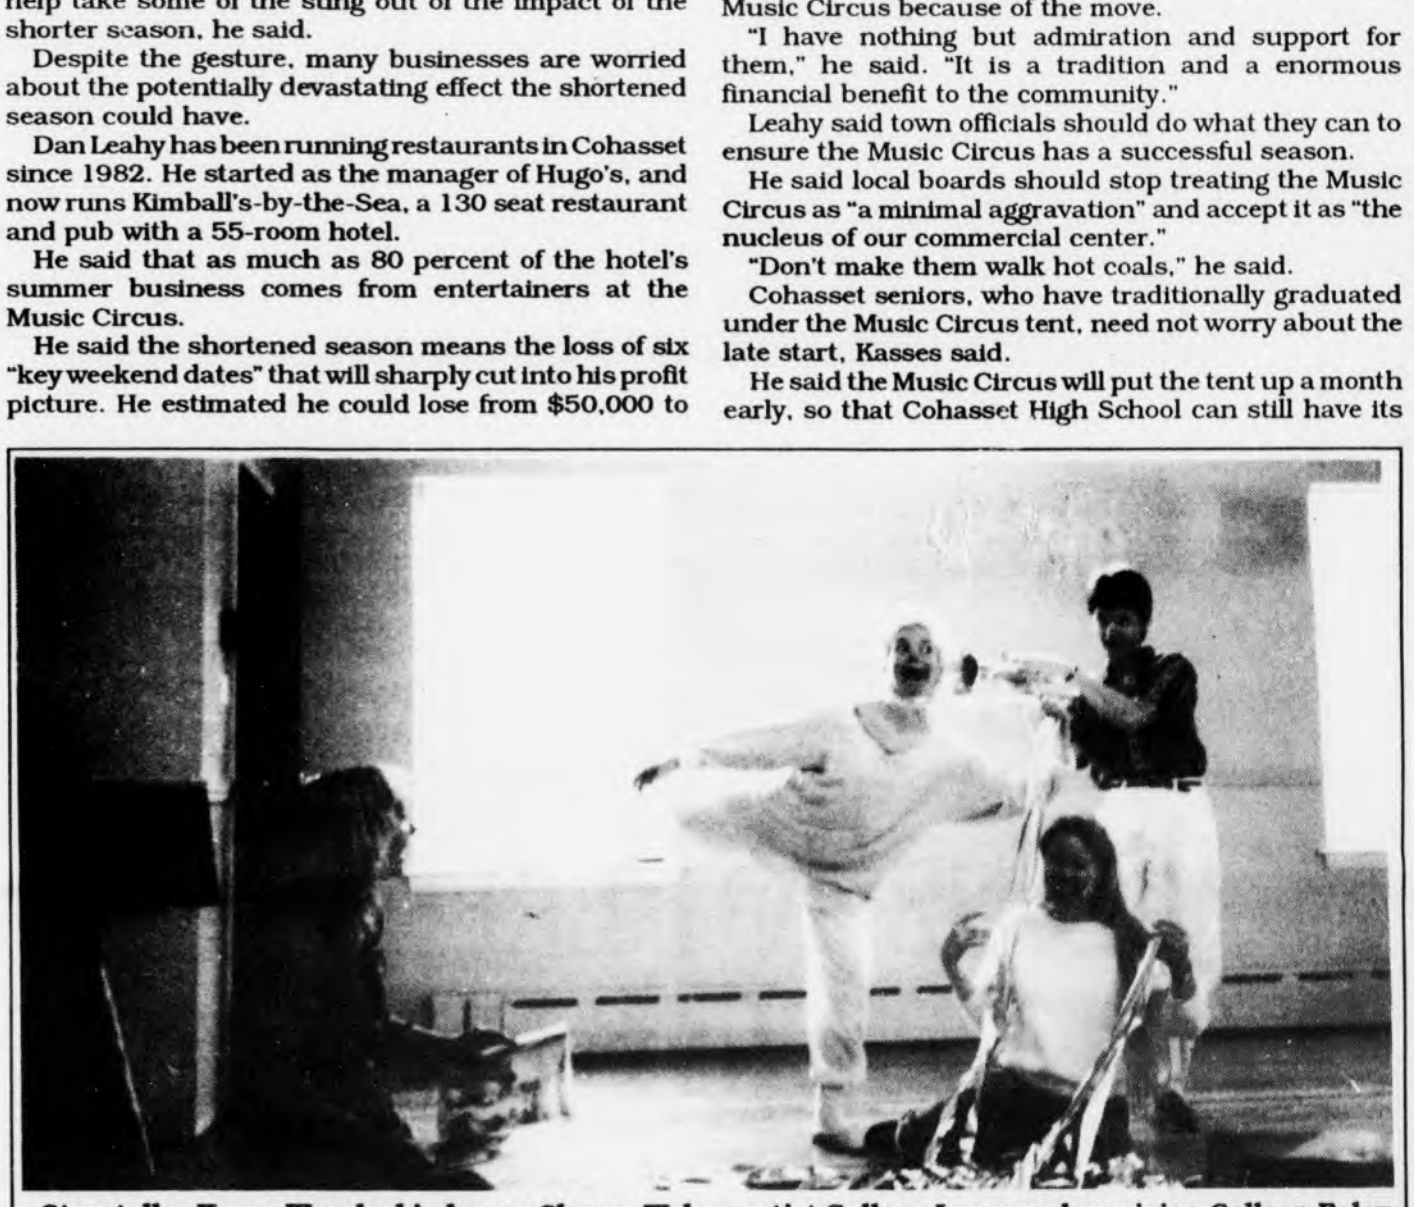
He said if other business do the same it could mean trouble for teens seeking summer jobs.

Leahy stressed that he has no ill feelings toward the Music Circus because of the move.

"I have nothing but admiration and support for them," he said. "It is a tradition and a enormous financial benefit to the community."

Leahy said town officials should do what they can to ensure the Music Circus has a successful season.

He said local boards should stop treating the Music Circus as "a minimal aggravation" and accept it as "the nucleus of our commercial center."



"Don't make them walk hot coals," he said.

Cohasset seniors, who have traditionally graduated under the Music Circus tent, need not worry about the late start, Kasses said.

He said the Music Circus will put the tent up a month early, so that Cohasset High School can still have its June graduation under the big top.

"Its a tradition," Kasses said. "We've said all along that the Music Circus is part and parcel to Cohasset.

He said that putting the tent up early will necessitate around the clock security and additional costs that could total $15,000.

teacher in the business as he trained under Cohasset's Jim Rosano for eight years before starting his own business.

"I really like the work. I got a lot of satisfaction out of it because the work is there forever. It's always there," said Kevin.

"When I'm an old man driving by I can say I did that as a young man," Kevin added.

It takes knowledge and a sense of pride to work with rocks and make them into something beautiful, Kevin explained. It's also very challenging work. "The biggest thing is to get started right because once you've made a mistake it's a headache for the rest of the job," he said.

Kevin has built many walkways, steps, stone wall and he does repair work also.

Stone work is everlasting artwork. "I like to think of it as being forever. Stone has been here for who knows how long. It holds up well," Kevin said.

Masonry work requires patience and strength. There's no question in his mind that the job requires patience, says Kevin. "Plus, it's good for you. It keeps you in good shape," said Kevin.

Building stone walls is a very slow process, according to Kevin. "You have to take your time," he said.

Seeing Kevin's work is the best example of the work he is capable of doing. "That's the only advertising I do is by my work," Kevin said.

Kevin takes pride in his work. "I just wouldn't do a job if it wasn't done right," he said.

Selectmen ask halt override fight for renovation of the property, be defeated.

The committee feared that as it is now worded, question six would require all override money to be used only for residential renovations.

As it is presently phrased, $30,000 the town hopes to secure on the question six override would be used "for the purposes of making renovations and improvements to the duplex residential dwelling on Government Island."

However, selectmen assured McElroy that, pending approval from upcoming May 29 town meeting, the money could be put towards a municipal project on the same property.

After much debate, selectmen determined that if the committee drops its attempts to defeat the override question, it may then try to convince town meeting to swing the allocated funds from residential to community development.

Although he could not speak for the committee as a whole, McElroy said he would convey the nature of the bargain to the other members.

The proposal includes a possibility that a tenant/caretaker will remain in the duplex.

Max Pounder, an architect and member of the architectural design board reminded selectmen that any change in the use of the duplex may entail costly code specifications upgrades.

If the property continues as a residence, new codes not applicable.

Herbert Towle a member of the committee offered his labor free once construction is under way.

Selectmen vice-chairman Diana Kornet voiced concern over what she saw as a reneging of Cohasset's good faith agreement to provide affordable housing, adding that Government Island represents one of the "few straws" the town has to show it is making a significant attempt in that area.

McElroy countered by stating that the present tenants do not need affordable housing because they are working and have lived in the dwelling for 17 years, longer than the affordable housing requirements have been on the books.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby also pointed to several other efforts the town has made to bring in affordable housing into Cohasset, including the Bates building.

The committee, which met for the first time last Saturday, toured the duplex and will establish a course of action in the weeks to come.

Should town meeting approve of the committee's proposal, definite plans will be forthcoming by Aug. 1, according to McElroy.

Republicans return

Neil Chayet whom everyone has heard at one time or another on Radio Station WEEI in "Looking at the Law" spoke to over 100 people in attendance at the Cohasset Republican Town Committee meeting last week.

A meal was served by town Committee Chairman Julie Guild assisted by Nancy O'Toole, Rita Strong, Jane Russell, Patsy Dean, Mary Doherty, Judy Volungis, Murray Campbell, Sam Pease, Peter Guild, Mary Varisco, Douglas Peak, Rick Silva, Martha Gjesteby—other spouses who pitched in were Arne Gjesteby, Ted Guild and Christy Mihos.

The meal was prepared by Yvonne Julian and the above mentioned Republican Town Committee members. Plus many others made salads and baked luscious desserts.

Chayet's subject was "Republicans Return - Challenges and Opportunities."

His focus was on several priorities. You pay for what you get. But he said this contrasts with the insignificant income the state pays legislators and elected officials such as lieutenant governor and governor. He said his son, a recent graduate of law school started at $70,000 a year.

Chayet said that the theory of entrepreneurship is the back bone and principle of our country's freedoms and democracy.

around town

❑ Congratulations are in order for Mark Rattenbury this week, and he has earned them. Mark, who will be graduating from Wentworth Institute of Technology in August, has earned himself a superior honor. At the Annual Students Awards Program, Mark received the President's Award for Academic Excellence. That is a grand honor, folks, and Mark is going to earn his degree in electronic engineering, so he is sure working hard. Great going Mark, we're sure you will have a brilliant future.

❑ Vera and Frank Infusino were guests of honor at a recent surprise party at their home to celebrate their golden anniversary. The party was given by their daughters, Nancy Galvin of Tewksbury, and Dorothy Andrade of Cohasset.

❑ Great news for all of you flower lovers, husbands, sons, fathers, etc. ... there is a brand new flower shop in our fair town, right next to Sea 'n' Cheese! The shop is called Flowers By The Sea, and is run by Lee Androsky. Everyone that knows Lee knows how talented she is, and she is willing to put that talent to work to make an arrangement that you can only dream about. She also has a large assortment of pretty plants and flowers, and will be able to get you what you want if you don't see it there. Flowers By The Sea will be open six days a week, from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m., so be sure to stop in. With Mother's Day coming up this weekend, what better time to stop in?

❑ Here's news that is perhaps the athletic news of the century ... for us! In the Ninth Annual Quincy Senior Olympics beginning on Monday, May 13, the Boston Athletic Association will be represented in the males over 80 age group by Cohasset's own Ellery Clark. He will defend his four titles from 1990, the one-mile run, one-mile walk, three-mile walk and the running long jump. Ellery's father, Ellery Clark Sr., was on the B.A.A. 1896 Olympic Track team at Athens, where the unicorn wearers won six events, including his two field events. The Olympic Champ competed for over twenty years. Ellery Junior represented the B.A.A. from 1928 through 1935 and is most happy to again represent them in race walking. Later, on July 13 at Niagara Falls he will represent the B.A.A. in the age group 80+ in the National championship at Ten Kilometers (which is the same as 10,000 meters or 6.2 miles).

❑ Great news from St. Michael's College ... Jason Cameron, son of Bruce and Lois Cameron, was awarded the honor of rookie of the year of the lacrosse team. It is an honor in itself to be on a varsity team as a freshman, you know how well he played to earn that treasured award. That also says a lot for the Cohasset High School's Lacrosse Coach, Ken Ekberg.

❑ Don't miss this week's "Pierson to Person" show, live on Channel 3. From 8 to 9 p.m. Thursday author Barbara Malley will be on; she wrote "Take My Ex-Husband Please, But Not Too Far." Barbara's ex-husband, Ed, and new wife, Aliceann, will be on the air by telephone from Florida during the second half of the show. Should be interesting ... from 9 to 10 p.m. our selectmen chairman Edwin Tebbetts, School Committee Chairman Barbara Bliss and Advisory Board Chairman Arne Gjesteby will be on so that you may be informed before you vote.

❑ We salute Pat Plante this week. As any of you who may have gone to Super Stop and Shop last weekend may know, Pat and his wife Maria were up there with a very special cocktail table that they were raffling to benefit the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens. It is an exact reproduction of the Celtics Basketball Floor (Maria's Dad made the original that is in the Boston Garden) built by Pat and built to scale, with over 1,000 pieces of oak with an original piece of the Boston Garden Floor. To create and then donate a masterpiece like that is amazing, and we sure hope that the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens will benefit greatly from it. The drawing isn't until June, perhaps they have some raffle tickets left....

❑ Now is the time for you all to begin summer vacation plans, so we must tell you to leave August 11 free. That's the night that the South Shore Art Center, under the direction of Ron Rawson, will be having a benefit at the South Shore Music Circus. The star of the evening will be Harry Belafonte, always a smash hit. More will follow later, just mark your calendar now.

❑ Congratulations to Dave Hansen, Greg Schultz and Kevin Smith, key players in the Pee Wee Division of the Seahawk Yankee Conference. This past Sunday the boys won their final game against the Eagles (5-2) to become the Hawk Play-off champions.

❑ That's the news from here, please let us know what's happening in your house, or neighborhood. Give me a call.

Old ideas die hard on Beacon Hill

By Sen. Robert Hedlund

Recently, the Democratic leadership in the House included a significant increase on the Auto Excise Tax in their budget. A local option was added to this increase. Republicans opposed the initiative on the grounds that it practically ensures higher automobile costs for the Massachusetts citizens while also hurting an already depressed industry. Democrats supported the change as a means to attain additional revenue and because of the local option attached to the proposal.

In 1981 the Auto Excise Tax was reduced from $66/$1,000 to $25/$1,000 (at this time, Massachusetts was one of the few states that even had an excise tax). When the people's excise tax went down, their propensity to buy new cars increased, and state sales tax revenue eventually reflected that increase by growing substantially. Even with the current recession, State collection is still 180 percent higher than in fiscal year 1980, when the auto excise tax was at the ridiculous $66/$1,000 rate.

Beyond the increased revenue that Massachusetts drivers have given the State via the excise tax, they have truly been assaulted in recent years. Auto insurance has skyrocketed to the point where Massachusetts drivers pay the ninth highest insurance rates in the Country. Their registry fees were increased by the previous administration at an unprecedented rate of 112 percent, and their gas tax was increased by 91 percent to pay for earlier deficits.

However, it was in this very environment that the House Leadership thought it would be wise to double the auto excise tax on the drivers of the Commonwealth. I will urge my colleagues in both parties to join me in opposing this newest tax increase.

Service Tax

Senators and Representatives were working late to debate the expansion of the sales tax on services. The Service Sales Tax was initially created and supported by the Senate leadership and signed into law by Gov. Dukakis last year. Gov. Weld has demanded its repeal, and a majority of legislators agree with him. Those of us in the Senate who oppose this tax package had the necessary votes to repeal what most businessmen, legislators and taxpayers recognize as bad public policy. In the March 5th Senate session, there was a filibuster which prevented a vote to repeal the service tax. On February 6, a majority of my Senate colleagues joined with me in repealing this unpopular tax. Some House Democrats attempted to link a repeal of the service tax with a proposal which would have rendered proposition 2 1/2 virtually impotent as a means of containing our property taxes. However, this attempt failed, and subsequently both the House and Senate voted once again to repeal the service tax. Gov. Weld immediately signed the repeal.

As your State Senator, I look forward to a brighter day soon, when my report to you does not include the continued efforts by the legislative leadership to increase taxes on our already overburdened citizenry. The quality of state spending practices are far too low to even consider telling working men and women to give more of their money to it.

Veterans

An important note of interest to all of our local veterans, and also to all of us who are concerned that those who fought for us are properly honored, regarding the Bill I filed to restore full holiday status to Veterans' Day: on February 26, my bill (S43) was heard by the Commerce and Labor Committee. Testifying on its behalf was Weymouth resident and V.F.W. leader Ray Barter. Also testifying in favor of S43 were representatives from the Norfolk County Labor Council, AFL-CIO and the UCFI Union. Supporters of the bill, myself included, believe that the potential loss of revenue to the big retail stores will be marginal, especially when compared to the significance of giving those who have served our nation the respect of a full holiday once more. Opponents of S43 argued that any loss is unacceptable. Future committee deliberations on this bill are expected.

editorial

We support the override, 8 to 10 times

The advisory board is backing eight of the 10 override questions.

We want to echo that position.

The general budget is tight. The advisory board and other town officials worked for months in an attempt to trim unneeded items. These people couldn't find more cuts and neither can we.

We do invite interested citizens to come up with ideas on saving more money.

The special election to deal with the 10 override questions is scheduled for Saturday, May 18.

In question 1, the general budget override seeks $142,000. This amount was appropriated at town meeting. We think backing this question is a vote of confidence for our town officials. The advisory board also supports a "Yes" vote on this question.

Question 2,seeks $30,556 to pay for raises for employees who were ready by town meeting. This does not include police, fire or school teachers — all of whom are still in negotiations. The advisory board backs this one.

Question 3 asks $20,000 for painting the old town hall. The paint job is needed. Anyone can see the peeling paint. The advisory board supports this question.

Question 4 calls for $3,000 for reconstruction of King and Beechwood. A good project and a small sum. The advisory board is backing a "Yes" vote. So are we.

Question 5 seeks $30,000 for renovations at Government Island. The advisory board recommends voting no on this question. Joseph McElroy is at work to pull together a plan for the property that would require no town money. Who wants to waste money?

Question 6 involves $4,169 for part of the salary of the senior citizens outreach worker. This is another small amount and a worthy cause. The advisory board agrees.

Question 7 calls for $60,000 for revaluation. The town will have to spend this money whether or not this question wins at the ballot box. The money will otherwise come from the general budget. So voting yes on this question preserves the general budget. We recommend it. So does the advisory board.

Question 8 is a debt exclusion for the school capital outlay. It would provide an exemption to the limits of Proposition 2 1/2 for work on the glass wall at the high school. We back it. So does the advisory board.

Question 9 is a debt exclusion for the writing lab at the high school. We think it would be a valuable addition to the school program. The advisory board backs it.

Question 10 would provide a debt exclusion for the renovation project at the police and fire stations. The advisory board recommends a "No" vote on this question. Arne Gjesteby, advisory board chairman, says the question is already covered in the general government override. We yield to his financial sense.

Register your dog or be fined

By the way, the time for renewing dog licenses has long passed.

Dog licenses run from January to January.

The town clerk's office will begin the process of fining violators next month.

"A Celebration of Mother's Day 1991" - Cohasset Flying Scot style.

They have always wanted us for food

By Tanna Kasperowicz

It will be "the" family boat. Peter and Tad will sail, you'll crew. We'll sail as a family." - Ray Kasperowicz, circa 1980.

Their names are oftentimes deceptive: Morningside, West Wind, Ruby, Merry Jane...named after wives, children...all non-threatening, sounding very family. Sometimes not deceptive at all, sometimes even threatening: Bride of the Waves. And then utterly confusing names such as Bojuin, which is not a Snark, as a Snark is not a Bojuin. The now former skipper of the Bojuin (which went to Duxbury) made strange telephone tape messages, too.

In that first year, I, as many Flying Scot wives, had no reason to believe Ruby would not be the family boat. I knew Ray had two summers of lessons, and had crewed for two more summers; but I thought he would be a kind teacher. "Most of sailing is just doing, you don't really need lessons if you have me to teach you," he said.

I went out a few times, but got tired of being sworn at repeatedly and willingly regained my Saturday's, spending most of them on the beach with a good book...while out beyond Sandy Beach you could see the little white sails, looking peaceful. Ha. Nothing peaceful out there...bunch of angry men trying to win little plastic trophies.

Over the years I ran into other FWC (former wife crew) on Sandy Beach and at the weekly Tact (Flying Scot) party. Almost without exception, the wives told "the family boat story" and how they found it necessary to resign as crew. The stories were so similar...I began to think the reason (a family hobby) for buying a boat had been written hundreds of thousands of years ago by the original Flying Scot forebear (who I think still lives in Ohio, and who is Rita Strong's uncle). One thing was becoming obvious...Morningside, Ruby, Sugar Pie, Sea Cookie were never intended to be "the family anything." They are war machines, honed and whetted to win, to beat.

Over the years dozens of Scot women have played the family boat game...and learned, too late, that they had been used.

Comments from former wife crew:

The man I sailed with that first time, which was my last time, was not my husband...reminded me a little of Chinatown: "She's my sister; she's my daughter; she's my sister."

Last Christmas he gave me a picture of his boat; then he wanted to put his boat in the garage, in my car's space.

One month I went to write a check for groceries and he motioned me off. How much food do you need, he asked? What do you mean? — the regular stuff, every week we have orange juice, cereal, milk, lettuce, celery...some bread. There was no money for food that month because he had bought new sails.

I don't know if this is true, but it's rumored XYZ stopped crewing when he pushed her off the boat.

It's obvious to everyone they have always wanted us for food, for the nifty little cheese dips and crackers we supply...for cleaning the house before the party, for getting the ice, the paper plates.

The thing I hate is we can go nowhere all summer long; if you are invited to a wedding, you go alone. If someone dies in your family or his family, you go alone.

The weekly Tact party is tactless and it isn't any kind of a party. It is about protest; it is about spelling out the rules; it is about the rules which have been broken; it is about figuring out to one thousandth of one percent what place everybody is in.

End of former wife crew quotes.

This year, the Cohasset Flying Scot Fleet Opener dinner will be held, appropriately, on Mother's Day. I am to take a main dish/casserole. If I can't make it, please to let them know about the casserole.

❑ Tinytown select people had some tough competition April 24...a rival station featured the TV movie "Switched at Birth." I can't say for certain, but bet Tinytown select people dropped in the ratings.

❑ Remember how Lois Lane was always "a hairline away" from making the Clark Kent/Superman connection? Well, Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts (who ran as the taxpayers' advocate in '89) was in China a couple of years ago when the riots began; and then he was in South America (near Argentina?) on or about the time of a natural disaster. So my question is, was he anywhere near the Persian Gulf earlier this year?

commentary

More support for override

To the Editor:

The silly season is upon us. This is when large numbers of voters will convince themselves that 2.5% is an immutable constant such as the speed of light, pi, or the universal gravitational constant. With inflation at 5% a real estate tax rise of 2.5% is actually a decrease in real terms of 2.5%. This is widely acknowledged in other areas. Federal income tax has tax brackets and standard exemptions which are adjusted upwards each year to accommodate for inflation. Likewise Social Security payments are adjusted upwards each year to adjust for inflation.

Five years of 5% inflation with real estate tax increases of 2.5% compounds to a tax decrease of 12% when measured in purchasing power.

It is time to stop destroying the infrastructure of Cohasset and vote responsibly on the override ballot questions.

Two override questions backed by seniors

To the Editor:

Most people are not yet aware of exactly why Councils on Aging were established—what their purpose is—and how important it is that these councils be supported. We all understand the need of schools and education for each child—but we do not fully comprehend the importance of the Councils—and the needs of senior citizens.

Because many people are living longer—and, as a result, have important issues to be addressed—the scope of the Council's services is consistently increasing. When people reach the ages of 60, 70, or 80, they usually enter a new phase of life. Oftentimes they are alone for the first time since birth, many physical problems may develop and budgets become restricted. The Councils not only offer advice, but extend to them the possibilities of:

1. being with others instead of alone
2. cultural stimulation such as trips to museums, concerts, theatre and overnight sightseeing tours instead of boredom and lassitude
3. doing volunteer jobs in the company of others instead of feeling worthless
4. getting home care when necessary instead of hospitalization
5. participating in physical activities such as exercising, swimming, walking and dancing instead of apathy and immobility.

All of the aforementioned contribute to physical and emotional well-being and forestall the need of hospital care and the need of assistance from their children who have the care of their own young families. Increasing numbers of middle-aged people are relieved to know that they may turn to the Council on Aging for advice and assistance regarding their parents. Quite often a grandparent moves to Cohasset to be near to a son or daughter and knows no one else in town. The Council on Aging offers them a place to come to get acquainted, to get involved and to receive advice they may need regarding health insurance and home health care.

If these needs are not satisfied and met on a local level, an increasing proportion of our income taxes will be needed to cover Medicaid costs because of increases in more and lengthier hospitalization.

The present Council on Aging budget is less than one third of one percent (1/3 of 1 percent) of the total $12,000,000 budget. The total appropriation for operating expenses has diminished from $11,272 in 1989 to $4,236 as approved at Town Meeting in April, 1991, for the fiscal year 1992. The Council fortunately has had an excellent director since 1986, and the amount accomplished has increased dramatically. However, even a competent director and a carefully chosen board, using all their wisdom and energies, cannot survive with a budget that does not cover the basic costs—telephone, postage, essential office supplies, Tuesday luncheons, and the printing and mailing of the monthly newsletters.

The Council has two (2) positions paid by grants—and many, many volunteers—giving 156,000 hours in service last year. What the Council needs is to maintain adequate staff including the Outreach position and maintain a modest budget for present day expenses in order to continue to meet the growing needs of our senior population living here in Cohasset.

In closing, we appeal to the voters of Cohasset to vote Yes on questions 1 and 7 in order to maintain the quality of life that we have come to enjoy living here in Cohasset.

Override for elderly detailed

To the Editor:

On May 18 Cohasset voters will consider the merits of seven General Levy override questions and three debt exclusion questions. As a member of the Council on Aging I urge favorable support of the $4,169 question that would pay one-half the salary of our Outreach worker, formerly funded by the State. This position determines health and support needs for elderly people — usually the frail elderly over 80 years of age most of whom live alone and have little family or support services available to them. The Outreach worker determines the needs of such people and then works to match the needs with the medical and support services wherever they may be. Without an Outreach worker many of our frail elderly and others would be seriously and fatally deprived. The voters by supporting this $4,169 question can ensure the continuation of this life-and-death service not only for the benefit of the elderly, but as a help to their families and the community at large. The cost of this override question would be 3¢ per week for each household. A bargain for the humane treatment of our elderly. However to make really certain that the Outreach worker is funded by the selectmen it is also important to support the General Override Question #1!

Regarding the other override questions, this is a referendum on the quality of our wonderful town. Many voters have lived here most of their lives and they cherish Cohasset. Many others chose Cohasset because of its beauty, its excellent schools or the many other attractions or activities that are available here. During these first ten years of Prop 2 1/2 we have already realized many savings in our Town budget and on our tax rate — fewer employees, deferred capital items and many deferred maintenance items. Now the bottom of our fiscal barrel has been scraped and we must choose between a reasonable level of Town services at modest cost in taxes — 35¢ per day per household — and serious decay in town services and equipment.

The most important thing for each voter is to go out on May 18th and vote! Each voter can be selective among the ten questions, but be sure that each vote recognizes the positive value of each ballot item and the real short-term and long-term penalty for rejecting an item.

Beyond this override election, Cohasset people should consider some other budget possibilities with the help of the Legislature such as alternate revenue sources or provision for freezing the tax burden of those with so-called poverty-level incomes.

Do vote on May 18th and vote for Cohasset!

Kasperowicz generates response

To the Editor:

Tanna Kasperowicz's piece in the May 2 Mariner, "Tinytown" cuteness aside, did present a different view of the override questions that was most interesting and will certainly affect my vote.

On the other hand, promoting the notion that our recycling program is "like - - - - - in the ocean," given the magnitude of the Near East oil fires and slicks, is the same thing as saying an individual's vote is nothing more than a meaningless drop in that same ocean. One could go march in front of the United Nations or White House to protest whatever actions or inactions by the movers and shakers of the world led to the fires and slicks, or one could stay home and actually do something. What one individual or one "Tinytown" does is not going to remake the world but it will encourage other "Tinytowns" to do the same and, when all the "Tinytowns" are " - - - - - in the ocean," the tide will change.

Very truly yours,
Max S. Maire

Students are concerned over budget

To the Editor:

On behalf of the students of Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School, we would like to express our deep concern for the future of education in Cohasset as well as the other fine services offered to us by town employees.

Over the past few years we have seen a rapid decline in the comprehensiveness of our high school, as well as the reduction in the services rendered by town employees.

The students of Cohasset urge the voters of Cohasset to vote favorably for support of the Proposition 2 1/2 items listed on the May 18 override ballot.

We are sure that the voters will realize that someone voted yes to help support their education, please do the same for us.

Respectfully submitted,
Kerri Miele, President

FOR AN IDEA OF HOW DIRTY YOUR ORIENTAL RUG IS, RUB THIS AND LOOK AT YOUR FINGER.

Oriental rugs are constantly picking up various types of soil. Some are greasy and some are gritty. But they all can eat away at your treasured possession.

For your Oriental rug to retain its beauty and value, it should be cleaned at least once every three to five years.

At Grillo Oriental Rug Cleaning, we carefully examine each rug, then give it the most suitable treatment. Sometimes that means gentle machine-washing, other times it means our 'Art-Safe' hand-washing. And our exclusive equipment and methodology enable us to remove the deep-set grit that others miss.

Furthermore, unlike harsh commercial cleaning, our individualized, museum-quality care is always safe, always effective.

For more information, or to have your rug picked up, call (617) 871-6500. Outside this area code, call 1-800-649-7707.

Driver Ed program renewed

For 36 years, Les Faulkner has been teaching Cohasset teens to drive. Next year will be no exception although it will be his last. Faulkner plans to retire after the 1991-1992 school year.

Faulkner, owner of Scituate Driving School, offers both classroom and behind-the-wheel lessons to students on a voluntary basis. Classes are offered during study hours and after school.

According to Supt. Stephen A. Hart and high school Principal Mary Ellen Gallagher, Faulkner's rates are comparable to other driving schools and only amount to a $5 raise. Additionally, they said Faulkner has gone out of his way to accommodate students with schedule conflicts or transportation difficulties at no additional cost.

Committee member Russell Reidy supported renewal of the program, saying Faulkner's service had been proven over a long period of time.

"This is an optional program," he added. "No money changes hands through the schools."

Despite injuries, Lady Skippers keep on running

By Donna Cogliano
Mariner correspondent

Carver hosted the Cohasset girls' track team during pouring rain on Monday. Carver prevailed by a score of 95-41 and the score was difficult to read since most of the score sheet had been washed out by the rain.

"Everybody was soaked to the skin," said Cohasset coach Ron Emmons. Actually the weather conditions were miserable for both teams. "It was an under water battle from the first event on," said Emmons. "It was just a driving rain and it got pretty cold near the end."

Emmons was impressed because the Cohasset team members stuck around to support each other during the slick conditions. Rather than huddle on the bus, the Cohasset girls cheered each other on in the pouring rain.

Carver is considered one of the top teams in the league. Emmons said, "They're an amazingly talented team. They're probably the third best team in the league."

Senior Allison Doherty, who has been competing with a toe injury, has qualified for the state meet in discus. She has also performed well in the triple jump while placing in every meet in discus. Her senior project consists of redoing the long jump and triple jump pits. She been doing a lot of digging out there during her spare time.

Senior Jen Goodman has been consistently placing in the 880 for the Skippers.

Team captain Jen Reidy and Stephanie Eno, both juniors, have been trading off positions in the 440 race results. Reidy won the race and Carver while Eno placed second. The two friends are not afraid to beat each other on the track. "The good thing is they push one another. They're willing to go head to head. These two are the best of friends off the track yet on the track they go at each other," said Emmons. Sometimes friends won't want to pass each other but these girls are different, he added.

mariner sports

Sophomore Maria Kierce has qualified for the state meet in high jump with her best clear of 4-10. She's done well considering she's been bothered by injuries.

Claudine Johnson is the teams leading scorer as she competes in the 100 meters, discus and javelin. She recently qualified for the state meet in discus. Johnson turns in a dedicated and concentrated effort for the Cohasset Skippers. "She's shown steady improvement in both discus and javelin," said Emmons.

Seventh grader Caroline DeLima holds the best high jump record of 4-8 for her age group. Seventh grader Benite Johnson holds the junior high record for triple jump. Seventh grader Faye Menis, the junior transfer from California, is the third leading point scorer on the varsity team for Cohasset. "She's picked up an awful lot of points four us," said Emmons. She holds the junior high record in the low hurdles even though she's coming off an injury. She also competes in triple jump and in the 100 race.

Eighth grader Kate Carroll, a two-miler, has won three races and finished second twice.

Eighth grader Martina Snyder is working hard in the long jump and in the 220 race.

Corinna McMackin is a new discovery on the varsity squad. "She has turned into a very reputable low hurdler and 440 runner," said Emmons.

With three meets remaining, Cohasset coach Ron Emmons is pleased with his team's effort of 2-4. Cohasset has won meets over Hull and Rockland.

"What I'm most proud of is their willingness to keep going and fight back when they've been hurt," said Emmons.

Mets claim first grand slam as Dodgers hang on to winning streak

By Joan Kovach
League correspondent

There are some things that give a baseball team a mighty fine feeling. There's the glory of being an undefeated team, a sweet taste while it lasts. There's the good centered feeling of a new club starting to play together like a well-oiled machine. And there's the forever yours thrill of owning a grand slam, a gift that J. L. Williams gave his team in their second game of the season.

From Sunday to Sunday, the major league Dodgers have been working to create and hold on to an undefeated record. This past Sunday, the Pirates and Dodgers played a tremendous extra-inning game that see-sawed back and forth, ending only when a Matt Lewis double drove home the winning run in the top of the seventh and Greg Bilton retired the side in the bottom of the seventh to secure the victory.

For the Dodgers, two wins had led up to this game. Sunday's (April 28) opener against the A's showed that returning pitcher Matt Lewis looks strong again. The Dodgers entire infield - Burke Davis, Matt Belson, Justin Buckley and John Paul Lacks - played an outstanding game defensively, but a hustling Morgan Sandell broke up Lewis's no-hitter in the fourth inning with an infield hit for the A's. Davis, Belson, Buckley, Lacks and Lewis, along with Tucker Gledhill, Jimmy O'Sullivan, Dennis Rooney and David Marr of the Dodgers tasted their first base-hits of the season in this game. Pitcher Ben Ketchem had a strong three innings for the A's, supported by the defensive efforts of Matt O'Connor, Sean Norris and Adam Sasso.

After a disappointing loss on opening day, the Mets bounced back on Monday (April 29) in their game against the Athletics. Led by J. L. Williams' fence clearing grand slam, two-hit pitching by Grey Taylor and Ely Kahn and a three-for-three performance by Taylor Devin, the Mets went on to defeat the A's.

When the Mets and Dodgers got together on Thursday, Justin Buckley struck out three and allowed one run. Lewis, Davis and Marr had hits, Davis, Belson and Bobby Stansell showed some excellent fielding and Tucker Gledhill scored the winning run.

This past Sunday when the two undefeated teams met, both the Pirates and the Dodgers played terrific baseball. The Pirates' Robbie Buckley and the Dodgers' Matt Lewis each gave a tremendous effort from the mound. In the field, Paul Michael Quintin, Ben Smoot (Pirates), Jeremy Williams, and Burke Davis (Dodgers) served their teams well. Hits came from Colton Ralston, Martin St. John, Justin McNamara, Derek Bugley, Smoot, Quintin, and Buckley for the Pirates. Besides Lewis, Bilton, Buckley, Lacks and Gledhill helped out the Dodgers.

Cohasset's expansion team, the Cardinals, made a good showing against the Red Sox last Wednesday (May 1), when 12-year-old Dave Noble made his pitching debut against winning pitcher Colin Pyfrom. Noble pitched a seven-hitter through four innings while striking out eight Red Sox, then ran into trouble with walks. Young Steve Baker pitched the fifth and final inning. He hit two batters yet managed to strike out the side. At bat for the Cards, Lloyd Workman went one-for-three with a solid single, and Adam Sheerin sliced a single between first and second. A game highlight was Baker's single to right off Red Sox Ace Joey Magner. In the field, Alex Schwerin made two fine plays throwing to first for the outs. Rookie Steve Kovach retired slugger Pat Hurley in the first inning on a sharply hit but cleanly fielded ball to second.

Ted Goff continues to shine on the bases. His two walks were converted into Cardinal runs. Other scorers for the expansion Cardinals were Schwerin, Workman, Payne, Leigh Atherton and Noble, who showed great hustle in the first inning while diving into first base on a grounder to third. Still the robust Red Sox captured their second win.

Cardinal bats really came alive in their third contest of this young season. The Red Birds banged out thirteen hits but still the A's ran off with their first and well-earned win. Extra base hits came from Lloyd Workman (1-2 with a double) and ten-year-old Alex Schwerin (2-3 with a triple). Noble (2-4), Baker (3-4), Payne (2-4), Slugger Charlie Toppan (1-3), Stevie Wonder Kovach (1-3) and Adam "Ant" Sheerin (1-3) delivered additional hits. Kudos to ten-year-old Charlie Dean who has done a super job behind the plate, accepting this difficult position and providing sound leadership. Dave Noble made a nice fielding play and throw in the first while Paul Sheerin made perhaps the catch-of-the-year-to-date on a drive to left center. Kovach made nice plays on both a fly and a hard grounder. Toppan played very well in right field. Red Bird pitcher Steve Baker took up his first starting assignment and worked well until fatigue set in in the third and led to his demise. Fire-killer Dave Payne came in and relieved for an inning and a third performing admirably but the A's sprinted around the bases for an incredible eleven runs before the third inning ended. Goff continued his streak of scoring in each of three games. Schwerin, Noble and Adam Sheerin scored two runs apiece, while Big Lloyd Workman, Jack Rabbit Charlie Dean, Stevie B., Dave Payne and Leigh Atherton also crossed the plate to chalk up runs. Speedy Steve Kovach contributed the only stolen base. The A's took the game but the Cardinals are warming up.

Major League games are held every weeknight at Barnes Field at 6 p.m. Bring the family down to watch. Hot dogs, pizza, nachos and french fries are available.

Giants vs. Athletics

Giants 8 - Athletics 2

By Dennis Ford

What a day for starting the minor league baseball season (rain cancelled games earlier in the week).

For all you parents that stayed away or just dropped off the kids — you missed a great game Saturday between the Giants and the Athletics.

Coach Moody's Giants were terrific.. Robby Moody as the Giants' starter was awesome! Watch out Roger Clemens!

Garrich Towle, the Athletic's starting pitcher, gave it his best — but it lead to the debut pitching of Justin Maitland — another promising talent.

• Other highlights of the game:

John Kasameyer hit a home run scoring the first two runs for the Athletics. Jay Whoriskey of the A's doubled; Jared Ford of the Giants walked three times; Patrick Gaughen of the A's hit a strong single — keep up the good work. Beth Pierson walked and later hit a solid single into right field to start a rally for the Giants in the late innings.

Don't forget, hot dogs, French fries, and sodas available at the concession stand. What an ending to a great game — now to mow the lawn.

Spring Soccer results

By Carol Riley

Some stunning play took place on soccer fields around the South Shore the past two weekends in Coastal Youth Soccer League contests. Cohasset teams—comprised of approximately 500 boys and girls ranging in age from 7 to 19 years—report the following results:

Girls Under 16 lost an away game to Plymouth 0-3, with Sara Kirk suffering a finger sprain in the final minutes.

Girls Under 14-1 whipped Pembroke 7-0 on their home turf, with Cohasset goals scored by Jemilah Afshar, Melinda Johansen, Andrea Mercurio (2), Danielle Nohe (2), and Molly Pease. Coach Nino D'Urso praised players: Steffie Lubitz for great game defense, Alissa Sexton at midfield. This team continues undefeated following an earlier triumph over a tough Plymouth squad 3-1, highlighted by goals from Melinda Johansen, Dawn Meehan and Martina Snyder. Emily D'Urso, goalkeeper, blocked a penalty kick by Plymouth to keep the score in Cohasset's favor. Outstanding in this game were: Corinna McMackin, defense; Allison Ritts, midfield; and Katie Ross, forward.

Girls Under 14-2 continues their winning streak with a 3-1 victory over Scituate, with goals by Kathleen Fitzsimmons, Andrea Freeman and Emily Henderson on assists by Megan Fahey and Kelly O'Donnell. Coach Sandy Theriault commended midfielder Andrea Grew and fullbacks Erin Devine and Katie Anderson. Last week this fine team throttled the red menace from Hingham, 5-1 on goals by: Megan Fahey, Andrea Freeman (2), Catie Campbell and Kelley O'Donnell. Assisting the goals were: Kathleen Fitzsimmons, Elizabeth Bestick, Emily Henderson and Catie Campbell. Captains Jessie Sandell and Liz Bestick showed great leadership eliciting superb play by midfielders Andrea Grew, Jayne Singleton and Jessica Eaton-Bruce.

Girls Under 12-2 made a strong comeback to tie Marshfield 2-2. The girls were down by two goals and came back with three goals (one was called off sides). Strong support came from Ali Kinchla, Kerry Dwyer and Kristen Reynolds at midfield. Forwards Megan Connolly, Alyssa McNamara, Stephanie Noering and Katie Walsh were outstanding, according to coach Brian Nohe. Girls Under 12-2 reported a hardwon victory 1-0 against a strong Duxbury team. The forward line was superb, with great support from the defensive team. The coach noted outstanding play by goalie Lilly Morris as well as Katie White, Megan Waal, Sara McDonald, Courtney Brown, Amanda Gontarz and Katie Devine.

Girls Under 10-2 lost 3-0 to a fine Duxbury team, despite a super defensive effort by Alissa Conley and strong play by midfielders Eileen Ridge and Victoria DeRosa. "The score does not reflect how the team played. In the first half Cohasset dominated and had several chances to score, but not enough luck," commented Coach Nino D'Urso. The previous week this team suffered a 2-1 loss to Scituate, despite strong play by midfielder Kaitlin Jackson and forwards Jill Magner and Brianne McKenney.

Boys Under 14-1 lost two games this past weekend in what will no doubt be their most difficult competitions this season. Duxbury beat Cohasset in an away game 8-0; Hingham sadly accomplished the same result the next day at home 4-0. Chris McKenna and Ben Redfield shared goalkeeping duties, fending off countless shots on goal. Showing great speed and ball handling skill on the field were Ryan Freeman, Eric Henry, Andy Collins, Brian Riley and Robil Ordelheide.

Boys Under 12-1 swept Marshfield last weekend 4-2 on goals by Taylor Devin (2), Tom Forbes-Kittle, and Tucker Gledhill. Coach Terry Kahn praised Sam Goedecke for providing outstanding defense.

Boys Under 12-2 took it on the chin 0-6 in Norwell, despite great play by Noel Grinnell at forward and Leigh Atherton on defense. Justin Golden and Matt Lewis were terrific at halfback, according to Coach Paul Cotter. This team lost on Saturday to Marshfield 5-1 in a game which was much closer than the score indicates. Cohasset's only goal was scored on a penalty kick by Greg Bilton. Colton Ralston was strong at forward, Derek Bugley and Tom Leahy at halfback and John Kasameyer on defense.

Boys Under 10-4 overpowered Scituate 2-1 last Saturday with Jake Motley scoring both goals for Cohasset. John Paul Laugelle in goal pulled off many great saves. Evan Cutler and Elliot Noon were solid on defense; Devin Buick was tireless in midfield.

Boys Under 8-1 tied Boys Under 8-5 last weekend 7-7, with goals by Eric Shea (4) and Paul Previte (3). Coach Terry Kahn praised strong play by Jay Bertovich and John Dwyer.

Boys Under 8-4 lost to Boys Under 8-2 with a score of 4-2, with goals scored by Jimmy French and John Cotter. William McAuliffe was great in goal; David Krueger strong on defense. Boys Under 8-4 lost on Saturday 3-0 to a fine Boys Under 8-5 team, despite good play by Andrew Dennis at forward, William Prendergast on defense and Carter Noon in goal.

Leo's Tigers lose to Quincy Royals 7 to 1

By John Kinchla

The Cohasset Hockey Tigers, a high-school-age team in the Pilgrim Arena's Spring Developmental Hockey program were flattened by the Quincy Royals.

The loss sent the Tigers skidding down the standings. The team closed its spring season with a favorable 4-3-2 record but out of contention for the league championship.

Few Tigers played outstanding games. The usual mistakes occurred. Cohasset failed to control the puck in their own end and Quincy capitalized on this shortcoming. Many Cohasset clearing passes were intercepted before they reached the intended teammate. Cohasset penalties caused the Tigers to skate shorthanded for 22 minutes.

Several Cohasset penalties should be attributed to Cohasset's lack of team speed. The Tigers were penalized five times for either hooking or slashing on Royal Breakaways. Eventually, exhaustion affected the play of Cohasset's penalty killers. Cohasset wings failed to backcheck and Cohasset defensemen were beaten on several Quincy 3 on 2's situations. Quincy also demonstrated finesse in crashing Cohasset's net, scoring two goals in this fashion.

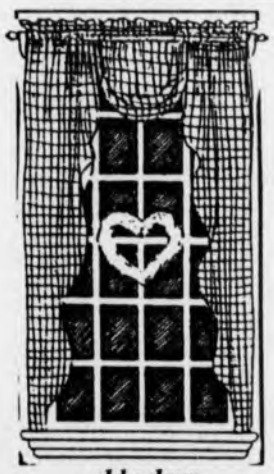
Up to this game, the Tigers had demonstrated a playing cohesiveness. They had been able to score with some precision. In this game, the highflying high school hockey Tigers, were thoroughly crushed by the Quincy Royals. Cohasset struck first in this contest, then the Royals came roaring back with 7 unanswered goals. Royal defensemen closed down Tiger wingers while Royal wings feasted on Cohasset goalie, Jeff Stone.

CHS Lacrosse team leads the way

With a 22-goal scoring binge, the Cohasset High School Lacrosse team ran its season record to 6-1, knocking off both Wellesley and Masconomet Regional High Schools last week.

Sophomore midfielder Doug Ellinger led the way against Wellesley with his first three-goal hat trick, as the Skippers cruised, 12-6. Midfielder Bob Whitaker, and attackmen Charlie Endris and Jake Powell each had a pair of goals, while sophomore midfielder Willie Adams, senior midfielder Bart Weisenfluh and senior attackman Matt Marks scored once. Freshman goalie Brandon DeVoe, filling in for injured co-captain Travis Coley, had eight saves, and senior defenseman Ollie Nivaud led the defense.

Against Masconomet last Saturday, Cohasset was even more dominant, running up a 9-0 lead, and eventually winning 10-1. Jake Powell and Bart Weisenfluh had three goals apiece in the contest, while freshman Endris chipped in with two goals and an assist. Nivaud added a pair of assists, and fellow defenseman Bill Baird scored his first goal. Junior attackman John Kisiel rounded out the scoring.



"This was our best game in the three years I've coached," Coach Ken Ekberg said of Saturday's game. "We passed and shot with great skill." A crowd of nearly 100 watched Cohasset's first weekend contest at Milliken Field.

This Friday, May 10, the Skippers face Xaverian of Westwood at Milliken in a 4 p.m. start. And on the following Thursday, also beginning at 4 p.m. at Milliken, Cohasset faces its most powerful opponent of the season, Falmouth High School. "That Cape Cod team is currently in second place in Eastern Massachusetts South, one of the toughest high school leagues in the

Vol. XIII, No.33 | Thursday, May 16, 1991 | 1-800-649-6661 | 50 cents

Voters will decide 10 questions Saturday

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

Saturday, May 18 voters will be asked to vote themselves more taxes as they face ten ballot questions for overrides and debt exclusions.

Voting hours are 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday. Absentee ballots are available on Thursday from 8:30 to 4:30, and Friday from 8:30 a.m. to noon. Ballots must be back at town hall by Friday.

Town officials maintain that without these overrides and exclusions, the town will not be able to maintain the current level of services.

Proponents cite an inflation rate of 5 percent, fixed increases in town pensions, insurance increases and debt service costs as reasons the town cannot live within the 2.5 percent levy increase allowed by the state.

There is no organized opposition to the override. Even Tanna Kasperowicz is in favor of the passage of Question 1, the general government question.

Seven of the ten questions are general levy overrides totaling $283,822; the others are debt exclusions for school maintenance, and renovations at the police and fire station.

This year the tax rate is $9.90 per $1,000.

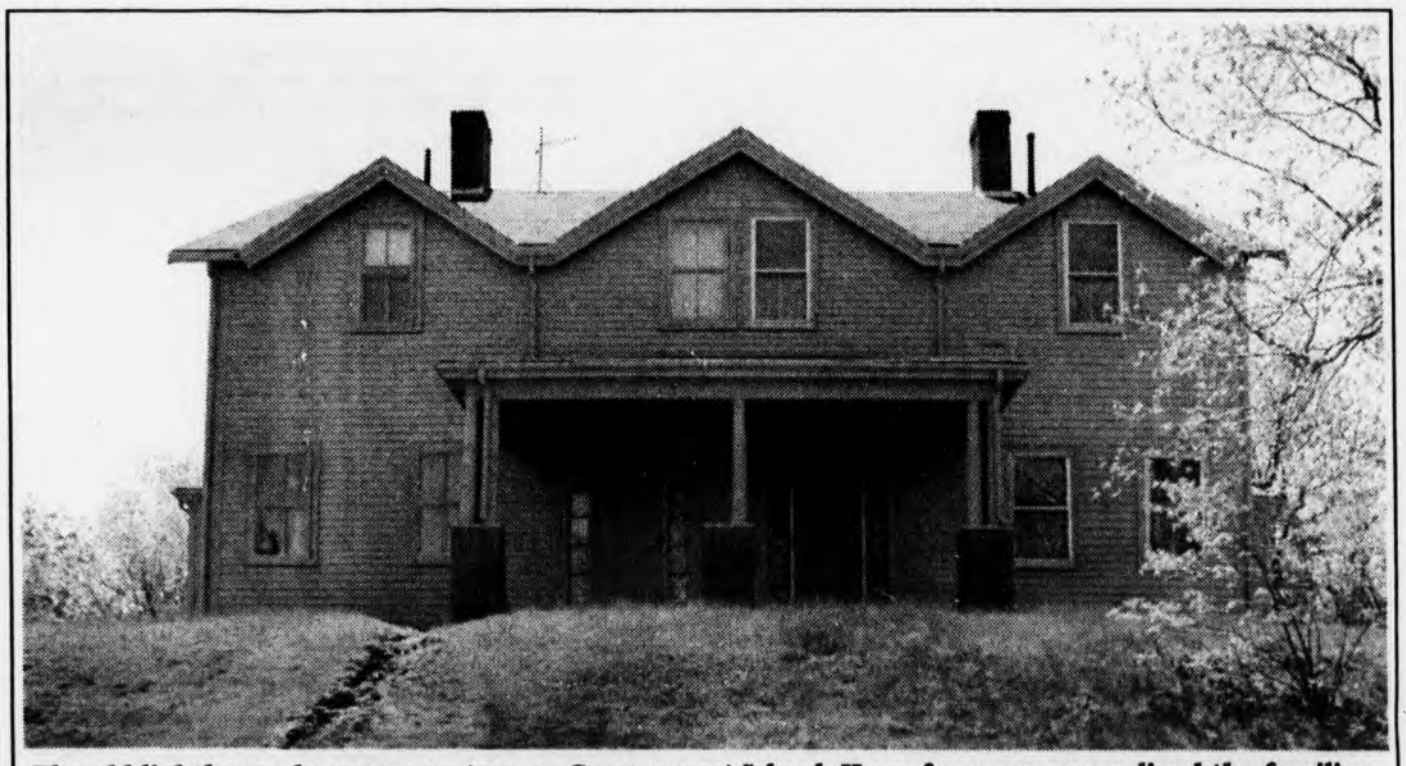
The passage of all ten questions would add $116 to the annual taxes of a house valued at $300,000.

Voters will decide on a general government override totaling $142,000 and nine additional items that total $283,000.

The days leading up to the election have been full of debate and confusion. The advisory committee supports only seven of the ten override questions backed by selectmen, and there have been conflicting reports about what cuts departments would face.

Arne Gjesteby, the chairman of the advisory committee, said that although the ballot's ten questions may be the source of some confusion, a menu approach is the best method.

He said the menu approach "tells people up front" what they are voting for.



"People can take what they want and leave what they do not," he said.

Gjesteby said that if each of the ten questions fail, the town will have to cut at least $142,000 from the budget. It will also lose $30,000 in state money, dependent on the town's own contribution, that would go toward the revaluation.

Gjesteby said the school committee originally operated under the assumption that its budget would be cut by 5 percent. He said that even in a worst case scenario the department's budget will only be cut by $68,000.

According to School Supt. Stephen Hart no teachers will lose their jobs if the override questions fail.

The old lighthouse keepers quarters on Government Island. Here, for many years, lived the families of the men who tended Minot's Light. One of the town's 10 override questions would authorize the expenditure of $30,000 for renovations for the building.

Candy Ford reaps benefits of her modeling agency

By Linda Guain
Special to the Mariner

Candy Ford doesn't hesitate to admit that she loves her life — and she has good reason to. She manages one of the hottest modeling agencies in Boston, has two wonderful men in her life, a beautifully renovated home 200 yards from the Cohasset shore, and a flexible schedule that allows her to devote ample time to her work and family.

"I have a very wonderful lifestyle," said the 36-year-old Ford, co-founder and director of Ford Model Management in Boston. "I wouldn't trade my life with anyone — not Princess Di, not anyone. It's a wonderful life. I have a great business, I have a beautiful son, a wonderful marriage, a great house ... and I just bought a new car," she said, smiling and looking as if to add, "Let's see, is there anything I've left out?"

If this all sounds too good to be true, Ford probably thinks it is too. But she has worked hard to make this dream come true, and is finally seeing the fruits of her labor begin to pay off. Natural beauty, brains and ambition have played a role. Tall, blond, blue-eyed and fashionably dressed, Ford could easily be mistaken for a model. And she obviously was at one time, modeling throughout her high school and college years while at the University of New Hampshire and Boston University, from which she graduated in 1978 with a degree in Advertising and Public Relations. Wearing a sporty pant suit and a collection of jingling gold bangles on her wrists, Ford has an engaging smile and a vibrant personality that exudes warmth, friendliness and self-confidence. It takes only a few minutes to get a sense of her quick wit, humor and boundless energy and enthusiasm.

A model business

From her spacious quarters in a four story brownstone at 297 Newbury Street, Ford recalls fondly and somewhat in bewilderment how her initial career in professional sports promotions landed her in professional modeling; and how this once fledgling business — which took root 12 years ago at her mother's urging, in a two-room office only a few blocks away at 176 Newbury — has blossomed into a lucrative, reputable and fast-growing agency — one of the best in town.

In March of 1979, fresh out of BU at age 23, Candy was about to leave her $4 an hour job — with the New

Sailing team tacks with 5-0 record

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

The Cohasset sailing team, sporting a 5-0 record, is on its way to the division finals.

This is the first year Cohasset High School has officially recognized the team as a varsity sport; for years it was considered a club.

This year, the team is celebrating its baptism into the world of varsity sports by posting the only undefeated record in the 15 school league.

Mary Lee Murphy, who opts for the title of "parent advisor" rather than "coach," said the team has outdone itself so far this year.

Last year the team placed second in its division and second overall.

This year the team appears unstoppable, and has already surpassed last years records.

The team regularly competes at Community Boating on the Charles River. The boating club also provides the boats for the teams.

Some of the teams Cohasset sails against during the regular season are: Hingham High School, Wellesley High School, Phillips Academy, Lincoln-Sudbury High School, Winsor Academy, Boston Latin, Boston College High School. Only the best of these schools will make it to the finals.

Murphy said the sport is not based on individual achievement, so much as team effort.

"They don't go out individually to win the race, they race as a team," she said.

She explained that the object is not for one boat to have the best time, but for a team to get as many of its boats in the top ten

On May 15 and 16 the 14-member team will put that teamwork to the test when it competes in the division finals; two grueling days of sailing against the top two teams in each of the league's three division.

Eight crews from each school will compete in the Sewer expansion plans hit a snag

The state will not approve the town's request to expand its sewer plant in the near future, according to a letter sent to the sewer commissioners by Brian Donahoe, director of the Department of Environmental Protection.

The letter suggests the town stick with the older plan to connect into the Hull sewer system.

Town Meeting at it's adjourned session faces two articles dealing with the sewer question.

Ted Guild, sewer commissioner, told selectmen Monday his board will discuss the situation with legal counsel before taking any action.

The state has been fighting with the town for years over the existing sewer plant which discharges water into the James Brook which in turn flows into the Harbor.

The cost of connecting into the Hull system is estimated at about $4.9 million with no state funds to match town money.

Volunteers wanted

Selectmen this week opened the doors for a public works garage study committee charge.

The five member committee will consist of two members of the previously appointed DPW study committee, one member of the original garage study committee and two members yet to be named.

"We want to look not only at town owned land, but at all considerations," said selectman Jane Goedecke.

Anyone interested in volunteering for the committee should contact executive secretary Greg Doyan at town hall.

COA celebrated at 5

The fifth anniversary of Cohasset's Council on Aging will be celebrated Tuesday May 21 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at 3 North Main St.

Selectmen chairman Ned Tebbetts will presented the council with a proclamation for their work in providing a variety of services, programs and activities to Cohasset's 1,450 senior citizens.

Conflicting manuever

The board of health was named as special municipal employees after newly elected P.E. William Baird submitted a winning bid for state mandated tank removals.

Baird, who is a principal of the WEB Engineering Associates, was named as a special employee by selectmen Monday night after the engineering company beat out M&E Zecco Inc.'s offer to remove tanks from the town's service stations for $500 each.

WEB Engineering's bid was $350 per tank.

The move was required to prevent a possible conflict of interest.

Becker named chairman

The board of health recently re-organized and the following have been elected to the positions of: chairman, Sharon L. Becker; clerk, Michael H. Sullivan; P.E. William Baird.

Garage still considered

Selectmen retained the right of first refusal on the Eastern Edison's North Main Street facilities Monday night.

The move came after Edison engineers, who were unclear about whether the town was still considering appropriation of the property and buildings, requested clarification of intent.

Eastern Edison informed selectmen that it is continuing steps to clean up the site.

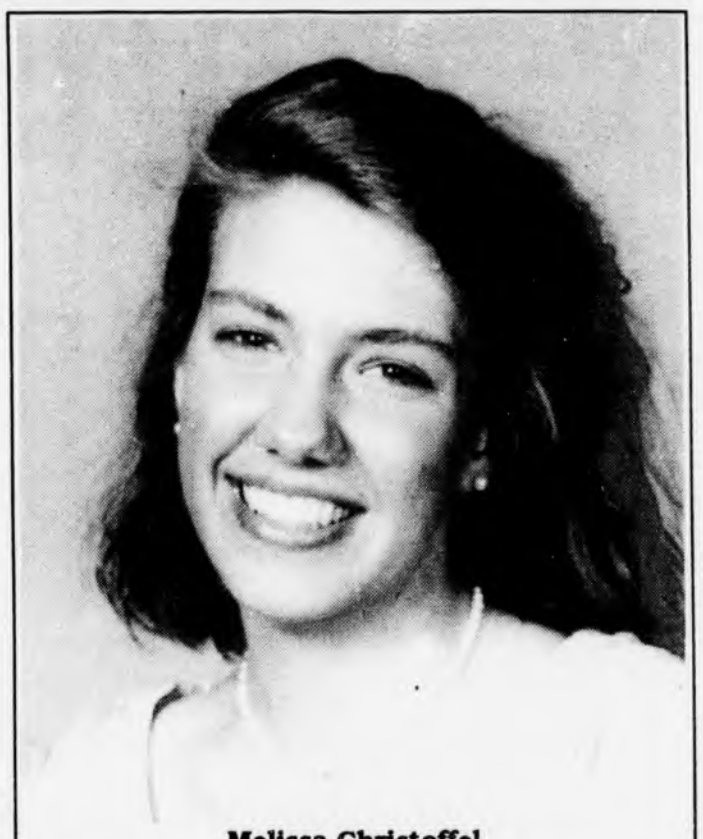
Renovations payment

Selectmen requisitioned payment of $27,436.39 for the next installment on the police/fire station renovations, pending the renovation committee's satisfaction.

A standard retaining fee of 5 percent, or $16,000 will be withheld until construction is complete.

Christoffel wins scholarship

Having been chosen from 60,000 original applicants and 1800 semifinalists as one of the 151 finalists—the only one from Massachusetts—Melissa E. Christoffel, Cohasset High School, was interviewed by members of the National Selection Committee during the National Competition in Atlanta, Georgia.



Melissa was described by one of the Committee members as the best student she had ever interviewed...her understanding of the world around her is very impressive, as is her compassion. Chosen as one of the 51 National Coca-Cola Scholars for 1991, Melissa will receive a $5,000 Award, renewable annually for four years, totaling $20,000 over the course of a four-year undergraduate program at the accredited U.S. college or university of her choice.

"Melissa is a very mature, capable young leader and we are proud that she is a 1991 National Coca-Cola Scholar," said James B. Schultz, Vice President, Sales and Division Manager, Coca-Cola Enterprises North.

Polling hours

Voting hours are 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday. Absentee ballots are available on Thursday from 8:30 to 4:30, and Friday from 8:30 a.m. to noon. Ballots must be back at town hall by Friday.

Voter Info. Forum speakers advocate override

By Sue McNamara

A broad coalition of Cohasset residents discussed town override issues at a forum sponsored by the PSO, Wednesday, May 9, at the Unitarian Parish House. The PSO invited all town department heads and board chairmen, as well as the Council on Aging and the Chamber of Commerce, to explain to voters the impact of the May 18 override election. League of Women Voters member Pat Facey moderated a panel of three representatives from the major town boards: Diana Kornet, board of selectmen; Nan Roth, advisory committee; and Barbara Bliss, school committee.

This year all three boards believe it impossible to maintain an adequate level of town services within the limitations of a 2 1/2 percent increase, with an inflation rate of five percent and fixed increases in pension, insurance, and debt service costs. The board of selectmen, the advisory committee, and the school committee unanimously support the general levy override questions #1 - the town budget, which includes the schools, #3 - the revaluation, which must be paid, #4 - painting the town hall exterior, #5 - improvement of the Beechwood and King Street intersection, and #7 - part-time outreach worker for the Council on Aging.

They also unanimously support the debt exclusion questions #8 - repairs to the high school and Osgood School, and #9 - high school writing lab.

The selectmen advised support for Questions #2 - a three percent pay increase for non-union town employees, #6 - repairs to the town-owned Government Island duplex, and #10 - police/fire station renovations, while the Advisory Committee opposed them.

Passage of all 10 ballot questions would add $116 to the annual taxes on a house valued at $300,000.

Council on Aging Chairman Gerard Keating asked the capacity crowd to support their outreach worker, Question #7. Joe McElroy outlined his committee's plan for town use of the Government Island duplex. School Superintendent Stephen Hart said State Department of Education figures that place Cohasset's per pupil expenditure two percent less than the state average and 30 percent below Weston's, and an administrator/student ratio of 4.3 per 1,000, compared with Manchester at 14.3 and similar residential suburban communities at 8.3. The PSO expressed sincere appreciation for the efforts of town boards to present budgets that reflected fiscal restraints while protecting the integrity of town government. In closing, panel members encouraged all citizens to vote Saturday, May 18.

Chayet talks on Republicans return

Neil Chayet whom everyone has heard at one time or another on Radio Station WEEI in "Looking at the Law" spoke to over 100 people in attendance at the Cohasset Republican Town Committee meeting last week.

Chayet's subject was "Republicans Return - Challenges and Opportunities."

His focus was on several priorities. You pay for what you get. But he said this contrasts with the insignificant income the state pays legislators and elected officials such as lieutenant governor and governor. He said his son, a recent graduate of law school started at $70,000 a year.

Chayet said that the theory of entrepreneurship is the back bone and principle of our country's freedoms and democracy.

Interior LifeStyles. DECORATING

Beauty on a Budget

No matter how large or small your decorating budget, planning is the best present you can give your home. In this age of immediate gratification, it's easy to be over whelmed at the thought of a complete decorating overhaul. Planning brings things into focus and helps you prioritize. Don't limit yourself to just what you can accomplish today-or even this week or this month. Make a long range decorating "Master plan" that will take your rooms from dull to dazzling over a course of time.

On a shoestring budget? There are plenty of major changes you can make with minimal effort and expense. Wallcovering is the means of achieving the maximum effect for the minimum dollar spent.

If you've never shopped forwallcovering before, you'll be amazed at the abundance of choices you'll have. There are textures, patterns, stripes, florals, borders, prints and more. Give up preconceived ideas about how your room "should" look. With a little imagination you may find yourself choosing something you've never thought of before and loving it.

Care to make a bold statement? Give just one wall of your room a deep dramatic color. Not only will this add visual depth to the room but it will provide an interesting focal point from which to spin off the rest of the room's decor.

Wallcoverings are also very dramatic when used on the ceiling. Use a color or pattern darker than the walls and your room will be more intimate.

Impeccably dressed windows add an air of sophistication to a room. If you long for beautiful, elaborate window treatments but can't afford them just yet, why not create them in stages? Start out with an undertreatment that works well alone like mini blinds. Later you can combine them with the overdrapery and a clever top treatment for a luxurious, layered effect. Once the foundation is in place, your room already looks better and you can add the finishing touches when the budget allows.

Whether you're just sprucing up a little or undertaking a major redecorating project - the key to success on a budget is planning.

Voters will decide 10 questions Saturday

He said cuts would be absorbed by maintenance and supply budgets.

The department had originally feared a cut of $170,000, which would have meant seven employees, including two teachers, would lose their jobs.

The advisory board is backing a smaller cut from schools, should the override fail. But the final decision will be made at the adjourned session of Town Meeting on May 29.

User fees for athletics may face an increase as the athletic budget is one of those Hart would take another look at.

Gjesteby said nearly every department will be affected if the questions fail.

The advisory committee says that if all ten questions fail:

• The police department will lose $12,000 from its payroll.

According to Gjesteby, this means the department will have to postpone the planned hiring of a new police officer until July, 1992.

He said it would be cheaper to maintain minimum staffing through overtime rather than hiring a new officer.

The department will also postpone the purchase of a new cruiser.

• The wire department will eliminate one part-time position.

Gjesteby said the position had already been reduced from full time last year.

• Roughly $4,000 will cut from salaries in the accountant's office. This cut will mean a reduction in staffing, and possibly a reduction in hours, but no jobs will be lost.

• The fire department will be forced to cut $4,500 from what Gjesteby called "small items."

He said supplies and training will be cut. No jobs will be eliminated.

• Secretarial support for the board of selectmen will be cut by $4,685. No position will be eliminated.

• The harbormaster's budget for night patrols will be reduced by $1,482.

• Thayer Park will reduce one full-time position to part time. The move will save $10,000.

• The custodian at town hall will be reduced to 20 hours a week, for a savings of $8,515

• Selectmen will cut the town's legal budget by $5,000.

• The building inspector will have to reduce his hours to save $4,000.

• The recreation department budget will be cut by $2,000, meaning staffing reductions, but no lost jobs.

• The highway department budget will be reduced by $4,000. The cut will be absorbed by a reduction in hours and possibly services.

• The health department budget would be cut by $3,000. Testing and services would be cut.

• Gjesteby said his committee would also take a "close look" at the town operated landfill. He said the landfill budget could be reduced by as much as $10,000, a cut that would reduce hours.

Gjesteby said the advisory committee is supporting seven of the ten ballot questions. Selectmen support all ten.

He said three questions should not be on the ballot, including Question 10, which he said the committee "vehemently opposes."

He said the money in Question 10 is already provided for in Question 1. The passage of both would give the town an extra $80,000.

Gjesteby said the question is an attempt to "confuse the issues" and misdirects voters.

"They (selectmen) just want to find ways to increase the tax base," he said. "It is just finding a way to increase the tax base."

Gjesteby said the advisory committee also opposes Question 2, which provides $24,653 to fund increases in salary for town employees with approved contracts.

He said the police, fire and school departments have not agreed to a new contract. To approve this question would set a precedent, and the town would be locked into giving identical raises to these three departments.

"If people vote for that we are going to set the stage for a $225,000 override next year," he said.

The advisory committee is also opposed to Question 6, which would assess an additional $30,000 to renovate and improve duplex residential homes on Government Island.

"The town has no business being a landlord," Gjesteby said. "We feel whatever you come up with it is going to be a drain."

Selectmen also oppose the question.

Other questions include overrides and exclusions to provide for:

• A general override of $142,000 to fully fund the town's operating budget, (Question 1).

• An override of $60,000 for the mandated triennial revaluation of the town, (Question 3).

• An override of $20,000 for painting the old town hall, (Question 4).

• An override totaling $3,000 for the reconstruction of the intersection of King Street and Beechwood, (Question 6).

• A $4,169 override for a senior citizen outreach worker, (Question 7).

• A Capital exclusion to pay the bond for the repair of the glass wall at the front section of the junior high school, and rug replacement at the Joseph Osgood School (Question 8).

• A capital exclusion to purchase computer hardware and software to equip a writing lab at the junior/senior high school, (Question 9).

• A capital exclusion to exclude the capital costs of the police and fire station renovations — something that would give town officials greater flexibility by changing the base figure used to establish the tax rate .(Question 10).

Yard sale benefits Appalachia

The Second Congregational Church is holding a yard sale to benefit the youth service project at the church. During the last week in June 18 teen-agers and 10 adults will be travelling to Iaeger in West Virginia to work on the Appalachia Service Project.

The volunteers will be involved in home repairs and improvements for low-income families.

The proceeds from the May 18 yard sale will help pay the travel expenses involved in the project.

Items may be donated to the sale by dropping them off at the church at 43 Highland Ave. weekdays through Friday from 9 a.m. to noon or call 383-0345 to arrange other times or a pick-up.

The land at Lily Pond

The Cohasset Water Department began the acquisition process of 37 acres of land known at that time as Lily Pond Estates in 1985. The property was being developed for the construction of 11 exclusive homes. After a public hearing with the Department of Environmental Protection in 1986, it was determined that the community's ownership of the acreage would enhance protection of the surface water supply at Lily Pond and benefit the town in the future.

In January 1990 a meeting with the owner and the Board of Water Commissioners took place where an agreement to purchase the land for $1.9 million was made. Town Meeting in April 1990 supported the department's purchase and the property was acquired in August 1990. At the April 1991 Annual Town Meeting a resolution was passed supporting the earlier vote of the Board of Water Commissioners to name the land "The Robert Pape Reservation."

It is the intention of the board to maintain the land in its natural state for the watershed protection purposes for which it was purchased. However, that purpose does not prohibit expanded activity that can promote the importance and understanding of the environment.

The department in the past has worked with private groups and students from the high school to promote understanding of pollution sources and environmental matters. Through a similar format, a program will be initiated to study the land. We can identify the land's characteristics, animals, birds, flowers and trees. Beyond the environment, it is interesting to note there is a road that was laid out in 1692, portions of which are still used.

We are seeking additional funding sources for this purchase in both the private and public sector. Commitments have already been made by the Cohasset Conservation Trust and Mrs. Jane B. Cook, yet we seek additional money in order to reduce the burden on Water Department Revenue. Our revenue is separate from the tax base, as we are self-supporting. The Conservation Trust of Cohasset has agreed to accept donations for the land so those contributions shall be tax-deductible. Donations should be made payable to "The Conservation Trust" and sent to P.O. Box 314, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Health fair for all

The Social Service League of Cohasset, the Board of Health, and the Council on Aging are sponsoring a Health Fair on Thursday, May 16, at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Avenue, Cohasset from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. and 5 to 7 p.m.

The following screenings are available: cholesterol (4 technicians to alleviate waiting), height, weight, diabetes, cataracts, colo-rectal, and pulmonary function. A $6 fee for the cholesterol screening is the only charge for the day. Glaucoma, blood pressure, dental, and mobile hearing van will be available during all hours.

England Patriot's football team, assisting the director of sales and promotions — for California, when her mother Edythe Ford, also a former model and who had been running for 13 years, but recently sold her late husband's dental practice, convinced Candy to stay and start up a modeling agency with her. Back then it was called Ford Model Shop — not to be confused with Ford Models of New York. Ford admits it was a struggle, at first. Although she had some contacts in the industry and brought in a few of the models she knew, business was slow at times, models came and went and the money wasn't exactly pouring in. Her mother left after two years because "She didn't like working for me," said Ford. "I've always been a real take-charge kind of person." There were many times when Candy felt like quitting herself. But she took over the business, ran it by herself for awhile before bringing in one part-time and four full-time employees, impressive clients and talented models, expanding services and booming profits.

Apparently, the widespread affects of the recession haven't hurt Ford's business in the least. "I never thought a modeling agency was capable of making the kind of money this agency is making right now — it's unbelievable, phenomenal," she reported. Doubting the company could top 1989's profits, Ford boasted, "We had over one million dollars in billings in 1990, and so far this year we've increased business 35 percent over last year," she added, knocking on her desktop for continued good luck.

Wondering whether she is really responsible for such tremendous growth of the company, Ford explained, "It has taken time, but fortunately now, 12 years into it, we finally have a very solid reputation of being a very highly respected agency, both amongst the models and the clients. We have to keep them both happy."

Expanding and broadening the company's base by taking on a new project each year, Ford's business now includes five divisions. Although you're more likely to find Ford models on the cover of Boston Magazine and other local publications than in the pages of Vogue or Glamour, the agency does a good deal of print advertising work for newspapers and clothing and retail catalogs. Department store clients include Filene's, Jordan Marsh, TJ Maxx, Tello's, Bradlees, The Coop, Lechmere's and J. Crew, while among the ranks corporate customers are among the ranks of Wang, Digital Equipment Corporation, Polaroid, WearGuard, and shoe manufacturers Nike, Reebok, Rockport and Dexter.

In 1989, Ford Model Management's runway or fashion show department skyrocketed, as the company acquired most of the runway models from another agency that had gone out of business. Garnering about 80 percent of the runway business in Boston, Ford models can be seen gracefully displaying the latest in fashions at shows at Saks Fifth Avenue, Neiman Marcus, Bloomingdale's and the Atrium Mall in Chestnut Hill. Ford's promotions division, established in 1989-90, places models around local stores, spritzing perfume, handing out samples of new products, at trade shows and even in the city's fanciest parking garages acting as hosts and hostesses. In 1991, this year, Ford has added a children's division, called Ford Kids. Although off to a slow start, Candy reports the company is now averaging about five children's bookings a week. "You just need a huge number of children — all ages, all colors, all ethnic backgrounds, all different types."

Ford also has future plans for starting up a television division, and is in the process of becoming a franchised union agency — a franchise of two major television unions, Screen Actors Guild (SAG) and the Association of Federated Television and Radio Artists (AFTRA). "Hopefully, when a movie or television series comes to town, like 'Spenser for Hire,' they'll come to us for models," she said. The company, in addition, runs workshops and programs to groom new runway models and educate aspiring models about how to get started in the business. Its modeling school, Image Resources, offers a two-day, weekend program usually held at a local hotel and which covers every aspect of the business — from hair and make-up to poise, portfolios, photography and agents.

It's a good way for hopefuls to learn what they need to know, but in this highly competitive and often cut-throat business, there are no guarantees, says Ford. And talent scouts are often in the unenviable position of having to tell the girls (and guys) what they don't want to hear but need to do: "Lose weight, gain weight, wax your eyebrows, fix your teeth, cut your hair, have the cellulite taken out of your thighs and grow two inches!" A tall order to fill.

The key to Ford's success, she says, is simple. "We're friendly; we're nice on the phone. That's how basic and simple it really is. We're nice to the clients — we try hard to please them, will bend over backwards to help them find the right talent — and we're also nice to our models." Paying the models promptly is a priority. And they get paid very well for what they do, what they wear, and how good they are fortunate enough to look. According to Ford, models get paid an average of $150 an hour and $1,200 a day — a hefty sum that many of us work an entire month for. Some earn between $1,600 to $2,000 a day, and runway models can make as much as $100 per fashion show, easily adding up to $800 a week, plus pay for rehearsal and make-up time.

"It's very lucrative, and that's why it's very competitive," she said of the industry. "People want to get into the business because it's lucrative, but I think more importantly because it's a form of show business. You become a little celebrity; people recognize you."

A day in the life

Though much of her time is spent "managing," on any given day Candy Ford is talking to and meeting with models — discussing their portfolios, composites and pictures — or she is on the phone, meeting with clients, writing out pay checks, doing paper work and "keeping everyone happy. I'm the cheerleader around here." Two of her most important roles are thinking up new ideas and ways of expanding the business, and keeping her employees and models motivated. She likes to be available to people and keep the communication lines wide open, which means holding weekly meetings, airing out problems and lending a sympathetic ear to disheartened models.

"They're out there getting discouraged and sometimes they need to come back to a place where they can feel warm and comfortable, and they can sit here and tell me how awful they feel and how fat they feel — that they want to go home and never model again," she said. "You have to wear a lot of different hats. You have to listen to them and help them because it's a fragile business for their egos," she added. "It's draining ... it's hard to be up every day and take their baggage along with your own baggage. But I always make sure if there's a problem, they can come to me. I want to know about it."

As boss, she has earned the privilege of making her own hours — about 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. — and the luxury of coming into the office part time, though she often works at home out of her office. Becoming a mother at age 33 has changed her routine. "I only work three days a week since I had the baby." The baby is her two-and-half-year-old son Fletcher, with whom she enjoys having a nice leisurely breakfast. "I get that morning time with him which is so neat ... when he's just waking up. Just being able to hug and kiss him good morning and get him his juice and make his breakfast is great." Relying on a babysitter during the day, Ford says, "I really feel sorry for women who have to rush out of the house at 7 a.m. and drive their kids to day care. I didn't have a child to let someone else raise him."

When she returns home she is greeted at the door by "the men in her life," who include Fletch and her husband of six years, Curt. "I get hugs and kisses and then my husband makes me dinner," she said contentedly. "He cooks all the time; in fact, I can't remember the last time I cooked a meal." Although she enjoys cooking, Ford explained that she and Curt have taken on certain roles since becoming parents, roles that have stuck. "Someone had to bounce the baby, keep him from crying, and change the diapers. So I became the baby entertainer and he became the cook."

Candy Ford and Curtis Smalzel married in 1985, and Curt, like his wife, is a successful entrepreneur. He is in the real estate and lobster businesses, as owner of the Red Lion Inn on Main Street in Cohasset and Aerial Lobster, Inc. in East Boston.

The days she doesn't work are devoted to "Fletch, tennis, my house, the garden and running errands." She also enjoys taking walks to her mother's home nearby. Members of the town country club and yacht club, the Smalzels also enjoy vacations, traveling and skiing — having taken two ski trips this year to Utah.

Looking back, Ford admits owning her own modeling agency wasn't something she expected as a college grad, but now realizes there isn't much else she could see herself doing. "When I was in college working (as an intern) for the Patriots, I thought I'd go into the entertainment business somehow — maybe working for Twentieth Century Fox, not in front of the camera but writing press releases on stars or something," she said. "Never in a million years did I think I'd be running a modeling agency nor did I think after three years in the business that I'd stay in it this long." Perhaps she has her mother to thank for that, as she pointed to an elegant portrait of the two of them on her bookshelf. Wondering just how long she might be involved in modeling, she says thoughtfully, "I don't know. I love it. ... I can't imagine doing anything else. I imagine I'll be in this business for quite a while."

What's the attraction? "It's fun, it's exciting, it's glamorous, it's sexy. Everyone's interested in it, and it's nice to have people interested in what you do," she said. What's rewarding? It's nice to see a young, talented model grow, develop and eventually make it big.

Having just turned 36 earlier this month, Ford remembers her husband, asking her recently what her goals are for the coming year, having achieved success as a wife, mother and career woman. "You get so wrapped up in the day-to-day, just getting through it all, that you forget to establish new goals," she said. "But I guess my overall goal is to just keep the business running, to keep people happy and make sure people still like me and respect me — people liking me is important, I don't know why but it is. I want to keep the harmony that we have at home at the office."

Full page ads cost $150, half page ads may be bought for $80, quarter page for $45, and eighth page for $25. Call Florence Ely at Cohasset High at 383-6100. They want to be sure to thank all of you that have already supported the yearbook.

❑ A very special wedding took place a few weeks ago, May 4 to be exact. Held at St. Anthony's at 2 p.m., Donna Beamon married John McManus of West Roxbury. It was a huge wedding, with seven bridesmaids and seven ushers, and twin boys as ringbearers. We hear that Donna was the most beautiful bride. The reception took place in Boston, and the party was lucky enough to get a police escort from Braintree to Boston. Lest we forget, Lilly (Carbone) Sestito was said to have been her usual magnificent self.

❑ Sadia Bryant, daughter of Venita and Jack Bryant and 1987 CHS graduate, graduated from the University of Ann Arbor with a dual degree in Psychology and Communications. George Bush was the speaker for the class. The Bryant's son Jeffrey, Class of 1989 CHS, is attending Ann Arbor and is a sophomore.

❑ Chris Conant, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Conant, and Sean Corkery, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Corkery, will graduate from Babson College on May 18, 1991. Congratulations to you both, and here's to wonderful careers for you.

❑ VFW Post 9146 is busy planning their annual poppy drive, under the direction of George Haley. The drive will begin at the Disposal Area on May 18 and 19, then they will be "Around Town" from May 23-26. Be sure to support this most worthy cause.

❑ Speaking of George, he wanted to be sure to thank everyone who voted for him at the last election...he should be pleased and proud of the results! Everyone knows how conscientious you are George, and we all know you will do a terrific job.

❑ Congratulations to Bill Baird, who was accepted to the Air Force Academy...quite an honor indeed! The only bad part of it is that he will have to leave at the end of June, so he won't have much of a summer in Cohasset. Be sure to write and tell us all about it, Bill, sounds great.

❑ Congratulations go to Claudia Story this week. She has been working for the Talbots since 1989, and recently received a promotion that will put her in charge of resource administration, distributing visual props and furniture and seasonal floral arrangements in keeping with Talbots' fine image of their stores. That is quite a responsibility, and one that Claudia will do well.

❑ Had a nice chat with Meghan Kelley last week, she has a job working for the American Institute of Foreign Study. She is running a cultural exchange program in Cohasset for the month of August. There will be twenty-six high school students from Spain participating in the program, ages from 13-18. While the students are here they will have a busy schedule, including daily classes at the Cohasset Community Center, several all day field trips and other related activities. Lauren Haynes, a teacher at Notre Dame Academy (and Cohasset resident) will be one of the co-teachers of the program. The students attend special orientation classes and have studied the geography and history of the state. They come with their own pocket money and transportation and insurance is included in the AIFS program. If you are interested in hosting one of these students, call Meghan at 773-5050.

❑ Don't forget when you vote this Saturday to go next door to the Appalachia Service Project's yard sale. They will also take donations (no clothing though), just drop it at the church from 9 until noon Monday through Friday.

❑ That's the news for this week, please call me with your tidbit.

round robin competition.

Murphy said it is a compliment to the team that they are competing so well, despite the lack of many of the luxuries the more affluent private schools enjoy.

Because there is no team bus, every competition means a long ride on the MBTA.

"Its really tough for the kids," Murphy said. "Their parents have to pick them up at the high school and drive them to the Quincy MBTA station."

She said most of the other schools have busses and can avoid the tiring ride.

The other schools also have paid coaches and regular practices, she said.

Murphy volunteers her time to the team, without her, or another adult to supervise, the team would not be able to compete within its league.

She said the team cannot afford to hold regular practices, so most of the team perfects the sport during the summer.

Murphy, who grew up in Hull, is an experienced sailor. She said she became involved in the sport through her two children, John and Kerry, two of the team's top sailors.

The team needed an adult to help coordinate the team and supervise on the water.

Two years ago Murphy volunteered for the responsibility, and has overseen two quality teams.

She said that although she gives advice and pointers, her contribution is usually laissez-faire.

"I leave it up to them (the team) to decide who is going to sail," she said, adding that the team knows its strong and weak points.

Murphy said she has high hopes for the team, not only this year, but next year as well.

Only two sailors on the team are seniors, and the team will remain basically intact next season.

Murphy said three eighth-graders on the team, Dave Nothnagle, Joe Menis, and Matt Pierce, are some of the up-and-coming talent on the team. She said these three are the foundation for the future.

Alternates Chuck Shields and Chip Kennedy, have also been an important part of the team, she said.

Three seventh grade girls, Amanda Ross, Hillary Strong and Nicole Peterson, are just learning the ropes," Murphy said, but she expects them to be top competitors in the near future.

Her team will also be competing in the Massachusetts State Finals on May 30-31.

Four members of the team will be chosen to compete in the race.

Young competitors Katie Devine and Caitlin Welby of Cohasset to play in Cohasset Community Center Youth Tennis Tournament to be held June 28. Call the Center at 383-0088 to register by June 10.

Override revisted

Last week there was a flurry of information released about the May 18 override election. By the way the polls at town hall are open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m this Saturday.

First of all, we obtained the official ballot which differed slightly from the list of questions discussed by selectmen in the recent past.

The difference is on the Government Island question. The official ballot has the $30,000 for Government Island renovations pegged as question 5, not question 6.

Tanna Kasperowicz and the advisory board suggest a "No" vote on question 5.

It's not that the building doesn't need the work.

And on the question of the old house at Government Island, we are ready to back down.

The building was once used by the families of the lighthouse keepers of Minot's Light. It has valuable historic significance.

The building has been used as a duplex and rented out for years.

Now a citizens group led by Joseph McElroy wants to create a public use of the facility. The group is looking into various ways of raising money for the operation.

If this question passes, it would allow the selectmen — subject to a vote at Town Meeting — to go ahead either with plans to renovate the unihabited side or to work out a public use.

A no vote on the Government Island money is a vote to tear down the building, something the advisory board suggests.

The advisory board does not back the question on raises for town officials, the money for Government Island or Question 10, the debt exclusion for renovations.

On question 10, we still recommend a "No" vote but after hearing from Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts, we realize more explanation is needed.

This question would increase the tax base in coming years. The question was put on the ballot to give the town more flexibility in raising taxes, Tebbetts explained.

We understand that this question would also allow the selectmen to deal with possible cuts in state aid to cities and towns. We understand this question might even allow a special town meeting to spend additional money — say for raises if the town employee unions settle — without another override election.

We happen to prefer annual override questions if that is the choice. We've been convinced that question 1 — the general government override — is necessary this year.

We'd like to have our top officials go through the process of convincing us on a yearly basis if the taxes cannot be controlled.

commentary

Render unto Caesar that which is Caesar's has been the modus operandi of government tax collectors for thousands of years. But here in the Bay State, people rose up against Caesar a decade ago and just said no to unchecked increases in taxes at the local level. As we all know, Proposition 2 1/2 has given people the right to limit property taxes to a level of their choosing.

But as we learned in civics or government class, every right of the people has its mirror image in a responsibility. And just what is the responsibility of the people when exercising its right to say no to increases in local property taxes?

In a recent feature article, the current director of the Children's Museum in Boston reminisced about his two-year stint as a student of archaeology in the rain forests of the Amazon. Specifically, he remarked on the sense of communal responsibility the tribe felt for the upbringing of its young. Broadly speaking, every member of the community was involved in education, each according to his or her own talents.

Should it be any different in Cohasset? Along side the right to say no to increased taxes, is there not a communal responsibility to say yes to such increases when they are necessary to preserve the right of our children to a decent education?

As a member of the Cohasset School Committee, I take pride the Committee's efforts to hold the line on budget increases while maintaining our commitment to quality public education. But I am increasingly concerned about the piecemeal dismantling of the infrastructure of the school system - what I referred to last year as termites eating away at the foundation of the schools - as we face yet another override hurdle.

Proposition 2 1/2 is wonderfully democratic in its conferring of the right to say no. But there is no free lunch - every right has a responsibility tagged to it - and I hope that the people of Cohasset will exercise their responsibility to protect the right of our children to be prepared for the twenty-first century.

By Kathy Bryanton

When the citizens of Cohasset are considering the 10 questions on the May 18 proposition 2 1/2 override ballot, I would urge you to keep several key points in mind:

(1.) Shortfalls in the town budget are being caused primarily by cuts in local aid from the State and by rapidly increasing insurance costs to the town. Most of the town departments have been level funded for years, and are attempting to provide the same services with much less.

(2.) Your local tax dollar serves you directly in areas of health, safety, education, etc. We are not talking about big bureaucracies here but about people and services provided in your community.

(3.) You have more to say in your local tax dollars than at the State or Federal level. If you see something you don't agree with, you can inform your local officials or attend Town Meeting and vote it down. But don't let small items cloud the fact that there is a major shortfall in revenues on the local level based on political and economic factors way beyond our Town of Cohasset.

Let's all look at these questions objectively and look at the facts. You will see that the services we stand to lose if the override question does not pass are worth a few dollars a week it would cost the average household if passed.

Let's not let small squabbles change the fiscal reality of Cohasset's future. Compare what you pay the town and what you get in return, quality service.

The belt tightening has been done. It's time to invest in our community again! For $1.16 extra a week, we can protect our single most important investment — our property value!

Ethics Board gets creamed

(Editor's note: this is a copy of a letter Tanna Kasperowicz sent to the State Ethics Commission, Governor William Weld, Howie Carr and Jerry Williams).

Robert Turner
Special Investigator
John W. McCormack State Office Bldg.
Rm 619
One Ashburton Place
Boston MA 02108

Dear Bob,

Was just reading about Neil Bush, and how he's gonna cost us $10,000 per family because of his special little conflict of interest. Alas, he only got a warning, so what can any of us expect with the little bitty stuff we turn in to you about the people we love?

I'm going to shoot from the hip, Bob. I know this isn't your style, but it's mine. The letters I get from you people can only be described as absurd. Either you're in business or you're not in business, and after the last two letters I received from you, I've decided you're not in business and/or in any case, nobody needs the kind of z-e-r-o protection you offer. As evidence, I offer the following quotes from your letter and my responses:

"Please understand that this decision" (What decision?) "does not necessarily mean that your complaint was without merit. The decision" (What decision?) "could, instead, be based on a number of other considerations." (What other considerations?)

My response: Sorry, Bob. This doesn't make it. I'm reading your State Ethics Bulletin of Feb. 1990 Volume XIII, number I. I.e., Section 23 prohibits public employees from using their official position to garner an unwarranted privilege for themselves or others. It doesn't say murder, treason, theft...it says privilege. I know these people didn't commit murder, had they committed murder I would have called the Attorney General. It also prohibits public employees from acting in a manner that would cause a reasonable person to conclude they will act with bias in their official capacity.

You said: "In certain instances, after investigating the facts, it may seem more appropriate to try to resolve a matter informally rather than by formal enforcement proceedings."

My response: in one of the three cases cited, the individual has been in conflict of interest week-after-week-after-week; year-after-year-after-year for 12 years. My state house informants allege that a relative of this person resolved his last conflict of interest. By the way, if you're such a hot shot investigator, why did you never touch base with me during your alleged investigation?

Perhaps I would have had more information to offer you, to assist you, during your investigation. Not being a professional witness, as many of us are not, perhaps more information could have been elicited from me during a personal interview. Are you aware, Robert, that these people's alleged conflicts of interest are being televised?

You said, "While there are no set formulas, we tend to use these informal resolutions in those cases which do not involve willful misconduct, significant economic gain to the subject or loss to the public, or the potential for serious undermining of public confidence in government."

My response with regard to willful misconduct: at a meeting held March 25, the person R. Laugelle said: "I don't give a damn about conflict of interest." To which a fellow selectman responded: "We know you don't, Rocco." How cuddly. How caring of fellow selectpeople. (Continental Cable tapes of the March 25, 1991 meeting can be viewed at 395 Gannett Road, Scituate. After six months Continental turns tapes over to the Town, so if you want some good evidence, Robert, view the willful misconduct before September 25, after which it is in danger of being erased.)

Really sorry to be so hard on you, Bob. But an investigator who doesn't touch base with the raped taxpayer isn't much of an investigator in my book. Let's talk about the last one regarding the "potential for serious undermining of public confidence in government." It's serious. My confidence is gone. I no longer wish to pay your salary, Bob.

You: "Third, in other instances, where the issues raised are novel or complex, we will sometimes try to resolve the matter by encouraging the subject to seek an advisory opinion either from town counsel or from the Commission's Legal Division."

Me: Cohasset taxpayers are now rolling in the aisles. You're really funny, Robert. Ever think of doing an amateur night at Catch a Rising Star - Nicks? I think you could get in.

You: "In conclusion, for the reasons already discussed, we cannot tell you how we handled your complaint."

Me: Complaint should have been plural. Listen, Bob. You sound like a really nice guy, but you probably never saw the letter Selectmen Chairman Ned Tebbits, suing the town, sent to the board of assessors in which he demanded that they compile information for him. I bet you think Cohasset's on the North Shore, don't you, Bob?

You: "The most we can say is that if you observe steps being taken to resolve the matter you brought to our attention, you should be satisfied. If a reasonable period of time passes and you still believe a conflict exists, bring it once again to our attention."

I have observed little and nothing about your invisible steps. Did you do something I might have noticed? Maybe you did, I don't always watch the selectpeople...like last week I got hooked on "Switched at Birth" and missed the bulk of the meeting. Did you do something?

Thanks loads for all your help. After the Governor reads this I hope he'll exterminate your department.

Very truly yours,
Tanna Kasperowicz

Cliff Dickson to the rescue again, but this time a horse, not a boat. Cliff and Sam stopped a horse named Flag running loose on Route 3A early the other morning. Good thing Cliff had some of Sam's dog biscuits handy to keep Flag occupied until his mistress arrived to lead him back to his stall.

They wish to be loved by large groups

By Tanna Kasperowicz

People have wondered for years now whether they talk in bed. Well, now you know. Advisory Committee Chairman Arne Gjesteby must have felt used when he saw Tinytown selectpeople's glaring Cash Cows (Questions 3-4-5-6-10) in the newspapers. TT selectpeople didn't ask the advisory committee's input on how to orchestrate the election ballot. They knew exactly what they were doing. Like vampires, your selectpeople hoped to be able to drain you over a number of years...without your being aware of what they were doing. This was done to eliminate you as much as possible from the decision-making process. For all their chatter about how they want to educate you, and how they really want you to understand what's going on, you must know they find you to be a real pain.

You're probably learning about Tinytown selectpersons' Great Cash Cow from me, for the first time. How does this make you feel? If this were a private company and you were a major stockholder you'd be making moves to replace this board of directors. You might be suing them for fraud. But this is Tinytown, where you certainly are stockholders, but where you frequently vote against your best interests.

If you don't vote selectively on this election ballot, TT government's going to cost you a chilling $1 million more this year.

Here's how I'm going to vote on the override, and I'm going to make it juicy for TT selectpeople, too. If TT selectpeople want a Cash Cow - fine, the Bates building will be the Cash Cow, but it must be sold to the highest bidder. Wayne Sawchuk offered $125,000 for it on TT meeting floor, so I'm considering that a lowball. If Tinytown selectpeople sell it for more than $125,000, and I think they can, they'll have a bigger slush fund. Making Bates a Cash Cow will make them serious sellers.

YES - Question 1: $142,000 override.

NO - Question 2: $24,600 for 3 percent raises. It's important you listen to your advisory committee this year. Never before in the history of Tinytown have employees been asked to take a wage freeze. They should be asked this year. As the Commonwealth's deficit estimate soars to $2.7B you'd better bet your booties Bill Weld is going to be asking rich cities and towns to do more and more self-funding. By 1992-93 very little of any monies will be coming back. Look out if we start assuming teachers' pensions.

commentary

NO - Question 3: $60,000 for triennial revaluation of the Town. It's a levy override question and it becomes a part of the selectmen's super fund. All selectmen need is $30,000 in the first year.

NO - Question 4: I'm not going to paint the Old Town Hall on a levy override for $20,000 which becomes part of the Selectmen's Treasure Chest (absorbed in the levy) forever. (Yes, through exclusion, from Bates Bldg. revenue only).

NO - Question 5: $3,000 for the Ring Street intersection. Once again, it becomes part of the general levy forever. (Yes, through exclusion, with Bates Bldg. money).

NO - Question 6: $30,000 for Government Island; again, they want to tack it onto the general levy. Second reason, an outside group may have a better idea for the property. Kill it properly, or like Hussein, it won't die.

YES - Question 7: $4,169 (another levy override) for the Council on Aging. This occurs yearly and is an appropriate levy override article.

Debt exclusions:

YES - Question 8: school repairs, around $115,000.

YES - Question 9: writing lab at school, $25,000.

NO - Question 10: $83,000 for police/fire expenditures. This is the Selectmen's Big Cash Cow. This same amount is part of the general override in Question 1. I really don't like voting for this as a debt exclusion on Question 1, but it's all intertwined, and I feel it has to be done.

As I told you several weeks ago, Questions 3, 4, 5 and 6 are also Cash Cows (totalling $113,000) because they were inserted under levy overrides, meaning they become a permanent part of the levy forever...and/or another $113,000 over which you lose control. (The total Cash Cow will be $200,000 if you vote yes on the Questions I've designated as NO).

Vote the way I'm voting and force selectpersons to fund questions 3 through 6 through the sale of the Bates Building. Additionally, you'll be voting to override only $146,169. If Bates Building is sold for only $125,000, the selectpeople still realize $72,000 for their slush fund. As you can see, selling the Bates Building for more than $1 solves a lot of problems.

Why the Tinytown selectmen cannot legally give the Bates Building to Habitat for $1 tomorrow.

Baseball, birthdays and a week of strong hitting

DODGERS LOSE BUCKLEY FOR SEASON

On May 7, Mets' pitcher Taylor Devin and Cardinals coach Steve Baker spent their birthdays at Barnes Field.

Devin enjoyed the win with a one hitter and was 3 for 4 at bat in this first meeting between the clubs. Coach Baker shared a cake with his team in the dugout after a 16-3 disappointing loss. His present had to wait until Thursday. Dodger Tucker Gledhill celebrated his birthday that night too, knowing his team held an undefeated record. Back to the face-off with the Cards, Mets' bats were rough and ready, and they pounded out 6 straight hits, knocking unfortunate starting pitcher Dave Payne from the box.

Dave Noble came in and did a fine job in relief as did Ted Goff who pitched the final inning facing five hitters with three consecutive K's. Besides Devin's hits, Mets' J.L. Williams gave the team four doubles in as many at-bats and Doug Cameron was 2 for 3. For the Cards, Slugger Payne had the one and only hit, an RBI single up the middle, while Charlie Toppan continues to make solid contact in each at bat. The Mets' Joel Puerro and Frank Abadie sported great catching, while the Cardinals' young Charlie Dean continued to lead the club from behind the dish. Big Nate Cotter made a solid grab on a tough fly ball to center and speedy Teddy Goff assisted on two ground balls to short to help the Red Bird effort. Goff stole two bases, as did Big Al Schwerin, scoring one of the three team runs.

Wednesday's game was home run heaven for the Athletics thanks to Wonder Boy Adam Sasso and talented first basewoman Sarah Berger whose homer gave a new dimension to Cohasset Major League stats. After a tough first two innings, the A's showed some good fielding but the win went to the Pirates.

In Thursday's game the winless Cardinals took the Dodgers by surprise. The Red Birds banged out 12 solid hits including Payne's 3 for 3, Noble's blast triple and one more, Cotter's 2, Schwerin's double and Toppan's 3 for 3 and team record lead in batting attitude and performance. The fielding featured Adam Sheerin's Big League throw to nail a runner headed for 3rd and brother Paul's excellent stab at a blast into left, as well as good work by Steve Kovach, the two Davids (Payne and Noble) and Ted Goff who also gained his first Major League win on the mound. For the Dodgers, Pitcher Gledhill came in for the 5th and final inning, allowing only one run and striking out three batters in a row in a near save. Although it was a tough outcome for the Dodgers, the sidelining of a great pitcher, first baseman and team player is the major loss. Justin Buckley will be out for the season with an arm injury that occurred later in the week. We wish him a speedy recovery and will miss watching his talented performances.

Friday night action was a close Mets-Pirates contest, broken up by J.L. Williams' 2nd triple to give the Mets a 4-2 win. Bats were flying once again with hits by Brian Walsh (1-1) Frank Abadie (1-3), Devin (2-2) and Williams (2-3). Great coverage at 3rd by Tommy Leahy, a double saving catch by Williams and a game ending grab by Ely Kahn combined with Greg Taylor's 2 hitter pitching to take the win.

On Saturday, the Sox faced the A's and Cohasset talent was on stage. Though early errors gave the Sox early runs, the A's put on a show of strong pitching by Ben Ketchem, Sean Norris and Sarah Berger. Sox ace Joe Magner was again in fine form with his second 16 strike-out no hitter game of the season. In the field, Norris, Mike Rossi, Berger and Matt O'Connor shone for the A's. Andy Hamilton caught a strong game for the Sox and threw out the only steal attempted against him. At bat, Matt Verrochi went 2 for 3 and scored 2 runs. Bob Meehan blasted a long double and single as designated hitter. Justin Golden went 2 for 2 and scored 2 runs. Base runners Pat Hurley and Golden twice successfully executed a double steal. The Sox took the game, but the A's are showing the promise of some mid-season wins.

Major league reporting is a compilation of game summaries submitted to the publicity box in the shed by 6 p.m. Saturdays.

Justin Pratt heads for third.

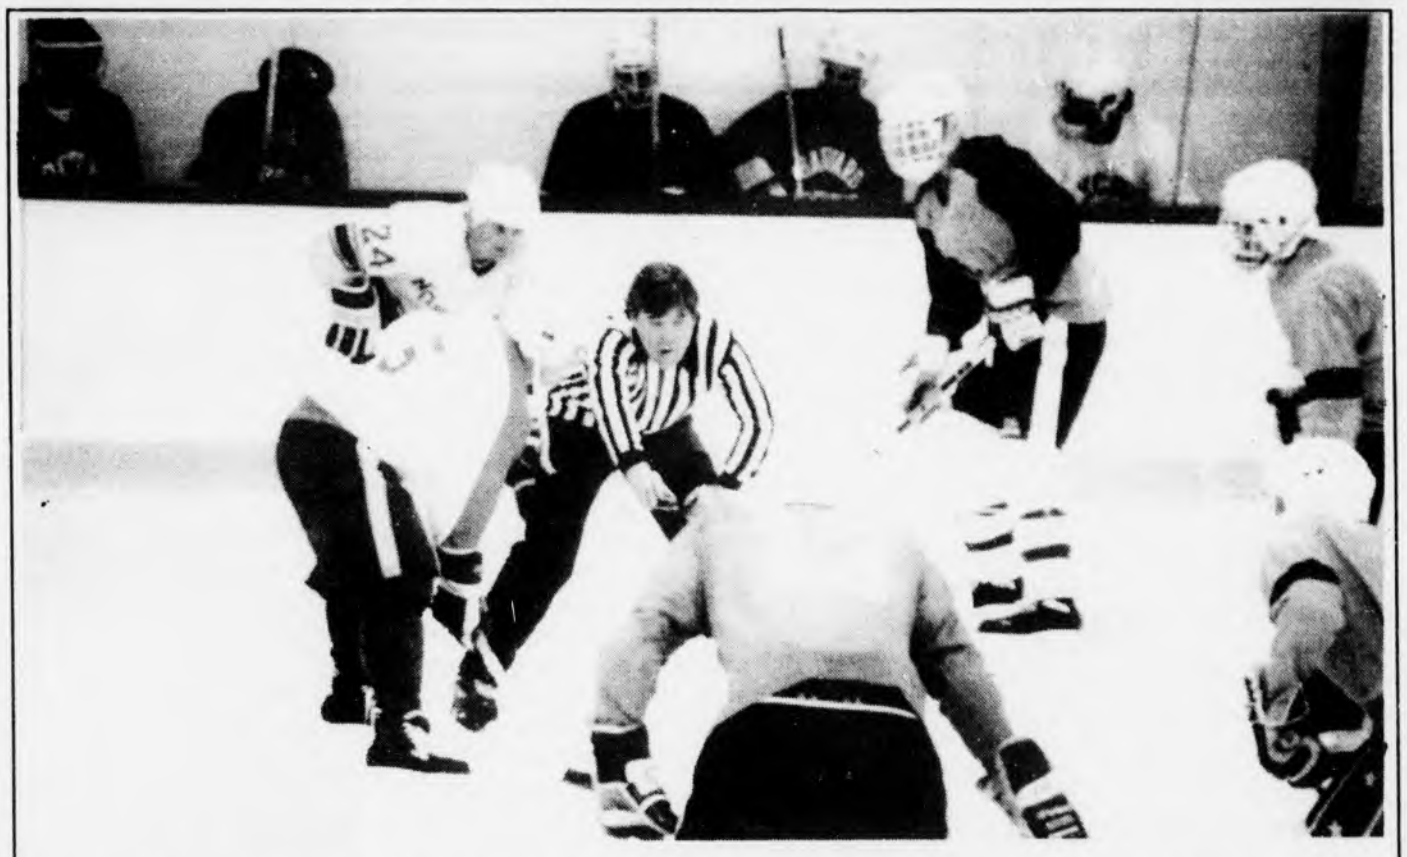
Soccer squads in tight contests

By Carol Riley

Several games in the Coastal Youth Soccer League spring season ended in heartbreaking losses for Cohasset teams last weekend. On the other hand, there were a few stunning victories. Coaches report the following soccer action:

Boys Under 16 clearly dominated Norwell in an away game on Mother's Day, but lost 1-0 despite superb play by Doug Ellinger, Chris Adams, Danny Baird (who suffered an Achilles tendon injury late in the game), Chris Kondrat and especially goalkeeper Chris Goodman.



Boys Under 14-1 similarly lost a tight contest at home to Hanover on Saturday, with Eric Henry scoring Cohasset's single goal on a beautiful set up by Tom Greco. Showing great speed and passing ability were Sky Doten, Patrick Reynolds and Kennie Leahy.

Boys Under 10-1, the "Hotspurs," after experiencing two dismal losses, one to Norwell and one to Pembroke, have gotten back on the winning track, according to coach, Charlie Dean. The "Hotspurs" trounced Hanover 6-1 with goals by Eric Hanian, on an assist by Ben Peterson and Scott Chisholm. Charlie Dean scored his second hat trick of the season with four goals, on assists by Dennis Rooney, who got the playmaker award for the game. Doug O'Brien was fine in goal for the first half—making one key save. Andrew McAuliffe minded the net in the second half, making six saves, clearing the ball like a professional. Dennis Rooney was fantastic on defense at center halfback. Steven Sceery scored the final goal for Cohasset on a fine passing play between Doug O'Brien and Charlie Dean. Assisting on goals were: Scott Chisholm (2), Nick Herzog, Ben Peterson and Steven Sceery. Christopher Golden made a beautiful behind-the-back heel pass, clearing to right wing, which lead to a nice shot on goal. Jay Rasmussen played a strong defensive game by playing up and forcing the ball carriers to the sidelines.

Boys Under 12-1 whipped Scituate 5-2 with Matt Varrochi scoring a hat trick (his first this season). Scoring their first goals of the year were Daniel Steele and Ryan Stasko. This team's win-loss record stands at 3-3.

Boys Under 10-4 was defeated by Hanover 3-2 in a close contest with Kyle Bunstein and Jake Motley scoring goals for Cohasset. According to coach, David Buick, Evan Murphy and Billy Good were outstanding on defense; Kyle Bunstein was commanding at midfield, while up front, Ronan Buick played a strong game.

Boys Under 12-2 went down to a powerful Pembroke team, 7-0 in a home game, despite good team play and good passing. Strong at forward were Morgan Sandell and Stephen Kovach. John Kasameyer was solid on defense and Derrick Bugley and Colton Ralston showed good hustle at halfback.

Boys Under 8-1 beat Boys Under 8-2 by a score of 5-3, with Erik Shea scoring 4 goals and Paul Previte one. Dan DeVito and Brian Lewis both played professionally in goal.

Boys Under 8-4 lost to Boys Under 8-2 by a score of 4-1, with Jimmie French scoring one goal. Andrew Dennis was solid at defense, with Michael Snowdale and Joseph Meallo showing good hustle at forward, according to coach Paul Cotter.

Boys Under 8-5 team coached by Jay Caron and Rob Moody continues undefeated by triumphing over Boys Under 8-6 with a 7-0 shutout. Goals were scored by: Brayton Pearsall, Greg Smith (2), Bryan Wasp (3) and Chris Caron on assists by Alex Etkind and Nick Cavanaugh. Credited with the shutout in goal were: Greg Harrington and William Moody. The coaches commended players: Christopher Caron, Nick Cavanaugh, Alex Etkind, Greg Hamilton, Nick Lavigne, William Moody, Brayton Pearsall, Greg Smith and Brian Wasp.

Girls Under 14-1 is still undefeated after whipping Marshfield 6-3 with goals by Erin Murphy (2), Melinda Johansen, Tammy Maitland, Danielle Nohe, and Martina Snyder. Coach, Nino D'Urso praised players: Jessica Conner, defense; and, Molly Hamill at midfield.

Girls Under 14-2 also enjoys an undefeated season, this week beating Norwell 3-2, with goals by Andrea Grew, Andrea Freeman and Kelly O'Donnell on assists by Megan Fahey and Liz Bestick. Coach Sandy Theriault noted that the following players were outstanding in this game: Captains for the week, Andrea Grew and Courtney Goff, Emily Collins at halfback and Emily Henderson at forward.

Girls Under 12-2 report two losses: a 3-1 loss to Marshfield, with Cara McKenney scoring Cohasset's only goal. Coach Brian McKenney praised Ashley Brister, forward; Jo Hurley, forward and Alicia Sorrentino in goal. Shelly Vanderweil was strong defensively. This team lost to Hingham 5-2 despite excellent play by Erica Hettstrom at halfback and Natalie Cheel and Susan Gill on defense. Cara McKenney scored both goals. She is the high goal scorer for the season.

Girls Under 10-2 worked hard for a well-deserved and overdue victory 2-1 over Pembroke, with goals by Victoria DeRosa and Alexandra DeRosa. Coach Nino D'Urso lauded outstanding play by Kyralea Cogill, great defensive effort from Annie Palone and Tara Hettstrom and unstoppable forward, Lydia Crafts.

Talent search awards

Lilian Faulhaber, Megan McNamara, Abigail Pease, Ryan Sawchuck, all seventh graders at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School, have been selected to receive awards for their achievement in the Talent Search Program sponsored by Johns Hopkins University.

Cohasset High School has participated in the CTY Talent Search for the past eight years. Talent Search is a program sponsored by Johns Hopkins University's Center for the Advancement of Academically Talented Youth. The goal of the program is to identify the most academically talented seventh graders, offer those students summer educational programs, and provide them with recognition at state and regional ceremonies. Each year for the past eight years the Cohasset Public Schools have received a Johns Hopkins Certificate for Distinction in this competition.

Colleen Lucas talks with dancer Nikki Hu about the artist in residence program at the high school.

Initially, students are selected based on their scores on the SRA tests administered each year. Students scoring at the 97th percentile or higher on those tests in the sixth grade are encouraged to participate in the program. If they wish to enter, they take the Scholastic Aptitude Test of the College Board in December of the seventh grade. If their scores approximate the averages of eleventh and twelfth graders taking the test, they are singled out for distinction or to receive awards at state or regional ceremonies.

Selected to receive a Certificate of Distinction are Lilian Faulhaber, Megan McNamara, Abigail Pease and Ryan Sawchuck. The state and regional awards will be presented to qualifying students at a ceremony to be held on Sunday, June 9, at Boston University.

Merit program 1992

Cohasset High School has been notified by National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC) that: John Brister, Cecilia B. Candia, Jason T. Hunter, Rebecca A. Kirk, John B. Kisiel, Brenden J. Murphy and Maureen J. Smith have been designated High Scorers in the 1992 National Merit Scholarship Program. The Principal, Mary Ellen Gallagher, announced this week that these juniors placed in the top fifty thousand (50,000) of more than one million participants in the 36th annual Merit Program.

While all 50,000 "high scorers" have shown outstanding academic potential, only about 15,000 of them (the top scorers in each of the 50 states) will be honored as Semifinalists. The other 35,000 will be commended for their performance on the PSAT/NMSQT, but only Semifinalists will have an opportunity to advance in the competition for some 6,000 Merit Scholarships to be awarded in 1992. Neither Semifinalists nor Commended Students in the 1992 Merit Program will be informed of their standing until September, when they will be notified through their principals.

Shaughnessy wins

Danielle Shaughnessy of Cohasset has been nominated to represent Cohasset Junior/Senior High School at the 14th Annual Massachusetts Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation Leadership Seminar. The four-day, expense-paid seminar will be held June 6 to 9 at Bentley College in Waltham and will include more than 200 of the top tenth-graders from the Eastern part of the state.

The conference provides these outstanding students an opportunity to

The seminar is funded by local service organizations and businesses throughout the state including Schrafft Charitable Trust, Coca-Cola and John Hancock.

Health in elementary school

During the weeks between May 6 and June 14, students in the Deer Hill and Joseph Osgood schools will be participating in health education programs in their individual classrooms. The "theme" for this period of time is Child Growth and Development, and each grade level will be concentrating on some "age appropriate" aspect of this theme as part of their health education instruction. This theme will deal with areas such as: nutrition, body structure and function, varying growth rates, social, intellectual, emotional and spiritual growth and development, how personal decisions can affect one's growth, communication, decision making, and building self-esteem. Students in the upper elementary grade levels will also be introduced to an educational unit which provides students with a vehicle to learn and ask questions about the changes which will be occurring in their bodies as they approach puberty.

The Cohasset Community Center and the Duxbury Dance Shoppe introduce children to the process of creating a show. Hands-on camp projects and activities will focus on learning about set design, costumes, makeup, acting, singing, and dancing. Each day's activities will inspire the imagination and creativity of young people age 6 to 12 as they prepare for a final performance with everyone participating. Parents and friends of these young thespians are invited to attend a performance held the last day of the session. This is a two-week session. Monday-Friday, July 8 to 19, 9 a.m. to noon, for $120.

GYMNASTIC CAMP

Gymnastic Camp will offer girls age 7 to 16 an opportunity to hone their gymnastic techniques with extended periods of more personal instruction. Each day will consist of warm-ups, aerobic dance, time on the beam, time on the bar, a break for snack, work on the uneven bars, vault, floor exercises, and conditioning. As an added feature, bowling will be included. Gymnasts may enroll for as many sessions as they wish. Prizes will be awarded each week for numerous contests. Enrollment is limited and will be on a first paid basis for $39 a week from Aug. 6 to Aug. 29. Call for days and hours.

BABYSITTING COURSE

Linda Farrag, RN, teaches babysitting on Wednesdays, 7 to 8:30 p.m. for four weeks for $28, which start July 10.

COA Correction

To the Editor:

There was an error in last week's letter. The Council on Aging has volunteers with a value of $156,000.00 not 156,000 hours. Also while we have been level funded at $34,000, the printing and mailing of the monthly newsletter and the costs of some of the programs have been taken on by the COA fund raising group, the "Friends." The senior aide and the Shine worker are paid by state grants and we have received Formula Grant money. The monetary value of all of these is $23,000. We shall continue to do all that we can on our own, but we are optimistic and feel that the citizens in Cohasset do now recognize the importance and scope of the Council on Aging's programs.

We hope you will vote "Yes" for question #7.

Council on Aging Board

They wish to be loved by large groups

l) Annual TM legally voted to advertise the Bates Building for sale, and the selectmen's intention was to sell it for a reasonable price within six months or give it to Habitat for a buck.

2) If Tinytown selectmen try to give the Bates Building to Habitat for $1, without first having put it on the open market, there will probably be a court injunction (if I'm not too tired).

3) TM's non-binding resolution to give the Bates Building to Habitat for $1 without going to the open market means squat and won't hold up in court. Legally, a non-binding resolution has no standing. Wish Tinytown selectmen took votes on legally published and voted articles as seriously as they take non-binding resolutions. The reason it was a non-binding resolution is because it couldn't be voted within the scope of the published article.

Now, I want to tell you how and why what appear to be perfectly reasonable persons before their elections, turn into wildpeople after they become selectmen. None of them would take their families to the brink of financial ruin, so why do they want to take us? Why are they planning to give away our real estate as they try to double-dip on ballot questions?

They do this because they wish to be loved by large groups, and the biggest group they can identify is the town employee/school group. They don't care about the rest of us because we're the scattered nasties. They count on our staying scattered. They want to win and they want to be selectmen forever.

commentary

In order to get elected in Tinytown one has to make a strong appeal to town and school employees. Tinytown employees treat their town officials like pets, allowing only those with politically correct agendas to lead them. And over the years, Tinytown pols have learned their lessons well.

I was very disappointed with legal advice regarding the Government Island complex.

Note: the publication of an article is a warning. Voting to do something very different, like give the building to the VFW and/or the Rotary, changes the intention of this article. If you vote for Question 6, selectmen will be legally compelled to renovate the second apartment at Government Island.

I don't know why I don't bill Tinytown selectmen for my legal services. I do all the work and then counsel bills them for my opinions at the end of the month.

We Live In An Arboretum
At The Townhouses Of The Scituate Country Club
The definition of an arboretum is "a place for studying and exhibiting growing trees" and we think that our magnificent Townhouse site atop the rolling terrain of Scituate's Third Cliff meets this description... a well groomed, 36 unit Townhouse community on a 20 acre site abundant with trees, birds and plantings...plus we overlook most of the fairways of the Scituate Country Club and the North River beyond. Override wins 3 in 10 times

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Voters accepted a general government override of $142,000 in Saturday's election.

They also chose to pay $4,169 for an outreach worker for the Council on Aging.

And they accepted school repairs amounting to $115,000.

The same voters turned down:

- $60,000 to hire professionals to reassess all property in town.
- three percent raises for a group of town officials, amounting to $24,653.
- another redesign of the intersection of Beechwood and King streets, amounting to $3,000.
- a debt exclusion for $40,000 to finance a writing lab in the high school.
- $30,000 to renovate half of the duplex at Government Island.
- a debt exclusion exempting funds for the police and fire station renovation from the limits of Proposition 2 1/2.
- $20,000 to paint the old part of town hall.

All the ballot questions were voted by town meeting in April contingent on the passage of an override.

But some of the money rejected by the voters will be spent anyway. The revaluation is mandated by the state — but only half of the $60,000 cost needs to be paid this year.

The work on the fire and police station has been accomplished. The bill will be paid.

Town benefits from METCO

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

The school committee affirmed its support for Cohasset's continued participation in the METCO program at the May 6 meeting.

"We know it benefits our children," Chairman Barbara Bliss said. "We hope it benefits our Boston students."

The state is considering possible changes in the educational program that places inner-city youth in suburban schools. Concerns about program costs and participation ratios are driving the review. Supt. Stephen A. Hart has been attending meetings of the task force reviewing potential changes.

Currently, 48 students from Boston attend Cohasset schools under the METCO program. Twenty-four students are enrolled in the elementary grades and another 24 are at the secondary level. The Boston students have the option of remaining in the Cohasset school system from first through twelfth grade.

Under the METCO program, Cohasset receives $153,202 to cover educational and transportation costs of the Boston students. According to Hart, Cohasset receives less per METCO student than many other communities because Cohasset's per pupil costs are lower.

Although the state has level-funded the METCO program, increased transportation costs have reduced the amount that can be spent on educational and support services. In the past year,

Cohasset Knoll celebrates aging

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

They range in age from 60 to 106. Most rely on wheelchairs to get around. But if you visit Cohasset Knoll, the nursing home that sits high on a hill on the Cohasset and Hingham border, you'll learn that the 80 residents there aren't sitting on the sidelines of life.

They plan to celebrate their life and times in high style during National Nursing Home Week. Festivities opened on Mother's Day and continued through May 18.

The week-long celebration began with an open house featuring entertainment by George & Martha, refreshments and a proclamation read by state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray. Other events on the calendar included a music program with Mary-Lou Kershon, a concert by the flute quartet of the South Shore Conservatory, a Spring Fling dance at the Sons of Italy in Rockland, entertainment with Joan Sullivan and a sing-a-long led by Helen Watson and the Cohasset Volunteers.

Although music feeds the soul, the residents, their families and friends will also enjoy special refreshments, a luncheon and a pizza party.

Budget hinges on local aid issue

By Andrew MacLellan
Mariner correspondent

Until the local aid issue is resolved on Beacon Hill, selectmen plan to hold off consideration of budget cutting specifics.

"The local aid matter is very much up in the air and will have an enormous impact on Cohasset and other towns in the state," said Chairman Ned Tebbetts.

Tebbetts speculated that cuts to local aid could increase the town's deficit by as much as $300,000 - $400,000 for the fiscal year '92, but without concrete figures he was unwilling to make any recommendation.

He called the possibility of making up an additional cash shortfall solely through budget cuts a "draconian solution", and suggested that a secret ballot or another budget override, combined with a percentage of cuts, may be necessary.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby noted that, while only three of ten initial override questions passed, it required "massive education to have a positive effect."

Selectmen said they were pleased the $142,000 general override passed together with questions seven and eight, but warned that money not appropriated by voters would have to come from somewhere.

In light of the fiscal news, a new resolution to sell the Bates building to the highest bidder was discussed.

Sewer plant expansion still sought

The lawyer for town's sewer commission wrote to the state last week complaining about a series of inaccuracies and misunderstandings.

The sewer commission doesn't want to drop the plans for a feasilbility study of expanding the current wastewater plant on the James Brook.

Ted Guild, chairman of the sewer commission, said he expects a sophisticated type of treatment could make the system work.

The alternative to expanding the plant is a $9 million connection to the Hull sewer system — a plan the state has been pushing.

The commission's attorney, Alan Wilson of Goodwin, Procter and Hoar of Boston, wrote to Brian Donahoe, director of the division of water pollution control, asking for reconsideration.

"On the merits, I believe your conclusion is premature," Wilson said. "The purpose of the scientific study which Cohasset proposes to conduct is to develop the data necessary to answer the question of whether the existing plant could meet applicable water quality standards."

He went on to point out that the state and town might find the expansion less expensive.

"It bears repeating that Cohasset does not sekk to delay processing of its application for state revolving fund assistance for the Hull interconnection," Wilson added.

He said both plans could be worked on at the same time.

A meeting has been requested. No date has been set.

DPW study moves

Selectmen Monday night defined the scope of the public works garage study committee and encouraged volunteers from the private sector.

The committee will be responsible for reviewing data and conclusions of the previously appointed garage study committee, as well as a study conducted by the public works department.

The committee will also determine the amount of space needed for equipment and personnel of various town departments, including the school, tree and park, wire and highway departments.

A survey of potential sites will be conducted throughout the town and will entail a review of wetlands zoning and locational issues.

The committee will consult with the board of health, building inspector, planning board and conservation commission as necessary.

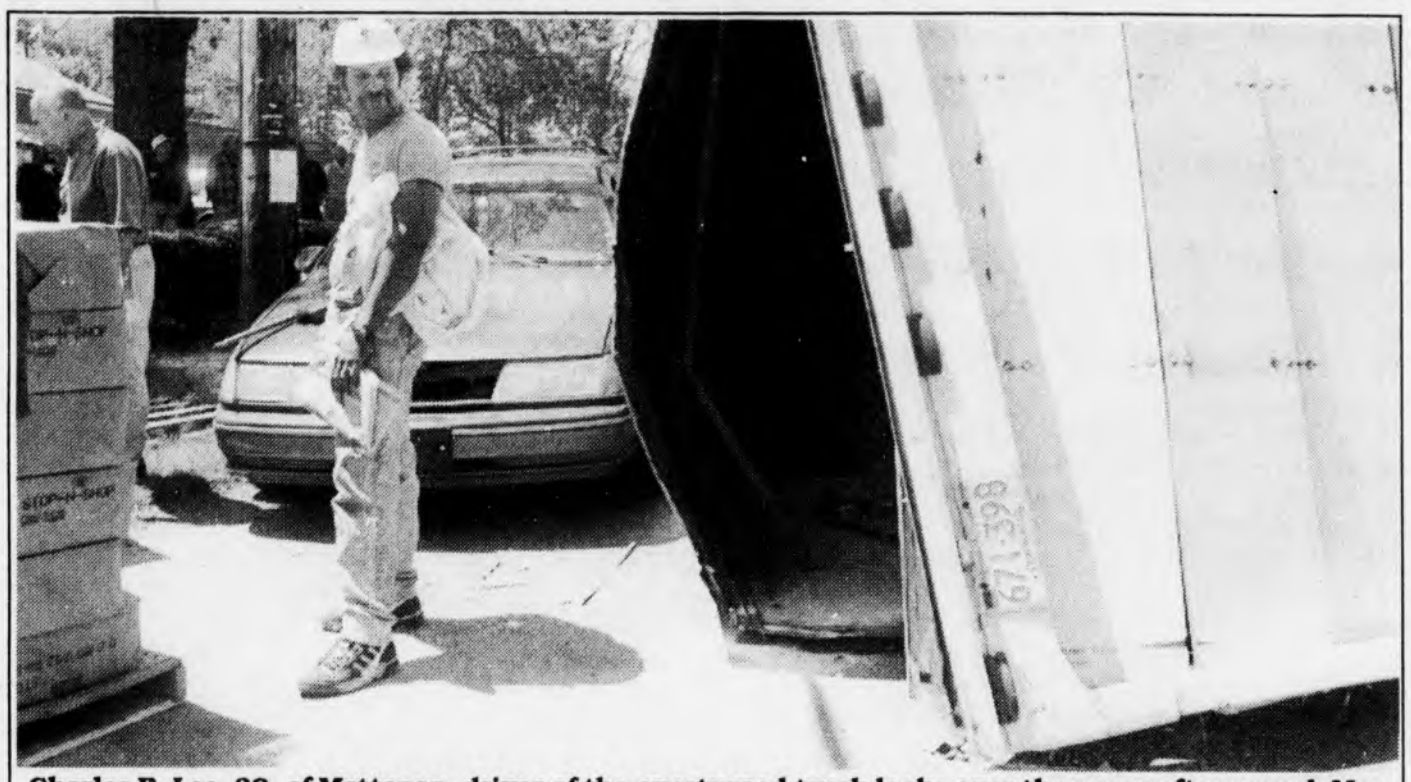
A progress report is expected by Sept. 15 and a final recommendation is due Dec. 15.

What's open and closed

Just about everything will be closed as residents throughout Massachusetts observe Memorial Day, Monday, May 27.

All retail stores and supermarkets will be closed for business, along with liquor stores, banks, state, county and municipal offices, schools and libraries.

Mail will not be delivered on that date.



The only exception to this solemn holiday observance applies to taverns and bars which will remain open.

Town pump to be dedicated

The Cohasset town pump stands once again in the heart of the village. The beautiful working replica of the historic town pump, crafted of cypress by Charles Butman, Jr., will be dedicated on Saturday, May 25, at 10 a.m. at the corner of South Main and Elm streets. (Rain date: Sunday, May 26, 2 p.m.)

A brief ceremony will be held on the inviting new cobblestoned plaza and brick walkway recently completed by masons Kevin Sargent and Ray Sargent. The plaza will be embellished with flowers planted by Tina Watson. Phyllis and Donald Leslie, whose gift launched the project, will cut the ribbon, officially opening the pump to the public. Coffee, doughnut holes, and fruit punch will be served. The public is welcome.

The town pump project was organized and directed by Village Renaissance, a grass-roots civic group. A year in the planning and six weeks in construction, the project drew together much of the Cohasset community. "Many generous donors and volunteers made it possible," said Beth Christoffel, a spokesperson for the group. "We hope this will lead to other efforts to revitalize and beautify downtown Cohasset."

Charles E. Lee, 39, of Mattapan, driver of the overturned truck looks over the scene after a crash May 20 at Beechwood and Route 3A. He was charged with operating to endanger and failure to stop at a red light. He pleaded innocent. Tanya M Kneeland, 28, of Bedford, the driver of a car involved and Albert Infusino, 66, of 282 Cedar St., driver the third vehicle were taken to South Shore Hospital where they were treated and released. Eight-month-old Alexandria Lund of Scituate, a passenger in Kneeland's vehicle, was not injured. According to a report filed by Patrolman Carmelo Conte, a truck carrying sugar, went through a red light while going from Route 3A onto Beechwood Ave., hitting one car and tipping into the other car.

Residents oppose sludge

Cohasset residents are organizing to oppose the dumping of sludge from the Boston sewer system in Cohasset.

"We are unalterably opposed to the dumping of Boston sewer sludge in Cohasset," said Alix White, president of the Cohasset group SAFE (Stop Any Further Expansion).

"We have called an open forum on Wednesday, June 5 for all residents of Cohasset to learn about potential plans to dump sludge at Cohasset Heights and of the proposed 27.5 acre expansion of that private landfill," said White. The forum will be held from 8 to 9:30 p.m. at the Unitarian Parish House.

"Cohasset Heights is being considered as a potential alternative site to Walpole for Boston sewer sludge," said White, referring to the Siting Commission appointed by the Governor last month to look for alternative disposal sites for sludge generated by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

"We call upon Governor Weld to require the Siting Commission to hold its sessions in public, so residents of Cohasset and other potentially affected towns will hae access to this process," said White. The sludge Siting Commission has been meeting in secret since its appointment in April.

"We call on all Cohasset residents who are concerned about our water supply and quality of life to write to Susan Tierney, Secretary of Environmental Affairs, and to tell her that you oppose the dumping of MWRA sludge in Cohasset," said White.

Secretary Tierney can be reached at the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs, 20th floor, 100 Cambridge Street, Boston, MA 02202.

SAFE is a Cohasset-based community group opposed to the proposed expansion of the Cohasset Heights landfill. SAFE is concerned about the pervasive odors coming from the landfill and the potential that runoff from the landfill could pollute Lily Pond, the town's water supply.

For more information about SAFE, call 383-1829, or write to SAFE at PO Box 702, Cohasset, MA 02025.

T board votes to increase service

In response to an ever increasing demand for the T's van program...The Ride...by more and more South Shore residents, the MBTA Board of Directors voted today to add the service necessary to provide nearly 6,000 additional trips for the fiscal year, starting July 1.

The meeting, which was held in Weymouth, marked the first time a T Directors meeting has been held on the South Shore. It was called by MBTA Chairman and Transportation Secretary Richard L. Taylor in response to concerns raised by the MBTA Advisory Board to give area residents the opportunity to address the T Board about local issues.

South Shore communities served by the T's Ride Program...a door-to-door program for passengers with disabilities...are: Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Milton, Quincy, Randolph and Weymouth. The service is operated for the T by Kiessling School Transportation, Inc.

T Acting General Manager James E. Rooney said, "Access to lift-equipped public transportation is vital to many people who would otherwise be unable to meet their daily travel needs. Ride service is becoming increasing popular for work, shopping, and recreational trips as more people with disabilities find out how good it is."

The number of South Shore Ride trips is projected to jump by 19 percent, from 31,000 this year to nearly 37,000 trips next year, while the per ride cost decreases by an estimated 8.6 percent. Over 1,200 South Shore residents are registered to use the T's Ride.

The South Shore Ride program provides service with 11 lift-equipped vans and two station wagons from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. on weekdays and from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on weekends and holidays. Transfer service is available between the South Shore and Downtown Boston.

For additional information on the T's Ride program, please call the MBTA Office for Transportation Access 722-51234 or (TDD) 722-5415.

Summer theater openings

The Young People's Summer Theatre of Scituate has announced plans and scheduling for their upcoming 15th anniversary summer of educational youth theatre.

Donald S. Capen, Program Director, outlined both Day and Evening offerings.

The evening program which is celebrating its 15th birthday, is open to ages 12 to 22 from any town. This year's major musical production will be the Broadway show "The Apple Tree." The show is divided into three mini-musicals: "The Diary of Adam and Eve," The Lady or the Tiger," and "Passionella," spoof of the Cinderella classic.

In celebration of its fifteen years, YPST's mail-in registration will be only $15 (last year it was $45). Mail-in registration must be received no later than June 1. A Walk-In Registration (at $45) will be held on Thursday, June 13 at the First Congregational Church on Country Way in Scituate. This is also the traditional "Orientation" discussion meeting for old and new members, and will begin at 7 p.m.

Auditions for "The Apple Tree," and an additional straight play (TBA), will be held on Saturday and Sunday, June 15 and 16 beginning at 5 p.m. Although everyone who registers for YPST performs in the musical, auditions are held for casting singing and speaking roles. Rehearsals will be held weekday evenings beginning June 17 and running through showtime, August 1, 2 and 3. Rehearsals are at the Congregational Church.

Registration forms are available by writing to YPST, Box 41, Scituate 02066 or by calling 925-4536 (for ages 7-11) or 826-9056 (for ages 12-22).

The concluding event is an outing to Saint Paul's Church in Hingham for Sunday Mass and a luncheon. All transportation during the week has been donated by Chaulk Ambulance of Weymouth.

Although the week is filled with activities to celebrate National Nursing Home Week, every week is special at Cohasset Knoll. The nursing home has been providing care for South Shore residents for more than 23 years.

"There are always entertainment programs," activities coordinator Christine Murphy said. "They love music and trivia."

The home has a contingent of loyal volunteers who come regularly and organize programs for residents. High on that list are the Cohasset Volunteers, a group that has been coming every Tuesday and Friday from the earliest days of Cohasset Knoll.

"They come for Mass Tuesday mornings and run a social hour with entertainment," Murphy said.

The Cohasset Volunteers may have been coming for the longest time, but they aren't the only ones. Marguerite Lloyd comes every Thursday morning to sponsor a coffee and current events program. "They watch television and read the papers so they know more about current events that I do," Lloyd said with a laugh. For fun, she brings in the gossip papers so movie buffs can keep up with tinseltown.

Trivia games and puzzles are favorite activities. These Trivial Pursuit players are a tough crowd to beat.

"They love it and they are excellent at it," Murphy warns would-be challengers. "There are a lot of very sharp people here. There are many very intelligent people."

Volunteer Pauline Jillson organizes the fun and games Monday mornings while Ann Kelly fills the bill with trivia and treats Fridays.

Mondays also find Helen Foniri dropping in to amuse residents. Foniri created the famous duck races. Her "ducks" are toilet plungers with duck heads that race along a racetrack mat. Murphy says the races must be seen to be believed.

The ersatz ducks aren't the only ones getting a workout. Once a week residents participate in a therapeutic exercise program designed to keep residents in tiptop shape.

And once a month, Lisa Karen of Fin, Fur & Feather, a pet store with branches in Quincy and Hanover, comes in with an assortment of animals for residents to handle. Although kittens, puppies and bunnies are always popular, Karen also brings fish, birds, lizards and a host of other critters. The pet shop offers the program free of charge.

Residents also keep busy with arts and crafts projects. "They do everything from flower arranging to woodworking," Murphy said. Some of their wares will be on sale during the annual yard sale slated for June 1, rain or shine. Money raised by the yard sale and raffle supports the resident activity fund, the source of funding for special programs and activities.

There's no gap when the workweek is over. According to Murphy, Lisa Osborne assists in planning a full complement of evening and weekend entertainment and activities for residents.

"It's a very dynamic, busy place," Murphy said. "We provide as much normalcy as possible."

Murphy stressed that the facility is always looking for volunteers to spend time with residents in a group setting or one-on-one.

"Most of our residents have family, but it's hard for them to visit daily," she explained. "Any visitor is welcome."

Residents love to have friendly visitors come and read to them, assist them by writing letters and cards or just chat. Many visitors find it easy to make friends for life that way.

Anyone interested in finding a new friend at Cohasset Knoll can call Murphy at 383-9060. The experience just may convince you that there's a reason why they call it the golden years.

Helen Fletcher, president of the residents council at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home.

Boston Athletic Assoc. sets national record for race walking

The B.A.A. set a record for combined ages of Ellery Clark, father and son, in the one mile walk in their last appearances for the Unicorn Club.

Clark senior, who died at 75 in 1949, was 56 in 1930 when he twice won this event. Clark junior, still going strong at age 81 1/2, won May 13 at Quincy Senior Olympics, wearing the unicorn emblem which he had also represented in 1928-1935 as a race walker. The total combined Clark years is 137.

Clark senior was a double winner in 1896 for the B.A.A. at Athens in the revival of the Olympic games. He also twice won the national A.A.U. all-around championship of America for them in 1897, new record, and again in 1903.

The senior Clark was a strong advocate of physical fitness, especially of walking, both recreational and competitive. His son this year won a state physical fitness award for practicing what he preaches, a commendable life style. Of his then contemporary B.A.A. teammates only two, including himself, still survive whereas all the runners are gone. He believes race walkers outlive track runners. John Kelly is a noted exception from the marathoners, but they were not included in his track survey.

It could be the new combined Clark's race walk AFL record could last for many, many years. "Walk, do not run, to your nearest sports shoe store, get dad out, and set yourselves up for long life, even a new record," said the 81-year-old Ellery Clark.

Cohasset drama casting history

On Tuesday, May 21, from 6 to 7:30 p.m. and for the next four Tuesdays (6 to 7:30 p.m.), Gayl Varallo and Elizabeth Deveney of the Cohasset Drama Club have been and will continue to be casting and rehearsing for the South Shore Arts Festival on the Common skits featuring children in Cohasset's history, called "Kids of Konahasset."

The skits will be performed Friday and Saturday, June 21 and 22, 2 to 2:30 p.m. Roles for children ages from 5 to 21 include Abraham, Samuel, Bethia, Levi and Persis Tower, Kezia Wheelwright, Joseph Whitcomb and various Indians and townspeople; adult roles include Thomas Lothrop, Isaac Lincoln, Jesse Stephenson; and Captain John Smith.

CDC intends to repeat and embellish on these skits each year, lending a traditional theatrical history flair to the yearly Arts Festival with actors mingling on the Common in character costumes. To join in, come to the Town Hall Tuesdays at 6 p.m. Weather permitting, rehearsals will be outside with picnic dinners allowed. For information, call Gayl at 383-2366.

Budget hinges on local aid issue

At April's town meeting, residents voted to sell the property to Habitat for Humanity for $1 to create two units of affordable housing.

"We should not be giving the Bates building away," said Tebbetts.

"If it is sold over the next fiscal year it would presumably have some impact on the town's financial planning."

Selectman Diana Kornet, who originally was in favor of turning over the property to the non-profit group, reversed her decision given the outcome of the override ballot questions and the uncertainty of a comprehensive local aid package.

Selectman Jane Goedecke urged attendance at town meeting (on Wednesday, May 29), adding, "It is time for people to come ...and make their feelings known.

"The problem we're facing is that every day things change."

Selectmen hope the state will meet its June 30 budget deadline in order to provide firm figures to the town, but Tebbetts felt that, in addition to the upcoming May 29 town meeting, another will be necessary.

Town benefits from METCO

the program has been forced to eliminate a bus monitor on the elementary school bus and some supportive services and extra-curricular activities.

However, Hart said, the METCO program represents a net gain for the school system. The program pays the costs of one elementary teacher and one secondary teacher. If the METCO program was eliminated, the school system could not offset the gain by eliminating the two paid positions because the METCO students distributed among the classrooms with no more than four METCO students per grade.

Hart hopes some savings in transportation costs may be realized in the current round of bidding. Currently two buses are required to transport the METCO students because of differences in elementary and secondary school hours. If bus routes could be consolidated or shared with a neighboring town, more money could be freed for other expenses.

If the state implements school choice, METCO could represent even more of a bonanza because Boston's per pupil expenditures are much higher than Cohasset's. Hart does not anticipate school choice will become a reality in the near future because of the economic plight of the state.

The advisory committee is considering whether to go for the town hall paint job at the expense of some other portion of the budget.

The decisions on the budget will be made at the adjourned session of town meeting, scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 29, at the high school.

There were 1,974 votes cast in the special election Saturday, according to Town Clerk Frances Marks.

The turnout for the election was 41 percent of the registered voters. Outside the polls a coalition of senior citizens and students held signs throughout the day. The signs urged voters to support certain questions.

Advisory Committee Chairman Arne Gjesteby, who opposed the renovation of the building on Government Island, commented as the results were announced that the voters want the town out of the rental business.

Meanwhile Joe McElroy is ready to show his ad hoc committee's vision for the property to those at the May 29 town meeting.

McElroy said he will have definitive plans for the property by Aug. 1.

He wants to pull the plan together without using any town funds.

The plan calls for the old lighthouse keepers' house to be renovated for use by community organizations with one or two upstairs rental units. The land around the building would be available for public use.

Both the VFW and Rotary have been mentioned in connection with use of the building. The idea of restoring portions of the historic structure has also been discussed.

Beside McElroy, the committee working on the project includes: Richard Barrow, Merle S. Brown, Charles Fink, Ray Kasperowicz, Gerard Keating, Bob Martin, Doug Peck, Burtram Pratt, Glenn Pratt, Helen Pratt, Wayne Sawchuck, Nancy Snowdale, Ira Stoughton, Herbert Towle, David H. Wadsworth and James Whelan.

Thomas Williams and artist Claffy Williams of Cohasset pose beside her work following the Musical Celebration at the Orndorff Mansion in Hingham on April 28. The event was a benefit for the South Shore Conservatory.

❑ Cohasset's senior athletes covered themselves with honor at the 9th Annual Senior Olympics. Jack Hubbard, Gerard Keating, Ann Leonard and Ellery Clark brought back a record total of medals. Gerard Keating sacrificed Saturday events to support the Cohasset seniors, and was victorious at the polls. Jack Hubbard harvested 4 gold (half-mile walk, mile walk, mile run and 3 mile walk), Ellery Clark won six golds in six events (new record) in the half mile walk, mile walk, mile run, 3 mile walk, running long jump, standing long jump; Gerard Keating two silvers in the mile and 3 mile walk; and, Ann Leonard won a bronze medal in the one mile walk. It was "lucky 13" when the Cohasset's contingent was tallied. Ellery Clark won his 16th consecutive event in the Senior Olympics since 1989 and will try for the nationals in Syracuse June 30 to July 1, 1,500 and 5,000 meter race-walk.

❑ Welcome home to the third of the three Curran boys to serve in the Persian Gulf. Danny called his folks from South Carolina last weekend to say that he was on the way home. Tim and Brian are already back. Here's hoping that they will all march in the Memorial Day Parade, what a sight that would be. Thanks guys, we are proud of you and most grateful for your efforts.

❑ Received news from Washington and Jefferson College this week, concerning Todd Henry who is a junior there. Todd plays first base for the Presidents, and in 17 games he has a .397 batting average, 27 RBIs, 14 singles, three doubles and two triples. He leads the team in home runs (4) and has a .724 slugging percentage. Todd has a .989 fielding percentage, with one error, 10 assists and 76 putouts. Todd was named to the PAC's All-Conference first team last year and was ranked first in the conference in RBIs (35) and home runs (6).

In high school Todd was a four-year letterman with the Cohasset Skippers who batted .360 his senior year. He was named to the South Shore League All-Conference team as a senior. Off the field, Todd is the vice president of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity and is majoring in business administration. He is the son of Pamela and Robert Henry of Cohasset. Bill Enos, I hope you are taking notes, sounds like a hot pick for your scouting program.

❑ More news from college sports wire...Bowdoin College sends our way two Cohasset soccer players that received varsity letters for fall sports—Todd A. Fitzpatrick of 160 Sohier Street, and David R. Shultz of 38 Linden Drive, both due to graduate in 1992 from that institution.

❑ Congratulations go to Scott Charles Dwyer, who earned his Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Oklahoma last week. Featured speaker for the graduation ceremony was U.S. Senator Don Nickles, who spoke on "Challenges, Changes, and Choices." Best of luck to you in the future, Scott.

Congratulations are also in order for D. Ross MacLeod, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald MacLeod, 26 Cedar Acres Lane. He made the Boston College High School academic honors list for the third quarter. He is a member of the Class of 1992.

❑ We heard through the grapevine that Mary Jeanette Murray has a new nickname around the State House and after seeing her this weekend we understand why! The name? "The Gimp." The reason? It seems that Mary Jeanette was standing in Chamber when three men pushed into her and she sprained her Achilles tendon and broke all of the blood vessels in her ankle (must I tell you that they were Democrats that did the shoving?...). Through all of this she only missed one day of sessions, and has her loyal aide push her through the halls in a wheelchair...all we know is that ankle had better be perfect for the big wedding day, June 21, when daughter Lillian gets married or those guys had better be careful...seriously, we hope it will be one hundred percent by then, Mary Jeanette.

❑ Happy to report that Helen Livingston is feeling ever-so-much better and will be out and about in no time at all.

❑ Peter Plante received the sacrament of Confirmation at St. Coletta's Day School in Braintree. Bishop Daniel A. Hart conferred the sacrament upon three students attending St. Coletta's. On Saturday, May 11, the New/Norfolk Special Olympic Area Games were held at Braintree High School. Peter was awarded the gold medal in the 50 meter race, and the silver medal in the softball toss.

Finally, I goofed last week when I reported that Saadia Bryant graduated from Ann Arbor University. It should have been the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor and I am truly sorry that I got it wrong. At least this way you get to be congratulated twice!

❑ That's the news from here, please call me with yours so that you can make the news. Make it early in the week, the deadline is earlier due to the holiday.

Boosters provide great role models

Not long ago the town's Drug and Alcohol Committee sent out letters to all the school booster clubs, asking that their parties be conducted without any sort of alcoholic beverages.

Now the students at the parties were never given alcoholic beverages, but in the past many of the events were arranged so that the adults were able to purchase a drink or two in the course of a banquet.

This year, after the letter, school officials believe the parties were alcohol-free.

The various booster clubs that sponsored parties without alcohol deserve some loud applause. They provided the sort of example we all want our children to see.

Yes, it is possible to get through a social occasion without a drink.

We also want to commend the Drug and Alcohol Committee for taking the initiative to ask the clubs to try abstinence. They took and chance and it paid off.

Our school committee commented on the happening this week as they began discussion of a new request from the Drug and Alcohol Committee. The latest request seeks help from the schools to run a community-wide drug-free weekend at the beginning of next year.

School committee — the people who recently banned smoking on school grounds — are behind the Drug and Alcohol Committee on this new request.

It's an ambitious project, one we hope will gain interest from many quarters.

The idea of a drug-free weekend comes from Belmont where about 10 percent of the community participated.

Will 10 percent of our community decide to try a weekend without tobacco, alcohol or other drugs?

Will more people get involved and provide a strong community example?

Keith Knowles, chairman of the Drug and Alcohol Committee, says plans are still tentative. He thinks a weekend at the end of January would be workable.

A steering committee would be created just for the weekend's events. Some events would be planned for the schools.

And while the school committee took no vote on the concept, not one member voiced a problem.

There might be a serious forum planned for the weekend. There might be a dance for adults. The schools already have a semi-formal planned for the end of January.

The decisions would be made by the steering committee that will soon be chosen.

Students would be included on the committee as well as a representative of the school system and officials from community groups.

Knowles says the issue of teen-age drinking is as pressing as ever.

But the weekend isn't geared toward the young people. It is aimed at creating a community-wide role model.

Fine idea.

Flying Scot Fleet: Where Men are Men rebuttal

In rebuttal to Tanna Kasperowicz's May 9 article "They have always wanted us for food", we from the Flying Scot Fleet wanted to clarify and elaborate on some of her comments.

Evidently, Tanna misunderstood what her husband Ray meant when he said he was buying the boat for "the family." Surely she must have known he purchased the boat for "the family" of Flying Scot owners. We hope she was not naive enough to believe that "family" meant her own since everyone knows that potential boat owner sales pitches (e.g., "I am buying the boat for the children") are generally the same as a used car salesman's (i.e., "This car will change your life").

In response to her quote "bunch of angry men trying to win little plastic trophies", we feel that this statement is an oversimplification of the facts. We Flying Scot Fleet members are mostly men of the 90s who feel more comfortable expressing our feelings and emotions than prior generations. Showing anger, tears, and jubilation allows us to open up to other humans which we feel makes us more loving and gentler husbands. Incidentally, the trophies are not plastic but genuine bronze dipped masterpieces of art.

Tanna's comments regarding the tack parties were very fair. However, they did not elaborate on the causes for some of our "unique" behaviors. Most Flying Scot sailors share a common family tree and can trace our behavior to an early relative who, in fact, gave the very first "historically documented" tack party in 1042 AD. This, of course, was the great norseman "Hunta the Protestor" who said "those that can sail, sail; those that can't, make casserole and clean up the hut". Hunta's behavior was sometimes erratic in that during several tack parties he had a tendency to slay an unrepentant protester and eat him later (he also showed this tendency when tack party members started discussing town politics). Luckily our gene pool has been greatly diluted over the years such that eating our competitors is no longer tolerated. Casserole fishes and other food also retard this genetic urge. This is one of the reasons why the Cohasset Flying Scot fleet has grown in size the past several years.

As to the well known incident of a Flying Scot member pushing his wife overboard, I am sure readers would agree that it was totally justified if they had known that during the last leg of the second race she tried to begin a spirited discussion on the adequacy of town government causing him to lose two positions. The majority of Flying Scot owners felt that her husband showed more mercy than most by allowing his wife back on the boat rather than making her swim to shore to sit on the beach and read a book.

We hope this rebuttal clarifies some of Tanna's misconceptions about sailboat racing and we look forward to discussing these issues with her at the next tack party.

Greenbush finances questioned

letters

To the Editor:

Cohasset voters should consider the following information when voting on questions regarding the restoration of the Greenbush Rail Line.

Informed estimates of the average annual cost to the town of Cohasset range from $300,000 to $400,000 per year. This amount is more than double the total proposed override for the current town budget. The exact amount will be a fraction of the size of the MBTA deficit which is currently $513 million and growing. Voters will have no control over this cost and it will further restrain any improvements in education and public safety.

Using the MBTA's estimate of 235 round trip Cohasset commuters per day, this is an annual ongoing cost of between $1,276 and $1702 per commuter to be paid by Cohasset taxpayers.

The railroad through Cohasset would require 12 grade crossings in the town creating a minimum of 144 train crossings each day. Grade crossings are the single largest cause of public transportation accidents.

These grade crossings would disrupt much pedestrian and vehicular traffic in the town, and would create an unquantifiable danger in trips between the Deer Hill School, High School, Beechwood Playground, Milliken Field on one side of the tracks and the Osgood School and Playpark, Community Center, Sailing Club, Sandy Beach, library, Little League Field and village on the other. In her letter to the Mariner of March 21, Selectman Martha Gjesteby states, "MBTA fares actually cover approximately 30 percent of operating costs." Wrong. In 1990 MBTA fares covered 22 percent of operating expenses. This 8 percent discrepancy between Mrs. Gjesteby's statement and reality represents an addition to the MBTA deficit of $52 million in just one year. This type of reasoning leads to disastrous public works projects and half billion dollar deficits. Cohasset taxpayers will be forced to pay for these mistakes.

Skin cancer screening

To the Editor:

The American Cancer Society's table at the Cohasset Health Fair had literature on the prevention, detection and cure of skin cancer. There was also a Skin Analyzer, a device used to show graphically areas of sun-damaged skin. Most adults and many young people have sun-damaged skin from frequent exposure to the sun. Such exposure results in premature aging (i.e. wrinkles), and may lead to skin cancer.

The American Cancer Society emphasizes, however, that only a biopsy performed by a qualified physician can determine skin cancer. The literature explains melanoma and the causes (sun exposure), and states that if detected early, melanoma is completely curable. It shows how to do a monthly skin self-exam and stresses the importance of early diagnosis and reducing your risk by using at least a 15 SPF-rated sunscreen, wearing a hat, and not using sunlamps, tanning parlors or tanning pills.

Congratulations to the Social Service League for yet another fine Health Fair.

Bates sale praised

To the Editor:

Sometime in the not-too-distant future, Cohasset may be forced to spend big bucks to provide a mandated quota of affordable housing, regardless of our feelings about such mandates. An economical way to provide two units is through the Habitat proposal to fix up the Bates building. The alternative of selling the building for some other purpose will bring in a paltry amount relative to the cost of providing two units some other way.

The Town Meeting displayed far-sighted common sense in its non-binding resolution to let Habitat have the building for $1. Let's hope this constructive proposal isn't derailed by added activism.

commentary

It's getting out of hand, you know.

By Tanna Kasperowicz

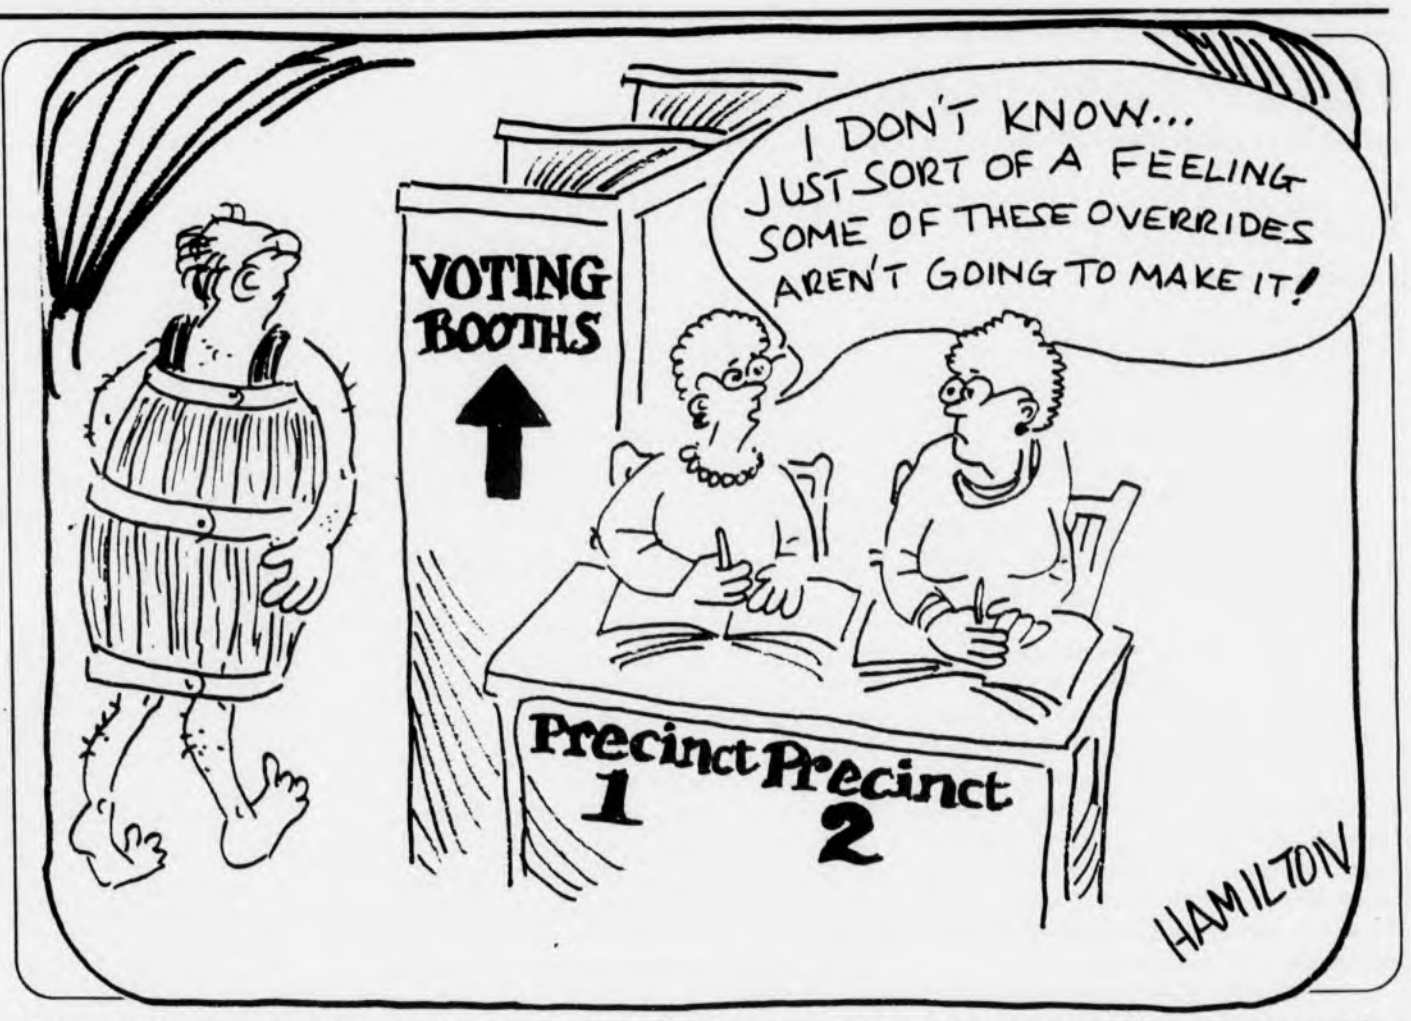
Of course, it's discriminatory. The Tinytown Chamber of Commerce is exactly correct, and was correct from the first hearing on the matter. Attorney General Harshbarger will boot the TT bylaw which allows "flags" in the village but not on 3-A. Now the planning board is on record as saying flags just might help the village to be more successful. If they (the flags) are found to be helpful, they (the PB) might let 3-A businesses have them too. After all, a board must move slowly on things like this ... particularly when dealing with something as dangerous as flags. What a hoot!

This PB is the same board who wrote the "Christmas" bylaw. All the years before the Christmas bylaw Tinytown businessmen were illegally putting up Christmas lights when they chose, and taking them down sometime after Christmas. Now, thanks to the planning board, strings of lights are legal at Christmas beginning with Thanksgiving and ending on January 15th of the ensuing year. These people really think until they write a bylaw for it, it can't happen. (The PB told TT meeting: before the creation of this bylaw, lights weren't permitted, when you vote for this, Christmas lights will be legal). And then you turkeys voted for it. Why didn't somebody standup and yell: the emperor has no clothes!?

It's getting out of hand, you know. It's all becoming very precise. Good taste has nothing to do with laws, prescriptions and prohibitions. One of the biggest mistakes TT and many towns are making is their attempt to make laws about everything. This is done to keep them safe from our rotten taste. So what if one business keeps its Christmas lights up 'til February ... isn't that what makes us all interesting? The Bubble Room on Captiva, Florida, has Christmas lights up year-round. Last April Sue Straley came to my house and ripped the four dried-up, rotten Christmas wreaths off our house. Isn't that friendlier than having the planning board police take you to court?

Imprinted in my mind, forever, is a night (years ago) when two TT planning board members pulled out their social calendars and debated when they "might" be able to reconvene to take a vote on one or two developers' projects. When the developers realized the PB would not have a quorum for six or more weeks, possibly two months because the board members were having difficulty synchronizing their many travel plans, the developers' eyes started rolling around in their heads. The fact that these developers had payrolls and timetables to meet mattered little and not at all to members of the royal planning court.

Several town boards and committees were gleeful when Queen Anne News was run out of Tinytown (an ugly distributor with a warehouse, in Tinytown-by-the-Sea? Mercy Days!) Queen Anne News was discovered to be legal after it left Tinytown. That's the fact, Jack. More tax revenue down the tubes. Have you noticed the tarps over Kimballs' signs on 3-A — as the tourist season hums along?



When the Rockland Holiday Inn went down the tubes last summer you just knew things were drying up for innkeepers. Let me tell you how bad this area is for outsiders: Around 1982 I was hired as area editor for Fodor's Travel Guide (Quincy through the Cape). After I researched the entire area Fodor's dropped its plans to do a book or a book section on the area, because 1) towns didn't allow tourists on their beaches; 2) there was no place to go for fun (as one businessman once said, how do you excite a tourist about Starland, Fascination and the Hingham movie theater); 3) it was discovered that people who had come here by accident never came back. The point of this story is, nothing's changed. Cohasset boards and committees were anti-business in 1982 and they're still anti-business. Where will all the tourists (who come to see the Tinytown pump) stay if there are no inns? Why should they come if they can't go to the beach? What if there's nowhere to shop? If the South Shore Music Circus should stop, who will subsidize community efforts? I think it's about time we got rid of some bylaws. I will applaud the PB and/or any citizens who go before Tinytown meeting to kill bylaws. Then, and only then, I will know things are changing.

If Steve Martin does make a movie in Tinytown this summer, hope he's not going to give parts to Tinytown selectpeople — after all, they have their own show. Besides, it must be a conflict of interest for TT selectpeople to be hired as actors and actresses in a movie for which they are the licensing agent. Being offered a part in a movie and a chance to be walk-on stars, could sway their individual judgments. I'll have to ask my special investigator person (Bob Turner) at the Ethics Commission if there's anything in the laws about movie roles. Maybe they could designate themselves special municipal actors. He'll know. Can't wait to get his letter.

I remember how the "Witches of Eastwick" painted the First Parish Church; do you suppose Steve Martin will paint the Old Town Hall?

Apparently the original Howard Reed watercolor of the police station is missing. For a while there, lots of things from the walls were missing; then, after some nasty phone calls, some things came back, other things continued to stay missing.

Always love it when the Cable Camera (Bob Davenport) starts asking TT selectmen questions. Somehow, even people watching the show for the first time know that this is the camera talking, probing, asking for all of us out here in lala land (we who can only scream silently). Selectpeople should install a phone-in pulse meter to register how citizens feel at any certain time during their meeting: 1 - Out of Work. 2 - Exasperation. 3 - Urge to kill. 4 - Speak up, Greg. 5 - Zombie. 6 - Resignation.

Voters obviously had their pocketbooks in mind Saturday when they defeated seven of the ten Proposition 2-1/2 override and debt exclusion questions on the ballot.

Ruth Pratt and Maria R. Pape work at the polls on the special election. Remember town meeting reconvenes Wednesday, May 29, at the high school. (Jodi L. Rome staff photo)

Higher rate OK'd for Edison

The Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities (DPU) authorized Eastern Edison Co. to increase the amount it charges customers for electricity by approximately 0.2 cents per kilowatt-hour (kWh).

The DPU approved the new Eastern Edison charge based on an increase in the wholesale cost Eastern Edison must pay for electricity, effective immediately.

For a residential customer of Eastern Edison using 500 kWh of electricity per month, the change amounts to an increase of $1.16, or 2.08 percent. That customer's monthly bill for 500 kWh goes from $55.90 to $57.06.

Red Sox lose minor opener

By Dennis Ford
Minor League correspondent
With Bob Morgan—Cardinals
Bob Moody—Giants

EARLIER GAMES
Red Sox 6—Cardinals 5
(4/29)

Dustin Pratt's two hits along with John Paul Laugelle's strong pitching was not enough to beat the Red Sox in the season opener.

Red Sox 11—Cardinals 6

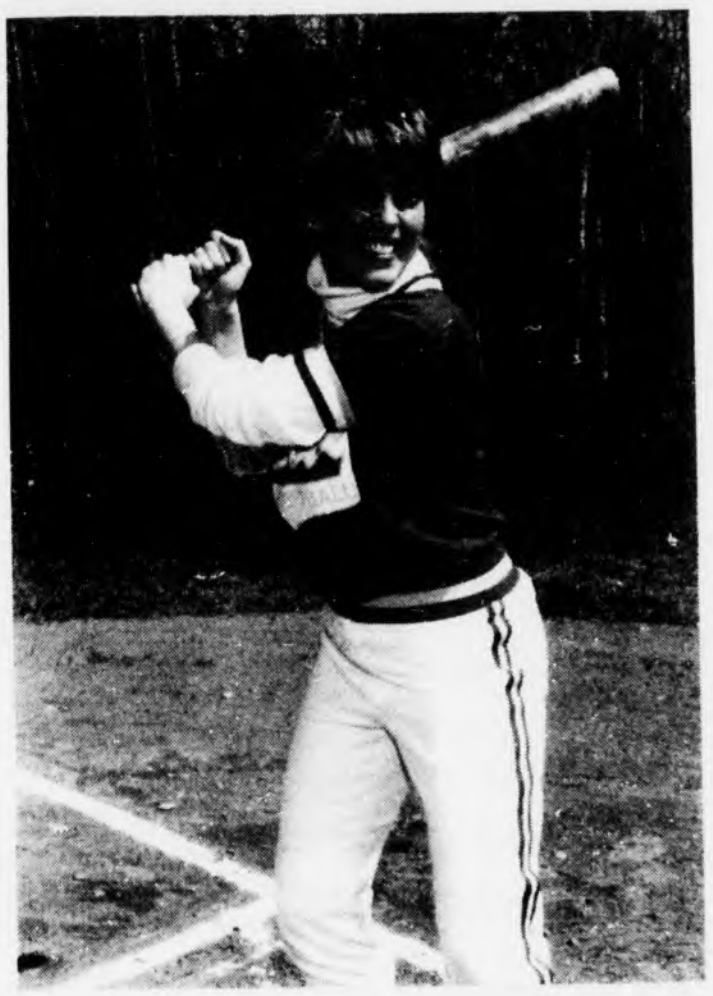
In back to back games for these two teams, the Red Sox again were victorious. Yet there were outstanding hitting performances by the Cardinals' Brian Hurley (hitting over .500 in 2 games) and Bobby Morgan who had 2 hits! Josh Parisi was great at second base and it was a pleasure to watch Greg Parkinson's aggressive base running.



Giants 12—Cardinals 8
(5/7)

The Giants' bullpen is hot! Eric Wenmark pitched superbly with many strikeouts in clutch situations. Mark Kupsc hit 3 for 4 along with Andy Ross who hit 2 for 3. The Hart brothers, Ryan and Michael performed well in the outfield and Greg Connolly sure can run those bases!!

Giants 13—Cardinals 4
(5/11)

An outstanding team effort lead the Giants to their third win of the season. Nick Mincolla hit two home runs! Sergei Skorupa had two walks and Garrett Williams and Aaron Sawchuck walked, all leading to runs scored.

For the Cardinals, Andrew Singleton tripled in the third inning and Hunt Pile walked in the top of the sixth starting a rally which lead to 4 runs scored. Sean Parkinson along with Andy Curran pitched well but not enough to hold off the Giants.

Kristen Ellinger

Kristen Ellinger plays Colby softball

Kristen Ellinger, a sophomore at Colby College in Waterville, Maine, was a member of the 1991 women's softball team.

Ellinger, who graduated from Cohasset Junior-Senior High School, played outfield and pitcher for the White Mules. She completed the season with a .905 fielding average.

One of America's outstanding liberal arts colleges, Colby has 1,700 select undergraduates drawn from nearly every state in the union and two dozen foreign lands. More than a third of the student body at Colby participates in at least one of the 27 varsity sports on an athletic complex that includes seven fields, a hockey rink, a fieldhouse, a gymnasium, indoor and outdoor tennis courts, squash courts and facilities for weight and exercise training.

Ellinger, a government major, is the daughter of George and Patricia Ellinger of Cohasset.

CHS lacrosse action

It all comes down to this afternoon.

After a close first half, Xaverian of Westwood ripped the Cohasset High School lacrosse team's defense for five unanswered goals on the way to a 13-7 victory last Friday.

The Skippers, who need to win their final two games to qualify for the state tournament, face powerful Falmouth High School today, Thursday, May 16, before closing out the season on Saturday hosting a contest against winless Waltham High School. The Falmouth game begins at 4 p.m. at Milliken Field, and the Waltham tilt—the Skippers' second weekend game of the season—starts at 11:30 in the morning.

"We didn't play very well," said coach Ken Ekberg of the Xaverian loss, which leaves Cohasset at 6-2. "At first our attack got intimidated. Then the whole team let down."

Cohasset's starting attackmen—Charlie Endris, Matt Marks and Jake Powell—had been averaging nearly five goals per game in recent weeks. Against Xaverian, Endris and Powell scored a goal apiece. Sophomore midfielder Willie Adams and senior midfielder Bart Weisenfluh had a pair of goals each, while defenseman Ollie Nivaud ran the length of the field to score his first.

Goalie Travis Coley, in a superb effort, stopped 21 Xaverian shots.

Super cool soccer squads succeed

By Carol Riley

Super cool weather and sunny skies set the perfect scene for success for many Cohasset teams in the Coastal Youth Soccer League this past weekend. The girls continue their remarkable primacy.

Girls Under 14-1 shut out a tough Plymouth team 2-0 on goals by Dawn Meehan and Erin Murphy. Forwards Melinda Johansen, Tammy Maitland and Danielle Nohe were a constant threat to the Plymouth defense. Showing a super defensive effort were Liz Corcoran, Andrea Mercurio and Amy Silvia. This is the fourth shutout for goalkeeper Emily D'Urso.

Girls Under 14-2 continues their undefeated streak with a 3-0 triumph over Hanover. Amie Theriault scored two unassisted goals; the third goal was scored by Kelly O'Donnell assisted by Emily Henderson. Christine Burns, Erin Devine, Maureen Murphy, Caitlin Connolly and Lauren DeVito provided strong defense for super goalkeeper, Megan Fahey.

Girls Under 10-2 shut out Cohasset's Girls Under 10-1 team with a 5-0 score. Alexandra DeRosa got the hat trick with three goals and Lydia Crafts and Eileen Ridge scoring one each. Kyralea Cogill was excellent minding the net aided by strong defense from Sara Eaton Bruce, Alexandra D'Urso and Karyn Gray. Susana Candia played a fine game at forward.

Boys Under 16, though dominating the field throughout the game, tied Kingston 0-0. Chris Goodman was brilliant in goal, fending off many shots. Showing superb passing and stealing ability were Eric Drysdale, Max Nivaud and Brian Duffy.

Boys Under 14-1 succumbed to a very powerful Plymouth squad, 4-0 in an away game Saturday, despite aggressive play by Jim Magner, Eric Henry, Ryan Freeman and a fine effort by goalkeeper Patrick Reynolds.

Boys Under 12-2 also lost to Plymouth on their turf 5-1, outwitting Morgan Sandell in his goaltending debut. Andrew Ross and Jeff Thompson played well at midfield, while Patrick Leahy showed great hustle at forward. Greg Bilton scored the single goal for Cohasset.

Boys Under 8-4 eked out a 2-1 victory over Boys Under 8-6 in a game between well-matched squads. Carter Noon and John Cotter each scored a goal and also took turns in goal. In addition, Charles Anderson and William Prendergast controlled the ball at forward.

Mets even up with champion Red Sox

By Sandra Noble
League correspondent

METS VS. RED SOX

The Mets started the week by evening up their series with the Champion Red Sox in a 16 to 6 win. Ely Kahn helped his own cause with two doubles followed by Doug Cameron with a big triple. Sam Goedecke showed some outstanding fielding, with Ely Kahn making his pitching debut pitching nine strikeouts.

DODGERS VS. ATHLETICS

The Dodgers got back on track Tuesday night beating the A's 8-7 in a see-saw game that could have gone either way. The Dodgers held on at the end, but not without a 6th inning threat from the A's, with two men on second and third and two outs, Matt Lewis came in, in relief, to nail the door shut on Matt O'Connor, (who is always a threat at the plate). Greg Bilton made his first major league start, and looked very good. John Paul Lacks looked great behind the plate, tagging out the tying run at the plate in the 6th inning to end it. Tucker Gledhill at third made some super plays tagging out several people trying to steal.

PIRATES VS. CARDINALS

Wednesday night the Pirates triumphed with a 16-5 win. Benjamin Smoot started the game with a shoestring catch in center field followed by Robert Bugley snaring a twisting line drive in right field to kill rally. Jarrod Batts smoothly handled a hard ground ball to the "hot corner" and fired out the Cardinals base runner. Scott Van Hartesvelt better known as "Laserbeam" pitched a solid three innings, with Colton Ralston doing a fine job in relief.

The combination of Ted Goff, Steve Baker and Dave Noble produced six of the Cards' nine hits in the game. Other sluggers were Muscular Lloyd Workman, Crazy Legs Adam Sherrin and Steady Charley Dean.

Obviously the combination of walks and errors hurt the Cardinal cause. Nice fielding plays were turned in by Leigh Atherton, also Steve Kovach made a super throw to nail a Pirate at home plate. Five pitchers were used in the five inning game. The tilt featured the starting debut of Adam Sherrin. Adam threw hard and produced some solid strike outs. The fifth Cardinal run was scored in the fourth by Paul Sherrin. The ball clubs good looking "DH" scored on a Charley Dean single. His speed and heads-up base running were extremely evident.

METS VS. ATHLETICS

A complete team effort by the Mets produced a 9-3 win on Thursday night. Frank Abadie hitting two doubles, followed by J. L. Williams with a double and a single, Joel Puorro 1-1, Tom Leahy 1-2 scoring double and lets not forget "New Kid on the Block," Larry Adams, with a double. Taylor Devin did his part pitching eight strikeouts.

DODGERS VS. PIRATES

The Pirates had sweet revenge against the Dodgers with a 9-2 win, after getting beat in a tough extra inning game last week. Matt Lewis pitched a good game despite a weak outfield. Matt Lewis hit two singles, Greg Bilton hit a double, Tucker Gledhill with a single and Matt Belson with a single. The Dodgers double play was too late in the game to help them out although it spurred them on to come in with two runs but... too late.

Derek Bugley came up with two hits and one walk with three trips to the plate, with Ben Smoot scoring three runs for the Pirates. The Pirates played flawless baseball in the field especially Paul Michael Quintin who had four put outs playing second base. Rob "Ironman" Buckley struck out one while pitching 6 strong innings giving up only three hits. The Pirates moved into a tie for first place with the Dodgers as a result of this win.

Slow pitch league

The Cohasset Community Center is in the process of forming a co-ed youth summer softball league. The age of the players will focus between the ages of 14 and 16 with allowance for a few older players and a few younger players. An attempt will be made to balance the number of male and female athletes. The game structure will be flexible in regard to calling balls and strikes. Everyone will be allowed the opportunity to hit. It will be slow pitch. The individual coaches will serve as umpires and resolve any call disputes. Ten players will be on the field at a time in regular field positions with the addition of a short fielder. The object of the games is fun.

The softball season will run from July 8 to August 26. Games will be scheduled on Monday and/or Wednesday nights at 6 p.m. Each team will face the other league teams twice. At the end of the season, an event will be scheduled in which all six teams participate. Towns in the summer league include Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Randolph, Westwood and Weymouth. To register call Judy Volungis at 383-0088. The cost is $20.

Junior voices perform

Junior Voices, the Hingham-based children's choir, completed its first season May 11 by participating in the Festival of Massachusetts Children's Choirs held at Smith College in Northampton.

The South Shore families met for a picnic on the shore of Smith College's Paradise Pond at noon. Director Margo Euler, herself a graduate of Smith, led the children to John M. Greene Hall for the joint rehearsal of all the participating choirs at 1:15. After a brief chance for each choir to get used to the big stage and how to get on and off to the balcony, everybody got dressed in their special choir outfit; the Junior Voices looked the most comfortable and spring-like in their new aqua T-shirts and white pants or skirt.

At 3 p.m. the concert began, with each choir singing for 10 minutes; JVs was fourth, and astonished the audience by singing with the best projection and enthusiasm thus far, even though by far the youngest group; the audience response was increased when Euler invited everyone to join in singing a round together.

The host choir for the event, the Mt. Holyoke Children's Choir (directed by Catherine Melhorn, a classmate of Margo Euler's at Smith) sang; another choir, the Worcester Youth Chorus, was led by Karen Hastie-Wilson, a former chorister in Euler's first children's choir in Concord where she taught after graduation from Smith. The other choruses participating last Saturday were the Boston Youth pro Musica, the Plymouth-Carver Children's Choir, and the South County Youth Choir of the Berkshires.

At the end of the concert, with all 250 children on stage together singing under Cathy Melhorn's direction three selections all had learned in advance. The final piece, "Hymn to Freedom," was clearly everyone's favorite, and was accompanied by a superb trio of jazz musicians from U Mass in true gospel style. When the last three words, "We'll Be Free!" were choreographed with all the children raising their arms overhead, the audience cheered.

The twenty-seven children in Junior Voices from Hingham, Cohasset, Marshfield, Norwell, Weymouth, and Hanover have been singing together on Tuesday afternoons all year, learning to read music in the process. Junior Voices, under the auspices of the Broad Cove Chorale/Unicorn Singers, Inc., is taught by Euler; the children range in age from 6 to 12 - most are in grades 2 through 5. Inquiries regarding participation for next fall are encouraged, call 749-7890.

Edwin Fredie on Pierson show

On Thursday, May 23, Wigmore Pierson's guest on "Pierson to Person" will be Edwin H. Fredie, the new headmaster at Milton Academy. Fredie is currently the principal at Needham High School.

Topics to be discussed include the current issues facing public and private secondary education, national educational reform, and the impact of the state's financial crisis on education.

The "Pierson to Person" show is broadcast live each Thursday evening, 8 to 9 p.m., on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset and Hingham.

The public is invited to be part of the studio audience and should be at the Continental Cablevision studio on Gannett Road, North Scituate by 7:30 p.m. on Thursday evening, May 23.

For further information call Robert Belliveau, Executive Producer of "Pierson to Person" at 545-0643.

Murphy to speak June 5

Michael M. Murphy, a member of the Governor's Council and of the Canton Board of Health, will be the keynote speaker at a June 5 landfill forum in Cohasset.

The public forum will be hosted by the Cohasset group, Stop Any Further Expansion, or SAFE, to discuss the effects of landfills on communities and homes.

The forum, dubbed "Enough is Enough," will be held Wednesday, June 5, from 8 to 9:30 p.m. at the Unitarian Parish House, 23 North Main Street.

Governor's Councillor Murphy will relate his experiences living near and trying to regulate "Mount Randolph," the 295-acre BFI-owned landfill in Canton.

Also speaking will be Philip Beach, a member of the Planning Board in East Bridgewater. Beach will speak about the 70 to 80 acre, 280-foot high BFI landfill in that town, and how the landfill operations affects his town.

SAFE will also present information about the proposed 27.5 acre expansion of the Cohasset Heights Landfill, located off Crocker Lane in Cohasset, and the potential for Cohasset Heights to be chosen as an alternative disposal site for MWRA sludge now planned for Walpole.

SAFE is a Cohasset-based group opposed to the expansion of the Cohasset Heights Landfill and the disposal of MWRA sludge in Cohasset.

SAFE members are concerned that Cohasset Heights could pollute Lily Pond, the town water supply.

For more information, SAFE can be reached at 383-1829 or by writing P.O. Box 702, Cohasset, MA 02025.

FOR AN IDEA OF HOW DIRTY YOUR ORIENTAL RUG IS, RUB THIS AND LOOK AT YOUR FINGER.

Oriental rugs are constantly picking up various types of soil. Some are greasy and some are gritty. But they all can eat away at your treasured possession.

For your Oriental rug to retain its beauty and value, it should be cleaned at least once every three to five years.

At Grillo Oriental Rug Cleaning, we carefully examine each rug, then give it the most suitable treatment. Sometimes that means gentle machine-washing, other times it means our 'Art-Safe' hand-washing. And our exclusive equipment and methodology enable us to remove the deep-set grit that others miss.

Furthermore, unlike harsh commercial cleaning, our individualized, museum-quality care is always safe, always effective.

For more information, or to have your rug picked up, call (617) 871-6500. Outside this area code, call 1-800-649-7707.

Because of facilities and staffing, soccer, baseball and softball camps will be able to accept a limited number of participants. As with all recreation programs and activities, should fees cause financial impossibility of participation, please contact Jack Worley at the Recreation office (383-6791), or any member of the Cohasset Recreation Commission. Current members are: Richard P. Barrow, Chairman, Mary K. Muncey, Secretary, Terry E. Duggan, Shelanne S. Durkin, Stephen C. Endris, Donald E. Staszko, and Thomas Wigmore.

Basketball Camp will be directed by Arnie Repucci, Head Basketball Coach, Cohasset High School Boy's Varsity. Lacrosse will be directed by Mr. Dave Lewis, Weymouth Lacrosse and President of LAX USA. Mini-camp Football will be instructed by area coaches and players, and Pro-play comes to us from England the week of August 26. Unless otherwise indicated, all sports camps are five days in duration, meeting Monday to Friday.

The Cohasset Recreation Commission has isolated a need for structured, top-quality sports training programs for teenage groups.

The Cohasset Tree, Park and Cemetery Department under the direction of Peter Laugelle is thanked, as without the full support of Tree and Park programs of this nature could not be conducted each year. Due to the recent deregulation of Revolving Account Fund for 100 percent self-supporting programs, which the financial mechanism has been established for sports camps, each camp will contribute 4 percent of their gross revenue collected, to the general fund of the town. In this manner, programs can still be offered at the "at service" cost and taxpayers will be compensated for use of public facilities and administrative operations.

Talent search stops here

Lilian Faulhaber, Megan McNamara, Abigail Pease, Ryan Sawchuck, all seventh graders at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School, have been selected to receive awards for their achievement in the Talent Search Program sponsored by Johns Hopkins University.

Cohasset High School has participated in the CTY Talent Search for the past eight years. Talent Search is a program sponsored by Johns Hopkins University's Center for the Advancement of Academically Talented Youth. The goal of the program is to identify the most academically talented seventh graders, offer those students summer educational programs, and provide them with recognition at state and regional ceremonies. Each year for the past eight years the Cohasset Public Schools have received a Johns Hopkins Certificate for Distinction in this competition.

Initially, students are selected based on their scores on the SRA tests administered each year. Students scoring at the 97th percentile or higher on those tests in the sixth grade are encouraged to participate in the program.

Selected to receive a Certificate of Distinction are Lilian Faulhaber, Megan McNamara, Abigail Pease and Ryan Sawchuck. The state and regional awards will be presented to qualifying students at a ceremony to be held on Sunday, June 9, at Boston University.

Stars of the month

The following students have been chosen as stars for the month of March. They were selected for their contributions to their classes and/or school, working to the best of their ability, or for assisting classmates. In general, they have displayed exemplary school citizenship. Congratulations to these seventh graders: Nathan Caldwell, Caroline deLima, Jessi Flynn, Sybil Johnson, Heather Littlehale, Stephanie Lubitz, Faye Menis, Abigail Pease, Brian Sasso and Ryan Sawchuck.

Early release day

May 23 will be an early release day in the Cohasset public schools. There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule: Junior/Senior High School, 12 p.m.; Deer Hill School, 12:40 p.m., and Joseph Osgood School, 12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in the elementary schools and food service will be available at the Junior/Senior High School.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow for budget preparation at the elementary level and prepare for accreditation at the secondary level.

Nutrition at Osgood

The Osgood second grade has been studying nutrition. Students in Mrs. Collins' and Mrs. Wells' classes had a nutritional breakfast cooked at school. Menus included scrambled eggs or pancakes, whole wheat toast, yogurt, fruit salad, orange juice and milk.

Some second graders will make their television debut on channel 3. Watch for their commercials. This project incorporated planning, decision making and cooperative learning - all part of the Talents Unlimited Program.

Art awards

Three artists from C.H.S. have been chosen for Art-All-State. They are: Cecilia Candia, Simon Payne and John Kisiel. They will attend the State AA festival in June.

Big Apple

The following students took first place in the Big Apple Music Festival May 3-5.

Joe Andrade, Jim Cedarstrom, Mindy Cheel, Carrie Cosme, Christina DeVaughn, Alison Doherty, Sarah Douglas, Cilla Goff, Ted Graham, Meredith Hansen, Joanna Horn, Hope Gaston, Jill DuMoulin, Claudine Johnson, Ray Jones, Jody Kehoe, Karla Kennedy, Karen Kristiansen, Bonnie Krueger, Katie McNamara, Dawn Meehan, Barb Migliaccio, Aimee Mitchell, Maggie Moore, Katie O'Connor, Brian Pattison, Keri Richards, Sirpa Rissanen, Ere Sakamoto, Martina Snyder, Tika Soares, Erin Sutherland, Kim Ward, Asha Williams and Aliz Welz. All are members of the Senior Chorus.

Senior project update

The following senior projects were included in a show last Friday at C.H.S.

Students began projects April 22.

Bob Whittaker served as a legislative intern at the State House. He had the opportunity of working with Sen. Bob Hedlund in his office as well as becoming familiar with the State House itself. The duties and responsibilities of an intern gave him a special insight into the legislative process that few young people experience.

Jonathan Mitchell replaced the roof of the concession stand at Barnes Field. In addition, he will be doing other maintenance and repair work making Barnes Field ready for the upcoming Little League season. Jonathan's goal is to "make the little league field presentable to the other towns that visit." He also wants to give back to the Little League program some of what gave him "so much enjoyment as a little kid."

Kerri Miele and Barbara LaGrotteria worked with Michael Gill in creating the "Drug Awareness Day" at CHS, which will take place at the end of this year. This project will include a speaker, a movie, survey, and other plans. They also assisted Gill in the preparation of health classes during fourth quarter.

Liana Adams, Tracey Stohl, Alyson James and Martha Maynard decided to beautify the school during their study periods by creating an undersea world mural in the women's bathroom. It is a welcome addition to the women's room for years to come.

Oliver Nivaud worked with special needs students, helping them to learn, to feel more secure, to feel more comfortable with themselves, "so they might not think of themselves as different." Oliver chose this project because he enjoys helping others.

Melissa Christoffel, having spent considerable time in the Soviet Union, made presentations in social studies classes. She is focusing on Soviet perspectives in foreign policy, and shared other observations as well.

Greg Lennon worked with the Cohasset Police Department on the automobile accidents which have occurred at dangerous intersections in town. He created a pin map indicating the locations of each accident.

Bart Weisenfluh offered his services, doing odd jobs and maintenance work at the Senior Housing on Elm St. behind the fire station. Bart sees a need for his services as a result of the budget cuts which have left the seniors in need of assistance.

Philip Pratt used his talents to build an obstacle course behind the school which will be used by the alternative school under the supervision of Mr. Buckley. Philip began by building a walk and then will continue on to build a ropes course.

Kay Long, Maureen Long, Karla Kristiansen and Tara Volungis during their study periods painted the gym walls in order to enhance the appearance of the school and to make their fellow players proud of Cohasset High School's gym.

Ere Sakamoto and Patrika Soares not only improved CHS by painting their creative mural, but they will be leaving behind a lasting memory of their respective cultures with every brushstroke.

Tenae Bolling and Meg Cosman put together a video album just for seniors, which would capture the spirit of the "Class of 91." Much of the video album will show the seniors in the candid mode and will record the memorable moments of their last month at good old CHS.

Alison Doherty reconstructed troublesome areas of the track in order to remedy the irregularities that have annoyed the members of the track team for years. This is an invaluable service to her fellow team members and also to future team members as well.

Matt Berger and Mags Moore did a series of "on location shoots" of their classmates who are out on Senior Project. Their video interviews captured the initial enthusiasm of each student, perhaps some of the difficulties encountered, and of course, the triumph of the completed project.

Katie McNamara has chosen a Senior Project that will prepare her for her career in education. Katie assisted in the teaching of nursery school children at the Cohasset Community Center. Her first assignment will be working with three-year-olds.

Ted Graham chose an ecological project which involves biological testing of the water in Straits Pond for bacteria and other harmful elements. He hopes to challenge the recent ecological report done by the State as well as to raise the consciousness level of the townspeople in their recognition of the environmental hazards in our town.

High scoring students listed

Cohasset High School has been notified by National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC) that: John Brister, Cecilia B. Candia, Jason T. Hunter, Rebecca A. Kirk, John B. Kisiel, Brenden J. Murphy and Maureen J. Smith have been designated High Scorers in the 1992 National Merit Scholarship Program. The Principal, Mary Ellen Gallagher, announced this week that these juniors placed in the top fifty thousand (50,000) of more than one million participants in the 36th annual Merit Program.

While all 50,000 "high scorers" have shown outstanding academic potential, only about 15,000 of them (the top scorers in each of the 50 states) will be honored as Semifinalists. The other 35,000 will be commended for their performance on the PSAT/NMSQT, but only Semifinalists will have an opportunity to advance in the competition for some 6,000 Merit Scholarships to be awarded in 1992. Neither Semifinalists nor Commended Students in the 1992 Merit Program will be informed of their standing until September, when they will be notified through their principals.

Farm League news

By John Kinchla
Special to theMariner

The first exciting week of Farm League baseball has concluded and already the program's 6 and 7 year olds are preparing for the second week.

The following are the Team Number, Farm League Coaches, Team Names, Sponsors and Team Colors.

D. Duffy, J. Kinchla, Astros, CYAA, Purple. A. Snowdale, R. Shea, Pirates, Cohasset VFW, Gray. M. Canistraro, Cardinals, JJ's Dairy, Maroon. K. Lewis, Dodgers, B. Tufts DMD, Pale Blue. Bilodeau, French, Roach, Giants, BayBank, Gold. Peter Berg, A's, Children Exchange, Green. Jim Kinch, Dan Smith, Mets, R. Pompeo MD, Royal Blue. J. Carr, Steve Webber, Yankees, Lyne, Woodworth, Navy Blue. Bob Ernst, Orioles, Liquor Unlimited, Orange. D. McMorris, Foley, Red Sox, Buttonwood Toys, Red.

FARM LEAGUE PROFILE
THE ASTRO'S

The Astro's in their distinctive purple hats and shirts traded runs with the VFW Pirates in their season opener last week. Big performers for the Astro's were Outfielders Johnny Figuerido, Danny Duffy, Dennis Reardon and Nick Spirito. Johnny Figuerido demonstrated his "good glove" while in centerfield and charged after every ball. Right Fielder, Danny Duffy, ever alert, backed-up his infielders throughout the game. Left Fielders Dennis Reardon and Nick Spirito had plenty of action as the Pirates sprayed the ball to all fields throughout this contest.

Infielders Peter Roy, Johnny Dwyer and Tim Straughn impressed with their bats, arms and fielding range. This threesome made many key plays throughout the contest. The Astro's can boast about their baserunning speed and power. Speedsters Dave DeVito, Tommy Anderson and Danny Kinchla really churn up the base paths stretching singles into doubles and making life miserable for the Pirates in the field. Next week, Astro Diedre Bigley will return to the lineup. This team looks like a contender.

THE PIRATES

Farm Leaguers beware. The Pirates are a fearsome team. Pirate first baseman, Kevin Hanian, has a big league glove. Third baseman, Eric Libby and Shortstop, Pete Whoriskey are fearsome too. Outfielder Henry Roth creates havoc for the opposition with his baserunning ability. Pirates Joe Meallo, Evan Pestone, Peter Kovach and Mike Snowdale banged the ball with power against the Astro's, while fielders Nicholas Laas and Julie Shea stopped everything hit their way. Head Pirate Al Snowdale's team will send shivers through the league and deep six the opposition all season.

THE BUTTONWOOD RED SOX

The Buttonwood Books and Toys Red Sox coached by Farm League veterans Dave McMorris and Bill Foley have a commanding presence on the field and potent bats at the plate.

Defensively, Ace Karen McMorris is on the mound and rangy Jay Bertovich plays first base. Nick Bolster and Justin Drybanski can turn a quick double play from their positions of second and shortstop, while Braun Goodson holds down the "hot corner" at third base.

These young Red Sox, like their major league namesakes, also have a powerful corps of outfielders. Leading the lineup is Cara Foley, Trevor Hardie, Nick Cavanaugh, John Freidman, Dave Proctor and Matt Corey.

The Buttonwood Red Sox have played the Yankees, the Astros, and the Cardinals. They play the Giants on Saturday, May 25, which marks the midway point of their season. Thus far, they have played very exciting baseball.

A golfer's delight

Dear Non-golfoholic:

How to explain my addiction to someone who doesn't have it? Picture a female chimp in a scientist's laboratory. Attached to her brain is a machine that activates her pleasure center if she pushes the right button in the right way, but causes her pain when she makes a mistake. It has taken her a long time, but she thinks she has figured out the correct procedure. Before she pushes the button, she must turn around three times and scratch her left ear.

For a day or two this technique works perfectly. Then, as the formula loses its efficiency, she starts

Drastic cuts may dock commuters

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

Proposed service cuts to the Hingham-Boston commuter boat service could mean the end of the service, according to one of its providers.

At a meeting of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority's board of directors at Weymouth Town Hall May 14, Bill Spence, the President of Massachusetts Bay Lines, called the proposed cuts, which will eliminate six trips and reduce the capacity of others, "drastic."

"This will not help (the service), in fact it may destroy it," he said. "This is critical. It is the destruction of the commuter boat as far as I am concerned."

Commuter boat service out of Hingham is run by two providers, Spence's Massachusetts Bay Lines, and Boston Harbor Commuter Service.

Because of a $350,000 budget reduction for the next fiscal year, the MBTA has proposed several schedule changes including:

•The elimination of the 7 a.m. run out of Hingham.

• Reducing the 8 a.m. run out of Hingham from a 300 passenger boat to a 150 passenger vessel.

• The elimination of the 8:30 a.m. trip out of Hingham.

• The elimination of the 11 a.m. trip out of Hingham.

• The elimination of the 2:30 p.m., 5:45 p.m., and 8 p.m. trips from Boston to Hingham.

• The reduction of the 5:30 p.m. trip out of Boston to Hingham from 300 passengers to 150 passengers.

"This schedule eliminates important runs and it will eliminate one of the two large vessels presently operating on the service," Spence said.

He said the elimination of the 7 a.m. run out of Hingham will mean overcrowding. Other passengers will be left behind.

"Our records show that some of these trips already carry 149 passengers and turn people away," Spence said.

"Similar problems will result when a 300 passenger boat is replaced with a 149 passenger boat at 8 a.m.

"When you take out that 7 a.m. boat, you are going to have people stacked up on the pier or going elsewhere.

"You are going from a service where people have to wait some of the time, to a service where people are going to have to wait all of the time."

Spence proposed that the two operators give up cost of living increases to retain the runs.

"If both operators would give up a previously agreed cost of living increase for fiscal 1992, then a previously discussed plan to eliminate the 10 a.m. run from Hingham (operated by his company), the 2:30 p.m. from Boston (run by his competitor), and the 8 p.m. from Boston (run by his competitor) should cover the remaining budgetary shortfall."

A golfer's delight . . .

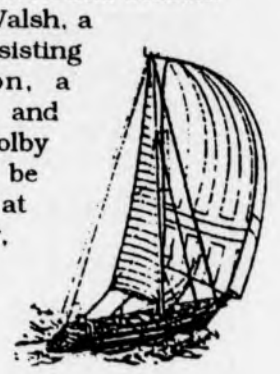
getting zapped. No matter what gymnastics she performs, she is unable to recapture that magic feeling. She becomes depressed and frustrated. Then she happens to scratch her right ear before she scratches her left ear, and accidentally turns around only twice. Once more she is filled with euphoria. Again it is all too brief, and our wretched chimp is morose and unfit to live with.

One glorious day she discovers that she can forget all that nonsense about scratching ears and turning around in circles. All she has to do is rub her stomach counter-clockwise and pat herself on the head while jumping from one foot to the other. At last she has The Answer, she thinks. The scientist who has rigged the machine observes the psychotic behavior of his once-normal subject and rubs his hands with glee. (He is totally mad, of course.)



And so it goes with golf. We poor chumps persist in our bizarre gyrations, convinced we can beat the machine. Moments of ecstasy alternate with sloughs of despair. Do you now understand, dear friend, my lack of accessibility from spring's last downpour to winter's first blizzard? I am out there on the golf course, pitting my intelligence against the machine. Perhaps I imagine it, but every now and then I could swear I hear a fiendish chuckle.

scouting news

By Mimi Sestito

Recently, Troop 28 of Cohasset had two interesting speakers for their weekly meeting at the Joseph Osgood School.

The topic was on drug education and the speaker was Special Agent Steve Morreale of the Drug Enforcement Administration. His reenacting a scenario of being with a person who was in possession of just a little marijuana brought home the seriousness of the situation of guilt by association.

Special Agent Morreale brought out the point that we practice for sports, school work, music and so on, but do we practice what to say to someone who offers you drugs? A drug takes control of your life. It destroys your brain cells and your body. Is this what you want to have in your life?

Following special agent Morreale's program was another guest speaker, Fred T. from Alcoholics Anonymous, who works for the Pine Street Inn in Boston.

Learning the complicated effects of alcohol has on a person, his family and their lives had an impact on all those who were in attendance.

We need to be informed and keep on being informed of the dangerous drugs and their effects on lives.

Memorial Day brings veterans home

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Words of tribute to the war heroes of Cohasset rang out through the town Monday as the traditions of Memorial Day were carefully observed by a grateful community.

Not one member of the community died in the war in the Persian Gulf. Most of those who served in the war are now safe at home.

Seven of the men from Desert Storm stood with the group of about 100 veterans who marched to commemorate the community's fallen war heroes.

The marching veterans of the Persian Gulf included the three Curran brothers just reunited after serving in the combat zone. The Desert Storm veterans in the line of march were: Army PFC. Brian Curran, Marine Cpl. Daniel Curran, Army 2nd Lt. Timothy Curran, Army PFC. Glenn Dukes, A1C Garrett Hunt, Marine Cpl. Gary Parziale and AD2 Gordon Ricketts.

One veteran who left active duty only a week before the war broke out marched on crutches with his foot in a cast. The hobbling veteran, Mike Mahoney, left the service as a staff sergeant due to his injured foot.

The ceremonies began shortly after 8 a.m. as the

The 1058th returns safely

They say war is hell; for the Hingham-based 1058th transportation unit coming home was no picnic either.

The 137-member division of the Massachusetts National Guard had to endure a 24-hour plane ride and a 10-hour bus trip to get back home.

The grueling ride wasn't evident on the faces of the returning soldiers, who looked proud, happy, and relieved the war was finally over for them.

On May 28, at approximately 4:30 p.m. (11 p.m. Saudi time) months of rumor, speculation and dashed hopes were left behind the unit as it rolled into Fort Devens in Ayer.

The unit was activated in September 1990 and deployed in November. It was one of the first units to arrive in Saudi Arabia (landing well before the start of the war); it is one of the last to leave.

A crowd of family and friends stood along the tree-lined hills of the base for nearly four hours in the blazing sun, to welcome the unit home. They sang songs, held banners, waved flags, and shed tears.

Capt. Tammy Miracle, a spokesman for the National Guard, said she first heard the unit was homeward bound over the weekend from Diane St. Laurent, the moving force behind the 1058 support group.

"The families usually knew things before we did," she said.

The unit flew out of Dharan, Saudi Arabia aboard a commercial Pan American flight.

They arrived in Philadelphia on Memorial Day, grabbed a nights sleep, and boarded a bus at 6 a.m. Tuesday morning for the trip home.

Renaissance pumps up the Village

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The town's new water pump, complete with granite trough and fresh running water, was primed Saturday morning in Cohasset Village during a simple dedication ceremony.

The number of volunteers and donors involved in the project is long and complicated. The project is the cornerstone of the Village Renaissance. The whole idea was to make the downtown a more attractive place.

The pump itself is made of cedar. It is a replica of the old town pump that served the town from the 1800s until 1928. The new pump taps into the town water supply. But the water will be shut off, from time to time, and the actual flow will probably be similar to a trickle.

"Yes, it's drinkable," explained Jacqueline Dormitzer, one of the three women who coordinated the project, as children played with the device after the ceremony.

The pump has already been attracting the attention of local children. There is no barrier around it because it was made to be used.

Hunt returns from work

AIC Garrett Hunt, son of Brian and Jackie Noonan, returned to Barksdale Air Force Base in Louisiana on May 9 after serving nine months in Saudi Arabia and Spain.

He arrived home to Cohasset on Thursday, May 23 for a 12 day leave.

Senior Center celebrates fifth year of service

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The town senior center celebrated its fifth anniversary with a gala party and a promise of new space in the Community Center's planned addition.

Glenn Pratt, president of the Community Center, discussed the addition as he congratulated the seniors at a luncheon May 21 in the gymnasium of the CCC. The senior center rents office space in the front of the building at 3 North Main Street.

Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, sat through the two-hour-plus lunch, offering a few jokes and a bit of praise.

Gerard Keating, master of ceremonies, told anecdotes in between his introductions. He told the group to feel proud of the work they had accomplished in the override election. The dignitaries if the lengthy head table gave the crowd brief speeches filled with good wishes.

Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts, himself a card-carrying senior, pointed out his age (he's 65) to the gathering.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray didn't make it to the luncheon since the House was in session that day, working on the budget.

Sen. Hedlund mentioned that he wasn't delighted that his own legislative body was not working that day.

Kathy Bryanton, the first and only director of the center, pointed out the large number of programs available to the town's older citizens.

Over the course of the afternoon everyone was introduced. The Council on Aging Board of Directors include: Keating, Sumner Smith Jr., Anna Abbruzzese, Margaret Casey, Joseph Buckley, David Chittim, Rose Kierce, Lillian Lincoln and Edward Mulvey.

Arne Gjesteby, chairman of the advisory board, was seated at the head table, as was his wife, Selectman Martha Gjesteby.

The town's executive secretary Gregory Doyon was there, as was Selectman Jane Goedecke.

More than 100 seniors enjoyed a lunch at the Community Center May 21 as they celebrated the fifth anniversary of the town's senior center. (John Stobierski staff photo)

The invocation was given by the Rev. Edward Atkinson, pastor of First Parish Church. Classes normally held in the gym were moved to the parish house of his church for the day.

Mary Brennock and some of her friends performed for the gathering. The Massasoit Community Orchestra played under the direction of Kelley Lynch.

David Chittim offered a toast.

The anniversary cake was created by Mary Brennock and other donations filled a full page in the program.

Planning the SSAC Art Festival/Harborfest Parade are, left to right, Arthur Lehr, Merle Brown, and Keith Knowles of Cohasset, and Meg Robbins and Fred Hills of Hingham. The Art Festival/Harborfest Weekend runs June 21 to 23 with the parade scheduled for Sunday, June 23 at 2:30 p.m. Bands, floats, firetrucks, antique vehicles and marchers will carry a hometown theme from the Cohasset Harbor to Cohasset Common. Local groups and individuals wishing to join in are invited to call Keith Knowles at 383-1331. Sponsors of the event are the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, Cohasset Community Center, Cohasset Rotary, and Cohasset Boy Scouts.

❑ By now everyone must have seen the Town Pump replica that stands outside the Cohasset Hardware Store. If by some chance you haven't made the trip, it is wonderful. We all owe a debt of thanks to Kevin and Ray Sargent, the masons, to Phyllis and Don Leslie whose handsome gift launched the project, to the Robert Johnston family who donated the trough, to the Louis Watson family and the Cohasset Police Association who donated the cast stone planters, and to Tina Watson for planting those same planters with very pretty flowers; and, finally, to all the many generous donors and volunteers who made it possible. Thank you all for beautifying our town, it will draw people from miles around and help people to think to shop Cohasset.

❑ Congratulations go to Sydney Johnston this week. Sydney recently took part in Derby Academy's Field Day and she ended up winning five awards. That's a lot folks. Sydney is on the Topper Team, and is in the fifth grade at Derby Academy.

❑ Here's hoping that Randy Salvador is feeling much better as he reads this. Randy was in a dirt-bike mishap recently, word has it that he is improving every day.

❑ Saw Ralph Perroncello recently, and he has some good news to report. Ralph said that he called Gerry Studds to tell him that there was need of a new flag for the newly renovated Veterans Memorial Park. A few days later a U.P.S. truck left a bundle at his door, containing an American flag and a P.O.W.-M.I.A. flag. The American flag is one of those that flew over the Capitol Building. What an exciting thing for the VFW Post 9146 and our town. A special thanks goes to you Ralph, and to Studds.

❑ The next Cohasset Community Red Cross Blood Drive will be held on Tuesday, June 4 from 2 to 7 p.m. at the Unitarian First Parish House, 23 North Main Street (on the Common). Congratulations to all who made the January blood drive an overwhelming success. The record setting 152 donors carried them far past the goal of 100 pints. Please join on June 4 and share the most precious gift, the Gift of Life.

Previous donors will be contacted by one of the group promoters listed, and new donors can contact one of these or co-chairpersons Shirley and Jack Cibelli at 383-2974. The group promoters areas follows: Unitarian First Parish, Susan Grant; Glastonbury Abbey, Charles Mundhenk; Legion Post, Steve Wigmore; Masons, Donald Harrold; Rotary, Wayne Robbins; School teachers, Gail Seavey; St. Anthony's, Carol Riley; St. Stephen's, Karen Gammon; Second Congregational, Vi Tuthill; Webb-Norfolk, Peg Faletra; and Independent, Mary Brennock. All persons in good health, age 17 or older, weighing at least 110 pounds are invited to donate. Babysitting and transportation are available.

❑ Betsy Connolly reports that her class at the Foster School had a super afternoon recently. Betsy teaches a class of gifted and talented children, and they spent the afternoon with Liz Walker and Channel 4, which was taped for airing. It was run recently, and will be part of a special that will be aired next month. This class gets around, they also spent time with Gov. William Weld and Rep. Mary Jeannette Murray.

❑ The Friends of Lillard and Milliken Fields are holding a unique fundraiser, one that everyone benefits from.

For $25 you can join the South Shore Dinner Club, which entitles you to buy one dinner, get one free at several local restaurants. This is good all week long, and $10 of the ticket price goes to the Friends of Lillard and Milliken Fields. Since the use of these fields has more than tripled, there is a real need to renovate and increase the field space. You can help do this and, at the same time, save yourself a substantial sum of money as you dine out over the next 12 months. For a form see a member of the Cohasset Soccer Club.

❑ Finally, speaking of donations, don't forget to use the form mailed to every household recently and mail a check to the Sandy Beach Association. Anyone who has seen the beach knows that there is a lot of work to be done (it will soon lose its name of Sandy Beach, there is very little sand left). Do it now.

❑ That's the news from here for the week, please call me with your family news.

Renaissance pumps up . . .

The sidewalk at South Main and Elm streets has been paved with cobblestones for an old-fashioned effect. Two planters decorate the corner. And old photos are hanging in the window of Cohasset Hardware to demonstrate the history of it all.

Dormitzer worked to make sure all the donors were thanked. Phylis Leslie, who was the first benefactor of the project, cut the ribbon to release the pump. But it was Noel Ripley's pony that was brought to the pump for the first official "drink."

Ripley was the idea man behind the project.

Incidentally, the pony dipped his head into the trough several times but not for a drink of water. No one wanted to take a chance on the whim of the pony so some oats — or whatever ponies eat — were tucked in a bowl inside the trough.

Two students from Cohasset High, Julie Quemere and Cecilia Candia, played soft music in the background of the festivities. Doughnut holes and other treats were served to the crowd after dedication as one child after another took a turn pumping and soaking.

Serving as project coordinators, along with Dormitzer, were Beth Christoffel and Ann Whelan.

The list of donors and volunteers includes:

Ralph Dormitzer, who engineered the works; Wayne Simpson, the Norfolk County engineer who designed the road changes; Harold Litchfield and the town highway department for carrying out the sidewalk and road site preparation; JoAl and Joy Rosano, who served as consultants and found many of the other donors; Benjamin Blake, an architect who did the initial drawings; James Sandell, the architect who did the final drawings; Robert Leonard Jr. and Carl Sesisto, who did the plumbing; Joe Hamilton, water superintendent, who supervised; the Louis Watson family and Cohasset Police Association for donating the planters, Tina Watson, who cared for the actual plantings; Charles Butman Jr. who carved the wooden pump cover; the Robert Johnston family for the granite round; Kevin and Raymond Sargent who laid the masonry work; Frank Williams and Evelyn Pearson who donated cobblestone; Frank Smith and Thomas Hamilton, who donated bricks; Cohasset Savings Bank, the Bank of Boston and Pilgrim Cooperative, for donations of cash, and David Foley for financial advice.

Donald and Phyllis Leslie enjoy the first water from the replica of the old town pump. It was a gift of Phyllis Leslie, in honor of her husband, Donald, that paid for most of the materials needed for the project.

The 1058th returns safely

By Tuesday afternoon, more than 200 people were gathered at the base to welcome the unit home.

The anxious crowd had a false start when a nearby fire truck, was mistaken as the unit's escort.

Hundreds of people grabbed their flags and banners and began cheering, only to discover it was a real fire truck on its way to a real fire.

The groan was deafening.

A short time later, the crowd's patience was rewarded, and the unit rolled down the access road.

Rita and Joseph Souza, the parents of Capt. Nancy Souza, the unit's commander, were greeted their only daughter as she disembarked the bus.

They said they were not sure if the unit was coming home until that morning.

"We (heard they were coming back) on Saturday but we didn't have any details," Souza said. "We've been all pins and needles. It has been a long separation and we want her back."

She said Nancy was able to write and call home on a regular basis. She said at least once a week she would call St. Laurent with the latest news from the troop.

She said her daughter's letters were always written in an optimistic tone.

"With Nancy it was always don't worry I will be fine," she said.

She said the support group encouraged her to put the same upbeat tone into her letters.

"This Hingham support group has been so good," she said. "They were telling me, 'I know you are upset but you should put your feelings into writing happy, supportive letters.' "

Souza said she was proud to hear glowing reports about her daughter's leadership.

"We have heard such wonderful comments and remarks about her, and I really believe they were sincere," she said.

"We shall never roam, 'cause there's no place like home.
First in first out??"
—Seen on a banner welcoming Sgt. Larry McInniss of Weymouth back home

Capt. Souza, who turns 35-years-old today (May 30), has been in the military for seven years. Last year she went to Turkey to train for her captains bars.

Operation Desert Storm was her first assignment as a commander.

"She is a person with a lot of responsibility, she knows what she wants," said her father.

Souza said her daughter's unit spent at least 10 weeks inside Iraq, no more than 60 miles from Baghdad.

She said she was not surprised it took so long to get the unit home and called it "typical" for a transportation company.

"We knew they would be there longer," she said. "They had to get everything out that they put in."

Souza said her daughter has a big surprise waiting for her when she gets home—a new house.

She said Nancy and her roommate Rose Winsper have been planning to have a house built.

While Nancy was away, Winsper went ahead and had the South Dartmouth home constructed.

Souza said that Nancy's missed Christmas presents will now be housewarming gifts.

Larry St. Laurent said it was good to be home.

"I feel real good," he said. "It's nice to be in a country where people can dress the way they want...and where people can act like humans."

Dino Pizzelli, whose father is a Sergeant in the Hingham Police Department, said he was ready to return to a normal life.

"I've missed my mom's pasta," he said.

Pizzelli said he didn't mind the rough trip back, because it was worth it to be back home.

"It wasn"t bad at all," he said, while tying his dogtags around his niece Erica's neck. "It was easy."

Maj. Gen. Wayne Wagner, the adjutant general of the Massachusetts National Guard welcomed the returning soldiers with a brief message.

"I want to say how happy I am to see all the members of the 1058th back," he said.

"I don't think you are any happier to have them back then they are to be back," he told the crowd.

"You are probably going to find it harder to deal with (your families) than Saddam Hussein," he joked to the unit.

St. Laurent presented Souza with a bouquet of flowers and a fist full of "car wash money."

"I want to thank you personally for bringing each and everyone of them home safely," she said.

Souza said the unit's duty in Iraq went very well.

She said it was unfortunate that the unit lost contact with home for several weeks.

For 10 weeks families feared the worst when all contact and communication with the unit suddenly stopped.

Souza said the unit was in no danger; it was merely in a remote part of the country that was ill-equipped.

"The rest of the world was lost, we were fine," she said.

Souza said the unit was back in Saudi Arabia by the end of March.

"Some nice lobsters and steamers is what I'm looking forward to," she answered when asked about her immediate plans.

Food was a common denominator among the returning unit, which has lived on army-issue "meals ready to eat (MREs)" for the past few months.

Requests for Chinese food, pasta, seafood, and beer (which is illegal in Muslim countries) were at the tip of nearly every tongue.

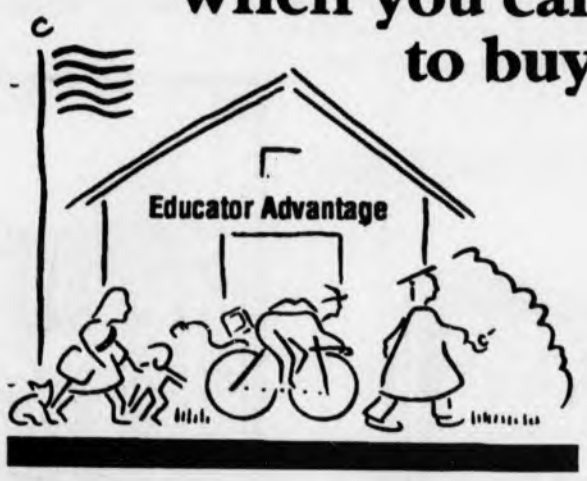
After a cookout, the unit was allowed to spend some free time with their families.

Over the next few days the unit will be debriefed and then allowed to re-enter civilian life.

Trip to Spain planned

The school committee at its May 20 meeting gave approval to a regional foreign exchange program involving students from France, Hull, Scituate and Cohasset.

Originally there was a plan to conduct an exchange with a town in Spain. That plan was dropped due to the small number of students interested in the trip.



The trip to France will cost about $850 and cover all expenses for a three week stay. Host homes are being sought in town for the fall.

editorial

Our veterans rate admiration

While Congress and the Defense Department continue to tally up the cost of the Persian Gulf War — a sum that may turn out to be more than the cost of the savings & loan bailout — we focus our attention on the return of the troops.

This week the 1058th Transportation Company returned home after seven months abroad. The return of the National Guard unit based in neighboring Hingham is cause for celebration. The group is now stationed at Fort Devens, waiting for final release. Some of the 1058th are men our town calls its own.

Other members of the military have made it back home from the front lines. Some of those young men marched with the veterans on Memorial Day.

But they aren't all coming home overnight, and some of them aren't coming home at all.

According to Defense Department statistics, fewer than 300 were killed in action during Operation Desert Storm or during training in Operation Desert Shield or during post-war. Six hundred were wounded.

Even one death is tragic. Our small town was fortunate to escape counting the death toll.

Our traditional Memorial Day parade and ceremony drew the largest crowd in recent years. The crowd was a happy one. The solemn day added no new names to the town's war dead. The groundswell of patriotism contrasts sharply with the tribute offered veterans of the Vietnam War. We offer our own words to praise the work of all the veterans from our town who have died in service of our country. It's small compensation.

Today, as many of us are basking in the euphoria of an incredible display of power and might, most of the media have turned their attention away from the Middle East to other skirmishes, whether it be in eastern Europe or on the streets of a nearby community.

There's an incredible amount wrong with the world — globally, nationally, statewide, locally.

But one thing that has occurred as a result of the allied success in the Gulf is the new respect that is being bestowed to all veterans.

We hope this translates into the federal budget. We hope the men and women who were called to serve in the Gulf War will receive suitable compensation from the country they went to war for.

The United States has 27 million veterans today, according to Secretary of Veterans Affairs Edward J. Derwinski, who is the first individual to serve in this new cabinet level post.

There is one Spanish American War veteran, 75,000 World War I veterans, 9 million veterans of World War II (more than 60 million men and women served during that war), about 5 million veterans from the Korean War and 8.5 million veterans from Vietnam.

Whether we realized it or not, Veterans Affairs has a $33 billion budget, second only to the Pentagon.

And budgetwise, he says, the department has not been keeping up with inflation.

It employs 250,000 men and women and operates 173 hospitals throughout the country and territories of the United States. The first veterans' hospital was built 130 years ago, just after the Civil War.

There are three basic services provided to veterans — to those who have sustained a service-connected disability, those who are living on less than $17,000 annually (which would include those individuals who receive only Social Security benefits) and to those who are aging.

Derwinski points out that the Persian Gulf War has not added much of a financial burden to the Veterans Affairs budget.

There are 800,000 men and women who served in Desert Storm but all but the 150,000 National Guardsmen and Reservists were, for all practical purposes, considered to be veterans already.

We echo his statements and urge support for all our veterans.

We welcome back the men and women of our nation's most recent conflict. We appreciate their sacrifices. We value their experience. We hope they will find a simple way to pick up the threads of their lives and move on.

We hope they — and the veterans who have gone before them — continue to receive public respect.

Arts Boosters celebrate Arts Recognition Night

(The following letter was sent to the Mariner for publication.)

To: Jack Buckley, Maureen Duffy, Ron Emmons, Colleen Foley, Tom Hughes, Colleen Lucas, Bryan Marks, Susan McFadd, John Packard, Jo-Ellen Wood:

At our sixth annual Arts Recognition Night, the Cohasset Arts Boosters Club honors all students who have contributed to the arts at Cohasset High School in this most creative year. At the same time, the parents and students recognize that behind every student stands a teacher who inspires and encourages them. Tonight we also honor you, Cohasset High School teachers of the arts.

The Drama Workshop produced an extraordinary "Godspell," with a female Jesus, under the direction of Ron Emmons, with assistance from Colleen Lucas, Colleen Foley, and Sharon Weber. For the 10th year, Cohasset advanced to the finals in the State Drama Festival. This year's play, "Of Widows and Vegetables," brought state ensemble and individual performance awards to several cast members. Their outstanding spring production of "Lovers/Winners," an Irish play, added international flavor.

Persuading teenagers to perform in public, especially solo, is in itself an art form, and what performances we've had! At the Valentine Cabaret and Art Auction, at Christmas and Spring concerts, at the Pops, at SEMSBA and District finals, at the Big Apple Music Festival in New York City, with first place honors for the Swing Choir, Bryan Marks and Colleen Foley led Cohasset musicians, with amazing grace, in everything from modern jazz to barbershop, highlighted by original student pieces. Promoting international arts at the Pops, Bryan Marks accompanied "Farmer in the Dell" in Portugese, Finnish, and Japanese, delightfully sung by our foreign students. Each year our teachers create new programs, and we commend Colleen Foley on her innovative Scituate-Cohasset Wind Ensemble.

In the creative recesses of John Packard's A-V studio, students produced the local hit show, "Video Time," as well as films for cable TV, on Surrealist and Contemporary art and music, band and art major research projects, History of Art and Music projects inspired by Picasso and Stravinsky, and sound sculpture.

In Whispers and Shadows, the Literary and Arts magazine, the sensitivity and creative inspiration of its advisers Jo-Ellen Wood and Colleen Lucas is revealed in the drawings, poetry, and short stories of over 50 artists and writers. Tonight each family should receive a copy of this first-rate work.

Throughout the year, our petite but most energetic muse, Colleen Lucas, has carried her students' art work, for shows and competitions, to the far corners of the Boston area. Closer to home, she has enlivened the school walls with her students' colorful murals and art exhibits. Please admire the Portugese castle and Japanese Buddhist temple, as well as the fanciful underwater world in the senior girls' powder room. In addition, Colleen organized the collaborative talents of nine middle school art teachers, including an outstanding exhibit of their students' work at the South Shore Art Center.

At the Evening of Living Arts, parents and students toured all areas of the arts. Jack Buckley's Alternative School students were restoring an antique surfboat from the Hull Marine Lifesaving Museum. Visitors enjoyed Italian delicacies from Maureen Duffy's Home Economics students and the skillful creations of Tom Hughes' Industrial Arts students. Visitors to Susan McFadd's library learned innovative laser disc technology and viewed our new Hypermedia station, which links textual material to image, sound, graphics and animation.

As Cohasset High School enters the last decade of the 20th century, its teachers of the arts have truly embraced a philosophy of education that professes the value of all areas of intelligence and performance skills. Believing that all students are gifted, Jack Buckley, Maureen Duffy, Ron Emmons, Colleen Foley, Tom Hughes, Colleen Lucas, Bryan Marks, Susan McFadd, John Packard, and Jo-Ellen Wood have inspired over 250 students in independent, cooperative, and interdisciplinary artistic achievements. Significantly, many more students were involved as an audience, learning about the arts. Cohasset is very fortunate to have such talented and dedicated teachers. As parents and students, we thank you and we celebrate with you your success.

With gratitude and affection,
Cohasset Arts Boosters Club

The Class of 1991 enjoyed their prom aboard a Boston Harbor cruise ship.

Do you still have your old Omega's?

commentary

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Hey, class of 1991 — wake up! It's time to look sparky. Time to attend to the future. Time to get in step for graduation ceremonies this Sunday!

I'm reading my old (and now only) copy of "The Omega" (Volume 1 - the only one) which you produced in 1985 when you were graduating from 6th grade. For about 6 delicious weeks I had a whole lot of fun helping you to produce it ... the strange little newspaper you decided to call "The End." Because I suppose you were all anxious to get on with your lives and move along to the high school. You always were in a hurry, class of 1991. Well, maybe not all of you.

The staff of "The Omega" elected Krissy Martin general managing editor of the newspaper because there were more girls than boys. And after we really started writing, I'll always remember the day Krissy sounded just like every editor when a writer came up to her and asked her one too many questions: "Just write it; don't talk about it. Put it on paper!" After only two weeks of dealing with writers who all talk too much and who have all talked too much for centuries, this impressed me.

Mary Hurley walked in with a hot 6th grade graduation day story which didn't tell us the date, time, etc. of graduation. She said Mr. Ekberg, the main source, hadn't told her any of this. She was told to pin Ken down. She came back a second, then a third time saying "Mr. Ekberg doesn't exactly know." When she told him "The Omega" was going to press the following day, he came up with a date. After all these years, I'm only now realizing she never did get the time ceremonies would start. Mary Hurley told us: "The band and chorus will sing and play. The sixth graders will miss the Deer Hill School but will happily go up to the Junior High School!"

Jen Plante wrote the feature story entitled "Mrs. Magoun goes to the Moon," having been sent there by the 6th grade class. A cute story and a riot of a picture. I forget who drew the picture, Jen. Was it you? Will someone call and tell me?

Mike Cisneros wrote a feature piece for the paper, and helped immensely with ads. Some of the nicest people advertised (I made them). Martha and Arne Gjesteby tried to sell their 1982 Mazda ($5,000 or best offer) through "The Omega;" Arne said the ad price was just too good to pass by. Must ask him if he ever sold his car.

Chris Bartow (class of 1992): "Small grass lots wanted to mow." Peter Kasperowicz (class of '88) tried to slip in an ad to sell all of his old 7th and 8th grade research papers, but Mrs. Wondolowski refused the ad. So he put in a Spiderman ad which said at the very end, in cartoon form: "You are America's future ... don't goof up."

Sue Jackson advertised swimming lessons, in a private pool. "The Doherty Sister Sitters" (Alison 11 and Heather 14) told people to call between 6 and 8 and to keep trying! In those days three sisters shared the phone and it was impossible to call the Doherty's. Jacob Powell did the masthead and a neat cartoon ... "Super Student." Noel Roma wrote a poem called "Write a poem," everyone was very metamorphose in those days.

Always especially enjoyed this bit of news from Nicole Greco's "Around Deer Hill" column: Michael Cisneros came in 23rd in a field of 75, in the Patriot Ledger spelling bee ... he was stumped on the word noisette, which is a kind of lamb. Kris Martin said — "You'll probably never have to spell that word again, Mike."

But today I want to tell you what life is really about. It's a personal adventure in serendipity. the word, serendipity, is from a fairy tale called 'The Three Princes of Serndip.' The princes were always making accidental discoveries of things they were not seeking. All of the adult word is designed for serendipitious adventure.

And of course I'll remember a lot of other stuff about you people ... the time Tad K. came home, really angry, and told me how "Ken" (not to his face) kicked him off the soccer team. Then he told me the word he had said, and I didn't blame Mr. Ekberg at all.

Hey, Bart Weisenfluh ... you've come a long way since you and Tad were burning ants in my backyard. I screamed and you two laughed and laughed. I suppose you knew something I didn't.

Who will call me next September, ask if they can come to dinner, and then tell me what time they'd like to eat? Not Joshua Stevenson, he'll beat George Washington University in D.C. Josh has modeled himself after Ferris Bueller. Or else they made the movie about Josh.

Matt Corbett, Cinnamon (I love this name) Jones, Barb Lagrotteria, Linc Marsac, Tara Volungis, Caleb Slotnick ... I'm going to miss seeing you, hearing about you ('cause the stories do dry up after you go away ... I've learned that they do. From now on we're going to know only what you wish us to know.)

Now, I'm looking way, way back ... back to the Community Center Nursery School, back to little Alison Doherty who was graduating. She told the entire South Shore she wanted to be a giraffe. Now, that was a really funny thing to want to be, and through the years all of the Class of '91 has wanted to be funny things.

But today I want to tell you what life is really about. It's a personal adventure in serendipity. the word, serendipity, is from a fairy tale called "The Three Princes of Serndip." The princes were always making accidental discoveries of things they were not seeking. All of the adult word is designed for serendipitious adventure. All of you will experience it, some of you more than others. Barbara Lag, Patty Tolini and Josh Stevenson will experience it more than others. Niffy Jackson will swim away, chuckling. Tara Volungis will think it's good fun. And years from now, I hope one of you will come to your twenty-fifth with this yellowed scrap of paper, and I hope it will help you to remember the days when the moon dropped in the water, and you picked it up.

And everyone who saw you stopped and cried.

Because you were so beautiful.

Hospice offers great natural support with a fitting end

By Denise Falbo
Mariner staff

Most of us stop thinking and talking about death once we pass the age when metaphysical discussions hold our interest.

Certainly by the time we are 25 or so, well embarked on the business of earning a living and possibly starting families, we are more concerned with beginnings than endings.

In part, this is a natural focus. But it is also a reflection of our culture, which tends to ignore, bury and deny the unavoidable fact that all life ends.

It's a task that requires courage and an immense amount of energy, but hospice workers are here to help give the patient and family the support they need to face the reality of death and bereavement. No one should be afraid to call for their help.

Our fear of facing the fact of death is expressed in the exaggerated health claims made for a succession of miracle diets and exercise plans that promise to keep us healthier longer and longer.

A whole generation clings to these promises as if they will keep at bay the essential uncertainties of life, which are capped by the great certainty of death.

The truth is, all the oat bran and exercise in the world can't keep us so healthy that we live forever.

We have called on the medical profession to take over the natural processes that inaugurate and close our lives.

In the United Sates, as in few other countries in the world, the majority of births and deaths now take place in hospitals. Even here, this is a new phenomenon, begun after World War II.

The hospice movement, like the homebirth movement, seeks to reclaim a natural process from the medical profession, which is reluctant to give up jurisdiction over terminal patients and birthing women.

But once it is clear that medicine can only torture a dying man or woman, that patient needs spiritual and emotional support more than anything else.

Hospice philosophy says that the best place to die is at home, among loved ones, not in the hospital among strangers.

Freedom from physical pain is what doctors can still give to the patient at home. Everything else must come from people who care for the patient on a deeper level.

Cranberry Hospice, Old Colony Hospice, Hospice of the South Shore and others are helping families to fill those needs with a team of doctors, nurses, volunteers, social workers and specialized therapists.

They are a valuable resource for anyone who faces the death of a loved one. It's a task that requires courage and an immense amount of energy, but hospice workers are here to help give the patient and family the support they need to face the reality of death and bereavement.

No one should be afraid to call for their help.

Denise Falbo is assistant editor of the Randolph Mariner.

Forum attendance backed

To the Editor:

The proposed 27.5 acre expansion of the Cohasset Heights Landfill presents a potential threat to the further prosperity of Cohasset. All residents of Cohasset should be aware of this landfill expansion proposal.

The Cohasset group, S.A.F.E., for Stop Any Further Expansion, is holding a public forum next week to discuss how landfills can adversely affect our homes and community. The forum, "Enough is Enough," will be held at the Unitarian Parish House Wednesday, June 5, from 8 to 9:30 p.m.

I urge all Cohasset residents to attend this forum.

Sincerely,
John K. McNabb, Jr.

A Third place went to Brendon Cebulaki of Hingham.

scouting news

The Scouting program provides many opportunities to learn skills and to use them. Recently, Troop 28 of Cohasset attended a two day SCUBA orientation program at the McMullan Pool in Norwell. This program was sponsored by the Pro Divers a USA Dive Shop of Braintree.

First of all, SCUBA is defined as Self Contained Underwater Breathing Apparatus. Mike Dyson, assisted by Steve Weydt, the instructors, donated their time for this instructional weekend for our Boy Scouts.

On Saturday, the Scouts participated in water safety and swim practice. The SCUBA orientation followed on Sunday. The Scouts learned to use a snorkel underwater, learned how to surface dive, how to use SCUBA gear, how to inflate and deflate diving vests and how to use a regulator on the air-compressed tanks. A great experience was had by all.

Any boys interested in scouting are welcome to attend one of the meetings. The Scouts meet on Monday nights at the Joseph Osgood School from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Howie Montenko, Scoutmaster, may be reached at 545-0127 for further information.

recreation report

The South Shore Baseball Club of Hingham will conduct a one-week instructional baseball camp under the auspices of the Cohasset Recreation Commission, from June 24 to June 28, at Miliken Field in Cohasset. Registration for the five-day program is $100 per person.

"This is a great opportunity for youngsters to receive high-level baseball instruction right in their own back yards," according to Jack Worley, director of Cohasset's Recreation Commission, who feels the SSBC camp "offers a realistic alternative to residential programs at considerably less money."

This is the second year that the South Shore Baseball Club has conducted the Cohasset summer baseball program, which is open to boys and girls 6 to 18 years.

Daily sessions will be held Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., rain or shine. Youngsters will be divided for instructional purposes according to age, size, and ability. Instruction by SSBC's staff of coaches will include daily batting and fielding practice and demonstrations, lectures on baseball theory and techniques, and inter-club games. There will also be appearances by Pawtucket Red Sox players as their schedules permit.

The South Shore Baseball Club has a staff of full-time coaches headed by Frank Niles, a former Boston College, Northeastern, and Suffolk University coach, as well as a Division I "Coach of the Year" at Weymouth South High. Vin Hillyer, a former Greater Boston MVP and an All America player at Brandeis, heads the staff of pitching instructors, and Chris Patsos, a former collegiate All America at Florida Southern College and coach of the SSBC team in the Cranberry Baseball League, is the catching coach. Other instructors include Dan McHugh, a former All New England standout at Bridgewater State, and Kevin Greer, a former collegiate All America pitcher at Westfield State.

A $50 deposit is required by June 14.

DOG OBEDIENCE CLASSES

The Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for Beginner and Intermediate Dog Training Classes to be taught by Laurie Cleveland. Classes will be held Wednesday Evenings on the Town Common, Cohasset, starting Wednesday, June 5. Beginner classes will be from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., and the Intermediate-Advanced class will be from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. The fee for the eight week program will be $40. Checks made payable to the Town of Cohasset may be brought to the first class. Participating dogs should be a minimum of three months of age. The purpose of the Beginner classes will be to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered are proper use of voice corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc. Helpful hints on ownership and responsibility will also be included. The training will include those exercises beneficial to pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dogs in obedience. The Intermediate-Advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the Recreation Department Beginner Class. For the above classes, owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding 4 inches. Absolutely no spike collars allowed. It is also suggested that the handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for this session. For all classes: the fee is $40 per dog for the eight week, one hour per week program.

SUMMER SPORTS CAMPS

The Recreation Department will offer a variety of Summer Sports Camps for ages 4 to 18 years. Included will be four soccer camp programs conducted by South Shore Soccer Camp and V.I.P. Soccer Camps, for children/youth ages 4 to 18. Also, Basketball, Lacrosse, Mini-camp Football and Pro-play, a movement exploration camp for children age 4 to 7 years will be offered. Registrations for both Soccer programs and Baseball and Softball Camps are currently being accepted. Brochures/registration forms, are available at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, 1st floor, Town Hall.

Further details and or registrations may be obtained at the Recreation Office. Soccer Camp programs are as follows:

V.I.P. Soccer- ages 4 and 5, week of July 29, Monday to Friday 8 to 9:30 a.m. Cost $40, $15 deposit required.

V.I.P. Soccer - ages 6 and 7, week of July 29, Monday to Friday 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Cost $70, $25 deposit required.

South Shore Soccer Camp - Boys, ages 8 to 18, Week of August 5. Monday to Friday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Miliken Field. Cost $159. Team rates available.

South Shore Soccer Camp - Girls, ages 8 to 18, Week of August 12. Monday to Friday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Miliken Field. Cost $159. Team rates available.

Checks are payable to "Town of Cohasset." For all camps there will be discounts offered to additional children registering.

Because of both available facilities and staffing, Soccer, Baseball and Softball Camps will be able to accept a limited number of participants. As with all Recreation Commission programs, should fees cause financial impossibility of participation, contact Jack Worley at the Recreation office (383-6791), or any member of the Cohasset Recreation Commission. Members are: Richard P. Barrow, Chairman, Mary K. Muncey, Secretary, Terry E. Duggan, Shelanne S. Durkin, Stephen C. Endris, Donald E. Staszko, and Thomas Wigmore.

The general philosophy of the Recreation Commission is to ensure to our best ability, equal access and opportunity to leisure service for all residents at all times.

Basketball Camp will be directed by Arnie Repucci, Head Basketball Coach, Cohasset High School Boys' Varsity. Lacrosse will be directed by Dave Lewis, Weymouth Lacrosse and President of LAX USA. Mini-camp Football will be instructed by area coaches and players, and Pro-play comes to us from England the week of August 26. Unless otherwise indicated, all sports camps are five days in duration, meeting Monday to Friday.

The Cohasset Tree, Park and Cemetery Department under the direction of Peter Laugelle is thanked, as without the full support of Tree and Park programs of this nature could not be conducted each year. Due to the recent deregulation of Revolving Account Fund for 100% Self-supporting programs, through which the financial mechanism has been established for sports camps, each camp will contribute four percent of their gross revenue collected, to the general fund of the town. Programs can be offered at the "at service" cost and taxpayers will be compensated for use of public facilities and administrative operations.

Batting cage raffle

This year Cohasset Little League is pleased to announce its very special batting cage raffle. All raffle proceeds will go towards the purchase of a metal batting cage, which will offer years of service to the entire town.

Tickets are being sold at $100 each. The minimum prize is $1,000; the maximum prize is $5,000. The actual prize will be exactly one-half of ticket sales. No more than 100 tickets will be sold, so the odds of winning will never exceed 1 in 100. The drawing will be held on June 8, 1991, at the Little League Picnic. The last name drawn will be the winner.

If 100 tickets are sold, Prize = $5,000; Odds = 1 in 100.

If 50 tickets are sold, Prize = $2,500; Odds = 1 in 50.

If 20 tickets are sold, Prize = $1,000; Odds = 1 in 20.

Raffle tickets can be purchased through any Little League coach, or by mailing your name and address along with a check to Paul Rooney, Cohasset Little League Treasurer, P.O. Box 121, Cohasset, MA 02025.

League picnic June 8

The Little League Picnic is just one and a half weeks away. Mark your calendars for June 8 at 11:30 a.m. The picnic will be held at Barnes Little League Field on North Main St. In addition to hot dogs, burgers, and lemonade, there will be plenty of gate prizes, baseball trivia questions and of course the announcement of the batting cage raffle winner. This year the League will present its first annual Good Sport award to a player, aged 10-12, who best represents Little League's Good Sport criteria: one who helps others, tries hard, displays enthusiasm, sets a good example, plays fair, is a graceful loser, doesn't argue with umpires, is polite, does what is asked of him, and is a good team player.

After the fun and food, stick around for the major league all-star game. Representatives from each major league team, selected by their teammates, will play. For those who did not pay at the time of registration, the cost of the picnic is $5 per family.

Art festival offers old and new

This year's South Shore Art Center Art Festival is June 21 to 23.

As they've been doing every June for the past 36 years, artists and craft artisans from all over New England will exhibit in juried shows and an artisans market along Cohasset's grassy common.

The SSAC Art Festival is an opportunity for people to appreciate New England's diverse depth of artistic talent. It is also an opportune time for artists and artisans to sell their creative works. This year, the craft artisans market has been expanded to over 60 booths, all offering handmade treasures. Newly featured this year are bronze statues, Egyptian-painted papyrus, wood-turned inlaid bowls and vases, and glassblown creations. The market will also include hand-painted furniture, adult and children clothing, silk-screened tote bags, banners, woodcarved decoys, bonsai plants and more.

Children's drop-in workshops will be offered and several artists will present demonstrations in basket weaving, portraiture, pottery, monotype, and Chinese brush painting. An added attraction this year will be Virginia Avery's paint-along workshop. The public is invited to bring their paints and join her class on the Common Saturday morning at 11.

Many other new attractions will complement the traditional Art Festival in the form of a Harborfest. Sponsored by several local organizations to celebrate community spirit, Harborfest will join Art Festival activities on Saturday, June 22 and Sunday, June 23. Opening with a pancake breakfast Saturday morning, Harborfest will include fun at the harbor with water games and a parade of boats. The Blessing of the Lobster Fleet and a marching parade from the harbor to the Common are also scheduled as is a chowder contest.

For more information on SSAC Art Festival and Harborfest activities, call 383-9548.

Painters, take your watercolors on location with Virginia Avery, known for her famous "traveling" workshops. Enjoy summer's splendor while you capture the local scene in "Outdoor Watercolor Painting," June 18 to 20 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Cancer patients need drivers

An urgent appeal for volunteer drivers to take cancer patients in Quincy and Milton to hospitals for treatment or check-ups, has been issued by Frances Ryan, coordinator of the transportation service of the American Cancer Society in these communities.

"We have had an increase in requests and a cut-back in funds available to pay for transportation, so we've been hard-pressed to respond," Ryan says. "We hate to turn anyone down because many of the patients are required to go to hospitals daily over a period of 5-7 weeks and have no one to call on."

The South Shore Unit of the Cancer Society operates a "hot line", 698-2536, at the Milton Council on Aging, 44 Edgehill Road, Milton, Tuesday - Friday, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., handling requests and making assignments to the volunteers. Recently the service has averaged three requests a day and only a small pool of volunteer drivers.

Volunteers are asked to pledge one trip per month to area or Boston hospitals at a time convenient to them.

For further information, call the Council on Aging, 698-0100, Ext. 247; the "hotline", 698-2536; or the South Shore Unit office, 341-4210.

"Our volunteers find these simple missions of mercy very rewarding," Ryan says. "Many of these patients live alone, have no way to get to their appointments, and shower the drivers with thanks for the rides. We desperately need more volunteers."

Religious education begins

St. Anthony's CCD Registration for the fall classes will be June 1 and June 2 after all the Masses.

"The selectmen should vote unanimously to reject this request," said Alix White, President of SAFE. "The selectmen must take this vote immediately. There must not be any question that Cohasset does not want MWRA sludge, now or ever," said White.

Art festival offers old and new

This year's South Shore Art Center Art Festival is June 21 to 23.

As they've been doing every June for the past 36 years, artists and craft artisans from all over New England will exhibit in juried shows and an artisans market along Cohasset's grassy common.

The SSAC Art Festival is an opportunity for people to appreciate New England's diverse depth of artistic talent. It is also an opportune time for artists and artisans to sell their creative works. This year, the craft artisans market has been expanded to over 60 booths, all offering handmade treasures. Newly featured this year are bronze statues, Egyptian-painted papyrus, wood-turned inlaid bowls and vases, and glassblown creations. The market will also include hand-painted furniture, adult and children clothing, silk-screened tote bags, banners, woodcarved decoys, bonsai plants and more.

Children's drop-in workshops will be offered and several artists will present demonstrations in basket weaving, portraiture, pottery, monotype, and Chinese brush painting. An added attraction this year will be Virginia Avery's paint-along workshop. The public is invited to bring their paints and join her class on the Common Saturday morning at 11.

Many other new attractions will complement the traditional Art Festival in the form of a Harborfest. Sponsored by several local organizations to celebrate community spirit, Harborfest will join Art Festival activities on Saturday, June 22 and Sunday, June 23. Opening with a pancake breakfast Saturday morning, Harborfest will include fun at the harbor with water games and a parade of boats. The Blessing of the Lobster Fleet and a marching parade from the harbor to the Common are also scheduled as is a chowder contest.

For more information on SSAC Art Festival and Harborfest activities, call 383-9548.

June workshops at SSAC

From learning the basics of drawing to painting on location to going on an Art Safari, the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset has something for all. Registration is open for three adult workshops offered the week of June 18.

If you have always wanted to know how to draw, there's Helen Babis-Licare's "Drawing for the Absolute Beginner." Learn the elements, tools, and vocabulary of the visual arts while unlocking your creative potential June 18 to 21 from 9:30 a.m. to noon.

Painters, take your watercolors on location with Virginia Avery, known for her famous "traveling" workshops. Enjoy summer's splendor while you capture the local scene in "Outdoor Watercolor Painting," June 18 to 20 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Another outdoor experience, open to all level artists, is "Art Safari: Outdoor Drawing and Painting," June 18 to 21 from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Visit scenic seasides, rural sites and in-town locations to create "en plein air" land and seascapes under Ros Farbush's expert guidance.

Cancer patients need drivers

An urgent appeal for volunteer drivers to take cancer patients in Quincy and Milton to hospitals for treatment or check-ups, has been issued by Frances Ryan, coordinator of the transportation service of the American Cancer Society in these communities.

"We have had an increase in requests and a cut-back in funds available to pay for transportation, so we've been hard-pressed to respond," Ryan says. "We hate to turn anyone down because many of the patients are required to go to hospitals daily over a period of 5-7 weeks and have no one to call on."

The South Shore Unit of the Cancer Society operates a "hot line", 698-2536, at the Milton Council on Aging, 44 Edgehill Road, Milton, Tuesday - Friday, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., handling requests and making assignments to the volunteers. Recently the service has averaged three requests a day and only a small pool of volunteer drivers.

Volunteers are asked to pledge one trip per month to area or Boston hospitals at a time convenient to them.

For further information, call the Council on Aging, 698-0100, Ext. 247; the "hotline", 698-2536; or the South Shore Unit office, 341-4210.

"Our volunteers find these simple missions of mercy very rewarding," Ryan says. "Many of these patients live alone, have no way to get to their appointments, and shower the drivers with thanks for the rides. We desperately need more volunteers."

Religious education begins

St. Anthony's CCD Registration for the fall classes will be June 1 and June 2 after all the Masses.

Memorial Day brings veterans home

service organizations sent representatives to three of the town's cemeteries to lay wreaths and pay tribute to the dead. The process continued throughout the morning, closing with ceremonies at the Veterans Memorial by the Harbor.

The group began by touring cemeteries at North Cohasset, Beechwood and Woodside working with Stephen Wigmore, commander of the George Mealy American Legion Post and Ralph Perroncello, commander of the local chapter of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

A couple from France laid a wreath on the grave of Thomas Chuchill Jr. at Woodside. Churchill was credited with saving the lives of many in a small French village during World War II.

A bus was used to bring the group to the first few stops. The actual parade formed on Sohier Street with a cruiser leading the way. Wigmore and Perroncello led off the march.

Color guard units followed along. All the selectmen were included in the march but the three women on the board followed the line of veterans. State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, a Marine veteran of World War II, was in uniform but her injured ankle prevented her from marching.

At the cemetery at Joy Place, as well as at the other stops the Kevin Barry Irish American Pipers played "Amazing Grace."

The Rev. Edward Atkinson delivered a prayer at Joy Street.

At Cohasset Common, the Rev. Gary Ritts, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, asked for dedication to the cause of peace.

Flowers were cast into the harbor in memory of those lost at sea by a contingent of flower girls.

Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts, wearing his own service uniform from an earlier time in his life, read the names of the town's 17 soldiers, sailors, marines and air forcemen who served in the war to liberate Kuwait.

The reading drew loud applause from the crowd.

The names read by Tebbetts included the seven young men marching plus: David Cuddahy, Edward Guild, Prescott Hobson, Sgt. Laurence Hoogeveen, Arthur Howe, Scott Muir, Staff Sgt. James Smith, Daniel Sullivan, SSG Joseph Tolini and Capt. Stephen Winn.

Those names and the names of all other veterans from the community of all other wars will be inscribed on walls built at the Veterans Memorial, according to plans in the works of the veterans organizations.

The Rev. John Keohane of St. Anthony's Church offered a prayer of Thanksgiving as well as peace.

The Deer Hill Band played.

Lt. Col. Edward Graham Jr., US Army retired, who delivered the address three years ago was the speaker at the Veterans Memorial.

"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," Graham told the hundreds of onlookers.

He said he was reminded of the courage, skill and dedication American troops have always delivered. He spoke of the men and women who gave ultimate sacrifice for our country.

He pointed out that at the start of the Gulf War Iraq had the fourth largest army in the world and people said America had little stomach for war.

"When the war was over, Saddam's military was no longer a threat to the world and America had purged itself of the ghost of Vietnam," Graham said.

He pointed out that we had led 25 other countries in the war as 525,000 members of the military — including 30,000 women — fought to liberate Kuwait.

Graham said the official casualty count was 263.

While the number of American war dead is small, there were thousands of Iraqi casualties.

"I am reminded of the words over the portal of the Allied cementery in Burma," Graham said. "They gave their tomorrows that we might have today."

He reminded the audience of the sacrifices and valor of those who fought — or contributed — to other wars.

He asked that veterans be remembered, not slighted.

Steve Martin film could bring a house down

By Andrew MacLellan
Mariner correspondent

Once again it looks like Hollywood is paying a visit to share a piece of its tinsel town dream with the residents of Cohasset.

Tim Grafft and Michael Williams, location scouts for the Massachusetts Film Bureau (MFB) met with selectmen Monday to discuss their plans for filming another movie in Cohasset this summer.

Williams was location director for the Boston based television series "Spencer for Hire" and most recently worked in Rockport on Cher's film "Mermaids" and on Jodie Foster's directorial debut "Little Man Tate."

He anticipates shooting, which is scheduled to begin Aug. 20, will last for about 10 days in the town's business district and on the Common.

The film, entitled "Housesitter", will star Steve Martin and Meg Ryan. It's a romantic comedy contrasting a "small idyllic picture postcard town with the grey city (Boston)," said Williams.

"It's a small film," he said, "with little scenes of everyone knowing everyone's business."

Producer Bernie Williams and director Frank Oz, who worked together on the nation's number one hit "What About Bob" and collaborated on another Martin film "Dirty Rotten Scoundrels" will again team up for the project.

The film will be released by Imagine Pictures.

On a recent tour of Marblehead, Hingham and Cohasset, Oz, who is also the voice of muppet star Miss Piggy, was taken with the small coastal town and has

New elementary math curriculum leans toward manipulation

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

School Committee Monday endorsed a change in the way math is taught in the elementary school.

The change moves the students toward problem solving and away from rote learning.

More math manipulatives — devices that include simple old-fashioned items like beans in cups as well as pattern boards, tannagrams and various measuring instruments — will be obtained both for the Osgood and Deer Hill schools.

Next year every student in grade 4 will have his or her own calculator for use in the math program.

Students at the Deer Hill School will begin to use new math books, published by Addison Wesley. Deer Hill currently uses math workbooks by Houghton Mifflin.

Teachers at the Osgood School plan to continue experimenting with the two different math books with the idea of making a final choice next year. Houghton Mifflin is currently used.

But both schools will be purchasing new materials and teacher training will be worked into the coming year's program.

The cost of the program at Osgood will be $5,102.28. The money can be found in the budget or from PSO grants, according to Linda Whitney, Osgood principal.

Cost of the Deer Hill program will be roughly $15,000, with much of the money available through funds earmarked for replacing the older math workbooks. Ken Ekberg, Deer Hill principal, said grants from the PSO as well as gifts from the publishing company would be used to pay for the program.

Grads told Cooperation is the key

(Editor's Note: The following speech was delivered at CHS graduation June 2 at the Music Circus.)

By Christopher Ford
Vice Chairman of the School Committee

Before I begin my formal remarks today, I would like to announce that there are two other scholarship recipients besides those announced on Thursday night.

As some of you may be aware, the Mary E. Fleming scholarship was created two years ago by Mary Fleming in honor of her brother John. John and Mary along with her brother Edward owned and operated the Flemings hardware and gift shop in Cohasset Village for many years. Mary, in an act of love and admiration for her brother John, who is now confined to a hospital, established this scholarship fund to honor her brother

French exchange gets nod

A trip to France for high school students will include a wine-tasting session, according to the current plan.

Parental permission will be sought for the event.

School committee Monday gave approval to the actual plans for the program which is a regional exchange involving students from Scituate, Hull and Cohasset with a village 35 kilometers from Paris, Brie Compte-Robert.

This is the first regional exchange program.

About 80 French students are interested in making the trip. Five students from Cohasset have signed up, as have eight from Hull and 42 from Scituate.

The French students will come from Oct. 16 to Nov. 1. The students from this region will travel to France April 9 to 26, missing six days of school. Students going on the trip will be required to complete make-up work before leaving for France.

School committee also approved several other trips that have been offered in past years including the weekend at the Marist Camp for grade 9 students in September, an overnight trip for the development disabilities class and a trip next spring to Washington, D.C., for grades 8 and 9.

Contract talks continue

School committee met in closed session to discuss collective bargaining issues.

The teachers contract is in negotiation. They did not return to open session after the executive session.

Financial facts missing

As usual, the town's fiscal position was one of the topics discussed at school committee this week.

And as usual, there were no firm answers.

Meanwhile debate continues at the state level over the amount of local aid the town can expect.

One of the new curves in the action involves the MBTA assessment. School Supt. Steven Hart said he has been told the abatement of the MBTA assessment may not come through this year. That would mean an additional charge of $141,000 for the town. This money is not planned for in the current budget.

Hart said the latest figure he has heard for local aid involves a reduction of $297,000 for the town. The budget for the new fiscal year was developed with the expectation the reduction is state aid would be about $170,000.

School committee members have not yet decided whether they will seek another override if state aid falls below the figure used in budget projections.

"We want to be involved when the time comes," said Barbara Bliss, committee chairman.

On the other side of the budget, school committee learned that the town's share of federal Chapter1 money will increase from about $13,000 to $27,000 for the next school year. The money is based on a formula that uses the number of children in town on Aid to Dependent Children, AFDC.

Hart said the number of AFDC children hasn't increased much. The money is used for supplemental services.

Legion scholarship winners

The George H. Mealy Post, American Legion, Cohasset presented three scholarships to the 1991 graduating class Cohasset High School. A $2,500 scholarship will be presented at the Scituate High graduation.

Andrew Ross of 150 Pond Street received the Christine Burke Scholarship of $2,500.

Barbara Lagrotario of 104 Howe Road and Jennifer McKenna of Norman Todd Lane each received $1,000 scholarships. The latter are the regular American Legion Scholarships.

County official seeks to blame retirement board for pension costs

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

According to the Norfolk County Retirement Board, Cohasset was charged an additional $89,629 for last year due to the repeal of the $30,000 cap on pension costs.

The repeal of the pension cap took effect in July of 1989. The effect of the repeal will continue.

But there were a number of boards involved in a series of votes needed to accomplish the repeal.

According to the Norfolk County Retirement Board, the agency that administers the county pension system, the necessary votes actually took place in 1989. Both the Norfolk County Commissioners and the Norfolk County Advisory Board voted on the issue, despite the letter to the Cohasset Mariner from County Commissioner James J. Collins.

Collins sent a letter to the editor defending Selectman Rocco Laugelle, who has served for years as the town's representative to the Norfolk County Advisory Board. Collins said the advisory board had nothing to do with the pension system and pointed out that the system is administered by a separate agency.

The full text of Collins letter appears on page 10.

But according to county records, the county commissioners voted on Feb. 1 of 1989 to repeal the $30,000 cap on pensions. The Norfolk County Advisory Board voted on March 8, 1989, to repeal the cap.

Steve Martin film could bring a house down

made it his first choice of locations, according to Williams.

Plans are underway to find a suitable, secluded property on which to build a set for six additional weeks of filming, but Williams did not know if Cohasset is under consideration. There has been some talk of a location near Little Harbor for the house.

If the house were built for the movie, it would be torn down upon completion of the film.

"It's not a 'Witches'," he said, referring to the star-studded, big budget picture, shot in Cohasset for most of the summer of 1986, "There will be no truckloads of feathers and cherry pits."

"It seems so much tamer than the six to eight weeks it took to shoot 'The Witches of Eastwick' that I don't see any problem with it," said Selectman Diana Kornet.

Selectmen appointed member Jane Goedecke to facilitate negotiations.

Points of concern among the board included locations for equipment storage and living quarters for the cast and crew.

They also made it clear that the film company would compensate the town financially and would be responsible for negotiating fees with local businesses used in the movie.

Williams replied that, although contracts and compensation to the town and businesses would ensue, he could provide no specific figures.

Patricia McCarthy is in her own element

By Linda Quain
Mariner correspondent

When Patricia McCarthy and her husband Jim head for their summer home in Truro, they're not necessarily sightseeing. And when Jim leaves her off in Provincetown early in the morning, it's not so she can go shopping. You might say he's taking her to work.

"We take one car down there, and in the morning my husband will drop me anywhere. We'll drive through Provincetown or Truro and I'll say, 'Stop here!' I might stay where I am or wander up and down the streets until I see something that hits me," McCarthy explains. Toting a backpack, stool and pad of paper, "I sit on and old porch or on the grass or in the middle of the street and paint for about three hours. He drops me off and picks me up, and it's wonderful because I'm there and there's nothing else I can do once I make the decision to paint."

McCarthy made the decision to paint – seriously – about 10 years ago, and it was probably one the most important decisions she could have made in her career.

Though she studied commercial art and held a few related jobs in the field, McCarthy went on to work in the airline industry. It was then that she met her husband Jim, an independent life insurance broker and radio talk show host (along with Eddie Andelman and Mark Witkin) on WHDH's Sunday Night Sports Huddle. Together they raised a family of five children, one of the children died young. Now that her children – Mark, Robin, Lisa and James, Jr. – are grown and on their own, McCarthy is devoting much of her time, creative energy and talent to painting.

And the results of this dedication to her craft are beginning to show.

Her training through various workshops and affiliations with the South Shore Arts Center, the Scituate Arts Association, the Copley Society and other local art associations are earning her a name on the South Shore as a distinguished watercolorist. This year McCarthy received the North River Arts Society Award of excellence and took second prize at the Cape Cod Arts Association Members Show.

Her most distinguished honor came in 1983 for "Escape to Block Island," which won her the Air France Award, first prize watercolor as a Copley Artist. McCarthy's work has appeared in invitational shows at Symphony Hall, the Federal Reserve Bank, the Old Ship Church and the South Shore Art Center, where a small collection of her watercolors was on display for the month of May, as the faculty featured artist. Last year McCarthy began teaching a beginner watercolor class at the SSAC.

If there was ever a time when McCarthy's art career has blossomed, "I think it's right now," says Katherine Smit, a close friend and colleague of McCarthy's who paints with her and also teaches at SSAC. "I think there has been some serious dedication on her part because she's been painting harder, more often, and faster. Up until now, she's been somewhat diversified because of family and other things entering her life. Now she's really focusing, she's teaching a class and winning some prizes. I think it's all coming together right now, and it's the focus on her part. She's terribly enthusiastic and excited; she's on her way."

"Years after art school I put painting on hold, thinking I would wake up some morning and pick up where I left off. But I don't think it happens like that. Whatever it is, I think you have to work at it."
—Patricia McCarthy

The Great Outdoors

Some of McCarthy's most accomplished works have come from such Cape Cod excursions, day trips and local travels, recording the beauty of the New England landscape with her paint brush as a photographer would looking through the lens of a camera. The brilliant watercolors that decorate the walls of almost every room of her Bancroft Road home are testimony to her innate skill, and reflect her taste for things simple and natural – be it a small fruit stand at Norwell farm, weathered headstones in an old cemetery, or winter chrysanthemums in a greenhouse.

Whether she's in Cohasset – painting in the Carousel Antique Shop, on a grassy stretch of the Common, in her sun-filled porch/studio – or vacationing on a tropical island, McCarthy's finds time and scenery to paint. Describing herself as a "high key" painter, McCarthy's watercolors have a light, airy quality about them. She paints with a range of bright colors and pastels and her pictures typically depict rustic structures, such as Cape homes, Boston landmarks and scenic harbor views. Some of the works on display at SSAC that represent her style and interests include "Provincetown View," "Cape House," "Faneuil Hall," "Red Lion Inn," and "Saint Barts."

Although she has painted many a vase, flower arrangement and still life setting, McCarthy is most in her element when she is outdoors. "I love being outdoors," she admits. "I love it. I like painting from life. I like being outside – I like the smells, the sounds the whole business."

Often times, the whole business means doing a painting three or more times until its good enough to hang a price tag on. "I find very often when I paint outside and I don't feel I've quite completed something or I have to leave for some reason, I have an awful time finishing up at home. I almost have to go back to the location. I have many, many, many unfinished paintings for that reason," says McCarthy.

McCarthy said she finds, though other painters may disagree, "that you really have to be turned on to your subject. I feel there has to be something there that excites me or is personal to me."

A Turning Point

Although it has taken 20 years of painting for her reach the level she is at now with her work, McCarthy recalls being interested in art when she was young. This interest led her to study commercial art in college, as she graduated from the School of Practical Art in Boston (now the Art Institute of Boston). She later went to New York and worked for General Motors before moving into the airline business and getting married. She dabbled in oil painting at home and took an art class while living in San Francisco for a short time, but never pursued it as a career when raising her children – though the desire was always there.

"I think if you have that creative need you really have to express it," said McCarthy. "There were times when I – with five children– was ready to scream, and I'd have to get out the paints every so often. But I didn't do anything seriously while they were growing up. There just wasn't time."

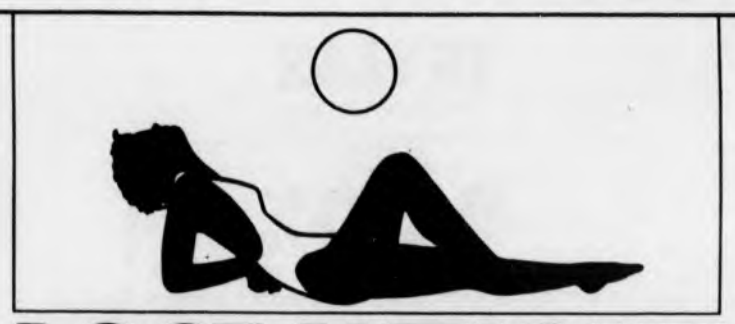
With her kids away at college, McCarthy discovered her true calling about ten years ago. Anne Reardon, a friend from the airlines, asked McCarthy to accompany her in taking a Harvard Extension course through the University's Center for Life Long Learning. The course was called Turning Points in a Woman's Life. Although it started out as more a fun trip into Harvard Square for lunch once a week than anything else, said Reardon, the professor teaching the course posed some challenging questions to her class members.

"What they suggested in the course was to have goals," said McCarthy, such as "Where do you want to be five years from now? What's important to you? What do you like and dislike? It kind of forced you to look at your life and where it was heading. I think it was then that I realized how much I loved to paint, and that if I was going to do it I couldn't just dream about it. I had to do something positive."

A nationally known watercolorist, Charles Mahoney, was teaching in Scituate and McCarthy began studying with him. She also became active in the South Shore Art Center and delved into what she loved doing most. "I went to a lot of workshops and just started to paint in earnest," she said, describing the five-day intensive workshops she attended from Cape Cod to Maine to upstate New York.

"It's almost like a religious retreat," she said of the workshop setting. "You're with other painters, and you eat, sleep and talk painting for one week and shut everything else out. You come back with so many new ideas and you come back completely exhausted, but it really is rewarding."

Once friends and would-be painters saw McCarthy's talent, a small group of them went out, bought supplies and asked her if she would teach them anything she knew about watercolors. Reluctant at first, she initially turned down the offer. When asked to reconsider, she called a good friend that teaches, who gave her just the encouragement she needed. After two years of teaching out of her home, McCarthy had the opportunity to teach beginning watercolor at SSAC, and now has a very popular class of about 12 to 13 students, with a wait list of many others who want to get in.



"I'm the one who moved her to do the teaching because I knew she had a lot to offer because of her personality," said Smit "...She's been just great with the beginners and she's right for it because she doesn't make life complicated. She wants them to emerge in their own style the way she has."

Teaching has been a positive experience for her. "I have a great group of students and I just love teaching," said McCarthy, adding that one of the most rewarding aspects of the job is seeing the progress and enthusiasm of her students and the support they give one another during in-class critiques. "It's amazing to me to see that support. When someone does something wonderful, they're all happy."

who is on the SSAC faculty, and Ruth Farrara of Marshfield, who will be painting in Maine and Mexico this year are just a few of the women artists who have formed a group that gets together and paints on Fridays. There is comfort, and adventure, in numbers, as McCarthy said.

This is just part of a larger local group (some 30 in all, Smit estimates) that represents a strong and growing presence of women artists and painters – ranging in age from 45 to 65, some of whom are grandmothers – who are returning to and renewing their art careers later in life.

Smit, also a mother of five, considers herself and McCarthy fortunate to "both have husbands that are compassionate and understanding and encourage us to do this; otherwise we just couldn't do it," she said of their freedom to go traveling and painting together. McCarthy notes that her entire family has been supportive.

Though McCarthy says she most aspires to be paint like watercolorists Mary Lizotte, Judy Wagner and Betty Lou Schlemm, Smit says McCarthy has a style all her own.

"She is a very unspoiled, very fresh painter," says Smit, who has known McCarthy for nearly 14 years. Despite a good deal of training, "she remains very steady in her own style. I don't see that teacher influence has moved her direction," which Smit describes as "very clean, very impressionistic, delightful – and very much like her personality. She is uncomplicated, open and gentle, and her work is like she is."

McCarthy is modest about her talent. "When we're painting outdoors, she's always very humble, and she'll say, 'It isn't very good, is it?' And I'll be laughing because it's usually wonderful. I tease her about it... She really is a beautiful person."

"I feel it is a craft, and like anything else the inclination has to be there. But I think we all go through the same steps to get where we want to be," said McCarthy. "Years after art school I put (painting) on hold, thinking I would wake up some morning and pick up where I left off. But I don't think it happens like that. Whatever it is, I think you have to work at it. Yes, I do think anybody that has that desire can do it."

1058th returns to civilian life

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

In September, hundreds of teary-eyed Hingham residents lined Main Street to say goodbye to the Hingham-based 1058th Transportation Division.

On Monday (June 4), hundreds once again lined downtown Hingham; this time to welcome "the lost patrol" home.

The Massachusetts National Guard unit arrived at Fort Devens last week to prepare for the return home.

The unit, the last Massachusetts National Guard unit to come home, returned to civilian life following Monday's parade.

Marching from the Hingham Armory, the unit was greeted by the Hingham High School band, the 215th Army band, veterans groups, a police motorcade, and thick crowds of bystanders.

Students representing each of the Hingham schools were present for the 10 a.m. ceremony. Students at the nearby St. Paul's School watched from the steps of the church.

Many local businesses closed up shop to attend; "Be back after the parade" signs adorned many doors.

Hingham selectmen, State Sen. Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth), State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset), and Maj. Gen. Wayne Wagner, the Massachusetts adjutant general, all welcomed the unit home from a viewing stand near the school administration building at 14 Main St.

Diane St. Laurent, the head of the 1058th Family Support Group, and Lyn Gordon, the moving force behind Friends of Operation Desert Shield, were duly noted atop the reviewing stand.

E. Gardner Jones, spoke of the contrast between the farewell in September and the homecoming.

"We have a particularly different and joyous occasion," he said.

Wagner said it was a proud day for the people of Hingham and the country.

"This is a great day to be an American," he said. "It is a great day to be a soldier. It is a great day to be an Army national guardsman.

"I do not think we can do enough to show our gratitude for what you men and women have done for us.

He said that the "the will, spirit, training and ability of the American fighting men" proved that reservists can take their rightful place among regular service men.

He said this "total force policy" harkens back to the days of the early militia.

He said Hingham's outpouring of support was "indicative of small town America."

Wagner said Saddam Hussein, who had "fourth largest army in the world and the first largest ego," thought "he could play Vietnam all over again."

He said support from the home front dashed Hussein's plans, and energized the servicemen.

"I really wish we had better videotapes of what happened in September," he said, thanking the crowd for its dedication.

He presented each member of the unit with a new ribbon, created by the state, for veterans of Operation Desert Storm.

The brown stripe on the ribbon represents the desert; the yellow stripe represents the yellow ribbons that supported the troops; and blue and white are the state colors of Massachusetts.

Sen. Hedlund said he was impressed by the size of the crowd that gathered to welcome the unit home.

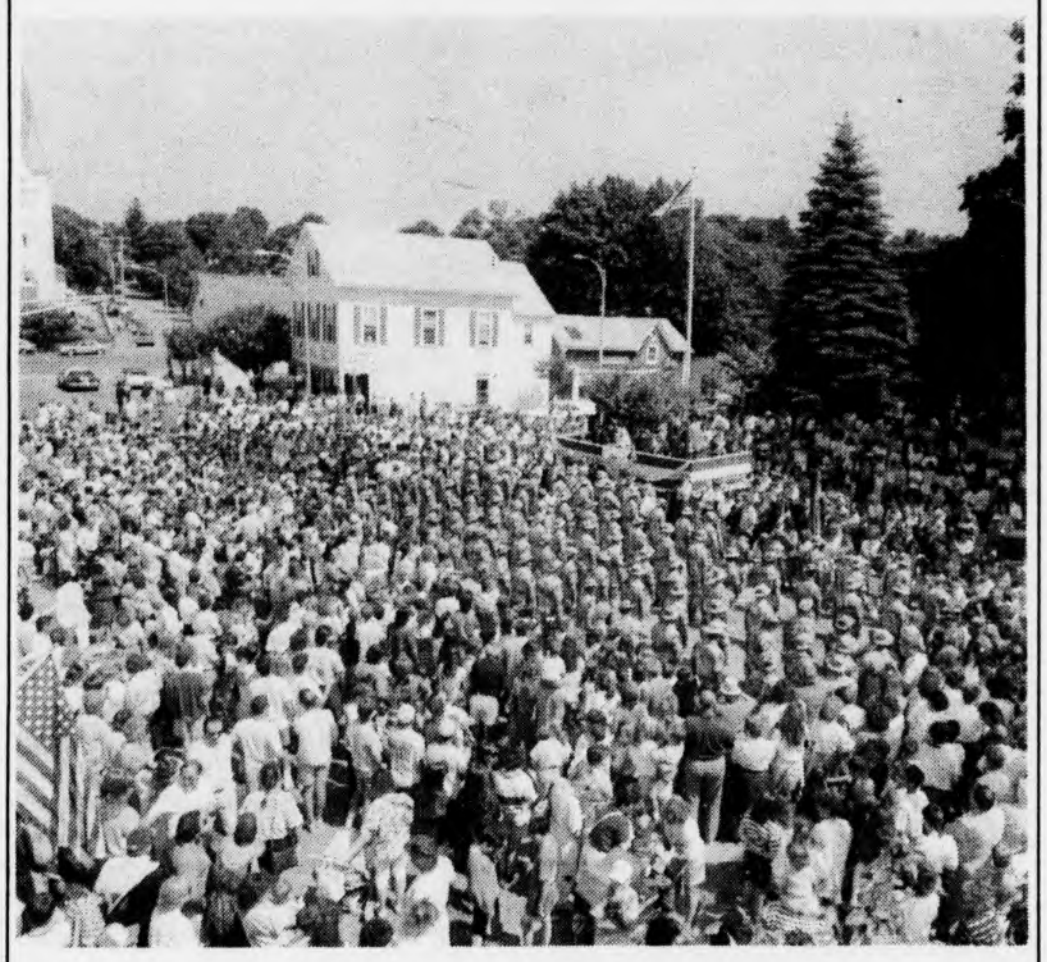
"This isn't just Main Street, Hingham," he said, "this is Main Street, USA."

Murray, a retired Marine, wiped tears from her eyes throughout the event. She said she was glad the unit made it home safe.

"What a thrill it was to see you walk down that street," she said. "Thank you very much for being so good to us and being such great people.

She presented the unit with a proclamation "in recognition of a job well done."

Capt. Nancy Souza, the unit's commander, thanked the town for its support.



She called the rally in September "a valiant send-off" that "touched each and everyone of the soldiers."

She said although only a handful of the unit was from Hingham, the entire unit felt the town's support.

"While in Saudi Arabia, we flew the Hingham flag so proudly during the war," she said. "It was a sign that we would return home safely."

Souza, with a giant pair of scissors from the army, then cut into a giant yellow ribbon that encircled the reviewing stand.

It was over.

Hingham Square gave the 1058th Transportation Company a wild welcome this week. Several of the men in the unit are from Cohasset.

Town meeting is June 26

There were no crowds waiting at the appointed hour May 29 as town meeting was scheduled to reconvene. Officials had gotten the word out that there would be no session.

Town Moderator William Weeks called the three people to order at 7:30 and proceeded to announce the session would reconvene Wednesday, June 26, at 7:30 p.m. at the high school auditorium.

Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts asked Weeks whether the state would have a budget in place at that time. The lack of state financial information was the cause of the postponement. Local aid figures are not yet known.

Weeks said he expected the local aid would be known sometime in June whether or not the budget was set by then.

Tag-a-keg is hearing July 15

A public hearing has been scheduled Monday, July 15, at town hall to discuss the adoption of the proposed "Tag-a-Keg" program.

The policy, which was first implemented in Greenfield and has been championed by MADD, was introduced by drug and alcohol committee chairman Keith Knowles.

The new regulations would require all retail beer sellers to mark the handle of the barrel with a band indicating the date of birth, name and address of the buyer.

The merchant must also record the information in a journal which would be available to authorities.

A $50 deposit would be placed on the barrel in addition to the tap deposit.

If the keg is not returned within 60 days of purchase or if the band is removed the buyer forfeits the deposit.

In the event of a violation, the seller retains $10 and the remaining $40 goes to Cohasset High School's SADD program.

The new plan will not hurt area merchants because less than one percent of business is attributed to keg sales, said Knowles, who has spoken with three of the town's six licensed vendors and received a positive response.

Historical Society Museums to open for summer

The Society's Maritime Museum, once an 18th century ship chandlery, holds an unusual collection of maritime-related artifacts, ship models, pictures, charts and documents relating to the town's seafaring past during the great "Age of Sail." The story of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse is portrayed in artifacts and pictures of the first and second lighthouses. On the second floor of the Maritime Museum a general collection of materials relating to early Cohasset is found, ranging from stone tools of early Indians to old school desks, housewrights' and cordwainer's equipment, early pharmaceutical material, and the contents of a "fisherman's country store." The building itself dates from the latter 18th century; originally it was Samuel Bates' ship chandlery used by his fishing fleet at Cohasset Harbor. In the 1950 the old chandlery was given to the Historical Society and moved from Border Street to the center village to house the Society's growing museum collections.

Adjacent to the Maritime Museum on Elm Street at the center is the Historical Society's museum dedicated to early household furnishings and artifacts from a number of the old houses of the town. Built in 1810 by housewright David Nichols for Cohasset's Capt. John Wilson the house retains much of its ambience as an early Cohasset home. This summer the Historical Society's Costume Committee will use the Capt. Wilson House as the site for a series of "revolving" exhibits of items from the Society's extensive costumes and accessories collection. 19th century dresses and gowns, quilts and accessories will be featured in special exhibits. Members of the committee and volunteers will staff the Wilson House during the summer to assist visitors.

The Historical Society's two museum buildings at Cohasset center together offer a unique look at the early years of this old New England coastal village. This summer, admission to the Capt. John Wilson House and Maritime Museum will be by donation. Pre-arranged group tours may be arranged by contacting the Historical Society at 383-6930.

Regular appointments

Selectman Martha Gjesteby voted against the appointment of Richard Henderson as town counsel at the board's meeting May 29 at town hall.

But Henderson was reappointed for another year by a majority of the board.

The selectmen took action on a list of reappointments at the same time. Fire Chief Daniel Brock was skipped as the board took action one by one on the rest of the list. His contract requires notice in July if the town chooses to let it expire.

Among those reappointed were: Gregory Doyon, executive secretary; Stephen Wigmore, wire superintendent; Richard Gallo, assistant wire superintendent; Lot Bates, sealer of weights and measures and measurer of wood and bark; Noel Ripley, keeper of the clock and veterans agent; Grace Donohue and Kearin Dunn, fence viewers; William Quigley, animal control officer and David Wadsworth, town archivist.

All votes are subject to appropriation of town meeting.

Special Effects photography featured

Four photographers, focusing on different facets of special effects photography, will be featured in the South Shore Art Center's Altered Images exhibit through June 15 at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset.

The exhibition profiles the talents of Elaine Croce, Kim DeNunzio, Linda Getgen, and Andree Wilson. Croce, of Dorchester, enhances her photography with processing on watercolor paper called the Van Dyke printing technique.

Hull's DeNunzio chooses Polaroid film for her manipulated and non-manipulated imagery.

Altered Images will be complemented by a Gallery Artists Show in the Dillon Gallery and an exhibit by Art Center faculty member Patricia McCarthy. A local recorder group will provide musical entertainment during the reception. For more information, call 383-9548.

Twice in a week, town rejects sludge

By Andrew MacLellan
Mariner correspondent

Selectmen Monday upheld the decision to oppose the use of Cohasset Heights Landfill for a Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) sludge, grit and screenings dump.

The MWRA sent letters recently to communities throughout the state seeking alternative sites to Walpole, which is currently designated as the eventual sludge depository.

Meanwhile Cohasset Heights Limited has an expansion plan pending with the state as it seeks to add 27.5 acres to the landfill. There has been talk of accommodating sludge from the Boston Harbor Cleanup project and it is rumored that the site has been included on the agency's short list.

Monday Paul Barry, president of the landfill, asked selectmen to reconsider their decision in recognition of the defeat of a resolution at town meeting that would have rejected the MWRA's proposal outright.

Opponents of the expansion, Stop Any Further Expansion (SAFE), were in attendance.

Expansion of the landfill will not help property values, the real estate market or businesses, said SAFE member John K. McNabb Jr.

"We urge you to stand by your vote," he added, "because any reversal of this vote could be seen as opening the door a crack."

In a recent canvass of the town, SAFE collected 320 signatures on a petition, according to McNabb, 99 percent of which are from Cohasset residents.

Opponents of the proposal are concerned that it is close to the town's water supply and they say that the existing landfill may already present environmental concerns.

Supporters claim that the site will inevitably be expanded, and a carefully regulated landfill operated by a state agency is preferable to uncertain future use.

Barry, in a letter to selectmen, recognized the nature of the non-binding resolution and stated, ". . . the selectmen are free to act; nevertheless in the exercise of their discretion, the selectmen may feel more properly bound to follow the open-door policy debated and preserved at the regularly scheduled town meeting, rather than the closed-door policy advocated by an insular group of activists bearing a petition."

The board disagreed with Barry's assumption that town meeting voted down a resolution to oppose the site, remarking that there was insufficient time to study the issue and that an outright rejection of the proposal would have been premature.

"I did not see the petition until the very last minute," said chairman Ned Tebbetts, "and I objected to not having had adequate notice. . .

"The selectmen made it very clear that the vote was not an endorsement."

"I get the sense that we were collectively blind-sided at town meeting because we did not have all of the facts," said member Diana Kornet.

"I haven't heard of one call to any of us asking to keep the door open to negotiations."

Several residents raised objection and asked that further consideration be given to the proposal.

Robert Martin accused the town of jumping to conclusions and requested a determination be made as to whether the waste coming into town would be hazardous.

"If it is should it be brought in?" he said.

"If it's not should it be brought in in an attempt to bring in dollars to Cohasset?"

As the board made no motion, the matter was laid to rest and it is expected selectmen will write to Gov. William Weld's Blue Ribbon Commission rejecting the proposal.

the past year on the elementary school math curriculum. The committee includes: Maureen Alcott, Frank Deakin, Ken Ekberg, Cynthia Hurley, Patricia Murphy, Marie Price, Lawrence Schultz, Barbara Wells and Linda Whitney.

Ekberg told the school committee that the major curriculum work undertaken requires more than a year for completion.

The new math curriculum will be the subject of in-service teacher training on release days during the coming school year. Addison Wesley will pay for experts at three of the workshops as part of the incentive to use those books.

The new curriculum is based on standards developed in 1989 by the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics. While most publishing companies have changed their own texts to fit with the standards, Cohasset has been using older versions of the books in the elementary level.

Grade 1 at Osgood currently uses a 1983 edition of a Houghton Mifflin workbook. This coming year a newer version of the workbook will be purchased.

Among the manipulatives that the staff at Osgood plans to buy this year are: base 10 blocks, color tiles, fraction bars, snap cube sets, calculators and an overhead calculator (for grades 2 and 3), plus a series of math games designed to interest students during their in-school free time.

At Deer Hill all students will use a textbook, rather than a workbook, during the coming year. Among the items planned for purchase besides the textbooks and calculators are various manipulatives as well as some computer software.

The school committee voted unanimously to support the new program.

Bank suspends dividend

In the light of the continuing recession in the area's economy, the Board of Directors of Cohasset Savings Bank has voted to suspend the quarterly cash divided which would have been payable at the end of the second quarter. The bank has paid a quarterly cash divided of $.06 per share since the first quarter of 1989.

"This decision does not reflect any change in the Bank's performance, but was made because there has been no sign of improvement in the economy in our market area," Donald E. Bates, President and CEO, stated. "Until we see solid evidence of economic recovery, we believe it to be in the best interest of the bank and its stockholders to preserve the strong 17 percent capital position that gives assurance of weathering the current recession. I am sure that as soon as improvement in the economy appears, the Directors will consider resumption of the dividend."

Bates said that the present depressed state of the economy was the basis for the Directors' recent decision to discontinue negotiations looking to a merger with Hingham Institution for Savings.

For the first quarter this year ended March 31, the Bank reported a marginal loss of $(13,000), or $(.01) per share, representing a substantial improvement over the preceding three quarters when losses of $(.08), $(.39), and $(.56) were recorded.

Cohasset Savings is a community thrift institution founded in 1845 and serving a popular residential area of Massachusetts's South Shore. Assets at March 31 were $66,675,000 and stockholders' equity was $11,457,000 at that date.

Class of '91– time to find a place in the sun

Class of 1991. Now it's time to find your place in the sun.

So much has happened in the world since the year of your birth—1973.

As you lay in your comfortable little bassinet, wrapped in a hand-knit afghan and sucking on a pacifier, a terrible war was in its second decade halfway around the world.

Boys and girls of your age now were part of a horrifying body count on TV every night and the country was shouting—why.

That year—the year of your birth—the fourth Arab-Israel war began when Egyptian and Syrian forces attacked Israel as Jews observed Yom Kippur, the holiest day in their calendar.

Vice President Spiro Agnew, shortly after insisting "I will not resign," resigned.

The country was embroiled in a scandal called Watergate.

President Richard Nixon fired special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox, which triggered the resignations of Attorney General Elliot Richardson and his deputy, William Ruckelshaus.

These events became known as the Saturday Night Massacre.

The country revelled in the flim flam as "The Sting" swept the Academy Awards, receiving Oscars for best picture, best director and best original screenplay.

Three of the year's best sellers were "Burr" by Gore Vidal, "The Great American Novel" by Philip Roth and "Breakfast of Champions" by Kurt Vonnegut, Jr.

The Miami Dolphins defeated the Washington Redskins in Super Bowl VII, the New York Knicks beat the Los Angeles Lakers for the NBA championship and the Montreal Canadians won the Stanley Cup.

Meanwhile, despite the presence of Rookie of the Year Carlton Fisk, the Red Sox failed to bring Boston a world championship for the 55th consecutive year.

A lean young teen from French Lick, Indiana was tearing up high school basketball courts.

President John Fitzgerald Kennedy had been dead ten years, Martin Luther King, five, and the assassin's bullet severed the spinal cord of Gov. Wallace of Alabama the year before your birth.

As you cautiously let go of your mother's warm hand to enter kindergarten, the world was a little better.

The terrible war which filled up a black marble wall in Washington with 58,000 American names was over.

Californians approved Proposition 13, which called for a nearly 60% slash in property tax revenues. It was a forerunner of Proposition 2 1/2.

The Supreme Court barred quota systems in college admissions but affirmed the constitutionality of programs which gave advantage to minorities.

When Pope Paul VI's successor, Pope John Paul I, died unexpectedly after 34 days in office, Karol Cardinal Wojtyla became the first Polish Pope.

A "framework for peace" in the Middle East was signed by Egyptian President Anwar el-Sadat and Israel Prime Minister Menachem Begin after a 13-day conference at Camp David conceived and hosted by President Jimmy Carter.

Moviegoers watched Warren Beatty return to earth in the body of another man in "Heaven Can Wait" and loved John Belushi's antics as he broke every college rule in "National Lampoon's Animal House."

Two of the most popular situation comedies ever popped up on the little screen—"Taxi" and "WKRP in Cincinnati."

Future Celtic Bill Walton, at that time a member of the Portland Trail Blazers, was chosen the NBA's most valuable player.

Meanwhile, thanks to their squandering of a huge lead and their loss of a one-game playoff to the despised New York Yankees, the Red Sox failed to bring Boston a world championship for the 60th consecutive year.

In 1984, you took that huge plunge from the sheltered halls of Deer Hill School to the black hole of junior high.

In Russia Yuri Andropov died and Konstantin Chernenko became the new leader of the Soviet Union.

Jose Napolean Duarte was elected president of El Salvador.

Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi was assassinated by two Sikh bodyguards.

Rep. Geraldine Ferraro became the first woman to be nominated for vice president.

President Ronald Reagan and Vice President George Bush were re-elected in a landslide.

The Celtics won their 15th NBA championship after defeating their arch-rivals, the Lakers, in the finals.

That lean teen who was tearing up high school basketball courts in French Lick when you entered kindergarten now was captain of the Celtics, winning the first of his three straight most valuable player trophies.

"Amadeus" won best picture.

Meanwhile, even though Tony Armas led the American League in home runs, the Red Sox failed to bring Boston a world championship for the 66th consecutive year.

In 1987 you moved to become full-fledged high school students.

In your freshman year, the country was in yet another crisis of conscience.

President Reagan was accused of trading arms for hostages and eventually told the nation that "mistakes were made" during the Iran-contra affair.

Iraqi missiles killed 37 in an attack on the U.S. frigate Stark in the Persian Gulf.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Great Britain won a rare third term.

By a vote of 58-42, the Senate rejected the nomination of Judge Robert Bork for a seat on the Supreme Court.

Little rulers and big money men were popular that year.

"The Last Emperor" was best picture, Michael Douglas was best actor for "Wall Street."

And Cher was best actress for her role in "Moonstruck."

"Les Miserables" won the New York Drama Critics Circle award as the year's best musical.

The worst nightmare of WHDH talk show host Eddie Andelman came true when the New York football Giants won the Super Bowl.

The Celtics were unable to win back-to-back NBA titles, in large part due to injuries to Kevin McHale and Bill Walton.

Instead, the Lakers had the magic and won the championship under the leadership of most valuable player Magic Johnson.

Meanwhile, despite the accomplishments of Cy Young winner Roger Clemens and batting champion Wade Boggs, the Red Sox failed to bring Boston a world championship for the 69th consecutive year.

Now Class of 1991, it's time to find your place in the sun. And while you're at it, see if you can harness solar energy, stall global warming and stop the thinning out of the ozone layer.

Just think of all that has happened this year.

When you entered senior year a Patriot missile was was a pass by a football team that never won a Super Bowl. Scuds were small windstorms. Baghdad was a mysterious city with casbahs and belly dancers. And Kuwait, if you knew it at all, was a very tiny, very rich little country far away.

But didn't that all change January 15 when President Bush's 1,000 points of light turned into 1,000 bombs over Baghdad.

The war in the Persian Gulf is over. Now it's your turn to create a world without the kind of war that kills our youth and causes "collateral damage."

Wage your wars against violence in the streets, drugs, illiteracy, AIDS, homelessness, hunger, racism and environmental suicide.

You have all the tools—youth, energy, idealism, enthusiasm.

It's your turn to remake the world.

Tradition marks graduation of 86

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Under the tent at the Music Circus on June 2, diplomas were awarded to 86 graduates of Cohasset High.

The simple ceremony was marked with wild applause and tradition.

Jennifer Reidy, president of the junior class, carried the standard baton as she led the line of graduates in their blue and white gowns to their place in the shade.

The Scituate-Cohasset Wind Ensemble played "Pomp and Circumstance" for the march. The ensemble is one of the regional efforts made recently by the school system.

Jennifer Plante sang "The Star Spangled Banner."

Barton Weisenfluh, class president, gave a brief welcome to his classmates. He talked about the unique talents of his class and pointed out that the yearbook (which is not available) is dedicated to the janitorial staff.

His parting words were: "See you at the beach."

Salutorian Kristin Martin talked about the day as a time of transition. She said their diplomas give each of the graduates the equal opportunity to become unequal.

"What sets us apart are our dreams," Martin said. She talked about changes her class have gone through since watching Mr. Rogers and Sesame Street.

She urged her classmates to stay in touch with their dreams and turn those dreams into goals. She reminded them that according to physical laws bumblebees cannot fly. But because bumblebees don't know their flight is impossible, they do fly.

Michael Cisneros, valedictorian, began by saying, "In a few minutes we'll be free to leave here forever."

He went on to thank the unsung heroes — the teachers, the coaches, the parent.

He talked about cliques and urged his classmates to experiment as the high school cliques break up. He pointed out that his own decision to stay in band had been difficult, although he loved band, because the members of his clique weren't participating.

"What I really learned was: First, discover yourself, then be yourself," Cisneros said.

The commencement address was delivered by School Committeeman Christopher Ford. It begins on page 1.

Mary Ellen Gallagher, CHS principal, John DeLorenzo, vice principal and Stephen Hart, school superintendent, all participated in the brief ceremony.

School Committee member Nancy Sandell handed out the diplomas. Her daughter, Anna Leigh Sandell, received a diploma although she is still at school in Rome.

But everyone wants magic

commentary

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

John Bradshaw was lucky enough to be at the right place at the right time — at least that's the slant he puts on his success.

Yes, he was lucky.

He was lucky enough to be born into an alcoholic family in Houston, Texas. He was abandoned by his father. His childhood included times of incredible pain. He grew up a survivor. I guess that was luck.

For a time, he settled into alcoholism of his own.

Yet, he says he was lucky.

It's been more than 25 years, five months and 21 days since he took his last drink. Now he's a superstar of the recovery movement.

Last week he had time to sit in a parlor in the Towers of the Park Plaza Hotel to talk about his ideas. Maybe I was the one at the right place at the right time.

Because recovery — like dysfunction — is contagious. And sitting with a man who is open enough to talk about his spirituality, his feelings and his family is a blessing.

Bradshaw was in Boston to deliver a series of workshops. The events soldout. Before he left town June 3, more than 6,000 people heard his message of hope and forgiveness.

He shares his feelings of abandonment and loneliness. He shares what he does to "recover."

Last year, he spoke before 190,000 people at lectures, workshops and conferences.

Yet he works on his own recovery every day.

Bradshaw believes there is a wounded child in all of us. His philosphy strikes a chord with a growing number. His philosphy strikes a chord in my soul.

My childhood wasn't a horror story of epic proportions. I was just lonely and out of place much of the time.

"Everyone has pain," he said. "No mother is perfect. No one is without wounds. I have deep wounds of my own."

He doesn't plan to spend the rest of his life in hotel rooms promoting recovery. He said he expects to keep up his current pace for another year.

"I'm not different from other people who say the same thing. They say it as well as I do," he said.

I'll have to think about that the next time I cry through one of his TV shows.

I'll have to remember that this man believes he was merely standing at the right place.

No one — not a guru or a brilliant writer or even a wise and good healer — can erase pain.

Healing isn't magic. That's the message Bradshaw takes to the airwaves and conference centers. He helps people get in touch with their inner pain. He helps them discover buried and painful feelings. They do the work. They feel the feelings. Forgiveness comes in its own time. Afterwards, they feel stronger, less lonely, less afraid.

Bradshaw understands because he has worked on his wounded inner child. His words are simple.

He has published books on shame and toxic secrets.

His next book may be about relationships, although he's also working on a book on family secrets, the sort of secrets that affect one generation after another. For Bradshaw, family secrets are more than the ingredients in Aunt Dorothy's super-rich fudge. They revolve around issues of death or sex.

I didn't share my family secrets with him.

I didn't even show him the wounded child within.

We all have one. Bradshaw is quite clear about the fact that alcoholics — and their children — don't own the market on pain.

He admits to growing tired of the work.

"But I believe it's important," he said.

In Boston he will run a workshop called "Healing the Wounds of Father."

He said his life has never been better.

"All I have to compare this with is me," Bradshaw said. "And that's enough."

He has made peace with his family. He held his father in his arms, as the man who abandoned him long ago lay on his deathbed. He talks about how he had to go through a divorce-like process with his mother.

"She engulfed me and you can't have a relationship if you are enmeshed with someone," he said. His mother isn't thrilled with his work. But he has a relationship with her today.

Bradshaw admits the public glare can be difficult.

He has a male support group he trusts.

"Today I do the things I want to do. I can choose my own life. But being functional doesn't mean I don't have problems. Even good things like success create problems."

His conversation drifted into the problems he's having in remodeling his home back in Texas.

He refuses to believe he will ever recover fully.

"Recovery is an ongoing process," the man said.

The dedication of the Old Town Pump was enlivened by a visit from Cimarron, Noel Ripley's 32-year-old pony. Cimmy's official duty was to take the first drink.

McNabb praises Selectmen

letters

To the Editor:

The Board of Selectmen deserve high praise for their swift and decisive action last Wednesday night, May 29, when they voted unanimously to oppose the disposal of MWRA/Boston Harbor sewer system residuals, 'grit and screenings,' and sludge in Cohasset.

Their vote gave a clear message to the state office of Environmental Affairs that Cohasset residents do not want MWRA sludge in their hometown.

This timely and unequivocable action of the Selectmen will help protect the public health and the environment of Cohasset for generations to come. Thank you, Board of Selectmen.

County commissioner supports Laugelle

To the Editor:

A recent commentary appearing in the Cohasset Mariner did a great injustice to one of the most active and dedicated members of the Norfolk County Advisory Board, Rocco Laugelle. As a member of the budget committee he has been a vigilant and outspoken "watch dog" over county finances for many thankless years. While this board does not always share his position, one cannot question his motives in speaking up in the interest of his and the other communities that he represents.

It has been a long-standing policy of the commissioners not to become directly involved in local affairs. However, your reporter's claim that Rocco Laugelle was in some way responsible for "The Mother of All Pension Overrides" shows a gross misunderstanding of the relationship between the county and the retirement system.

The Norfolk County Retirement System is not a county function, its employees are not county employees and it operates entirely from its own resources, which are substantial. Many of the larger Norfolk County municipalities have their own system. All are under the direction of the Division of Public Employees Retirement Administration (PERA). County retirement boards are further controlled by an Advisory Council consisting of the treasurers of all the member units who also elect one of the three Retirement Board members.

It is assumed that the override to which reference is made, resulted from a supplemental assessment of the Retirement System, which governing statutes require the commissioners to assess. The amount was determined by PERA and was approved by the Retirement Board Advisory Council and the Retirement Board, itself. It was not required to go before the Norfolk County Advisory Board of which Rocco Laugelle is a member. Neither the county commissioners nor the advisory board have jurisdiction over the retirement system.

Hopefully, in some small way, this will vindicate a valuable, dedicated and respected member of the Norfolk County Advisory Board from being wrongfully accused of "not doing his job."

Very truly yours,
NORFOLK COUNTY COMMISSIONERS
James J. Collins, Chairman

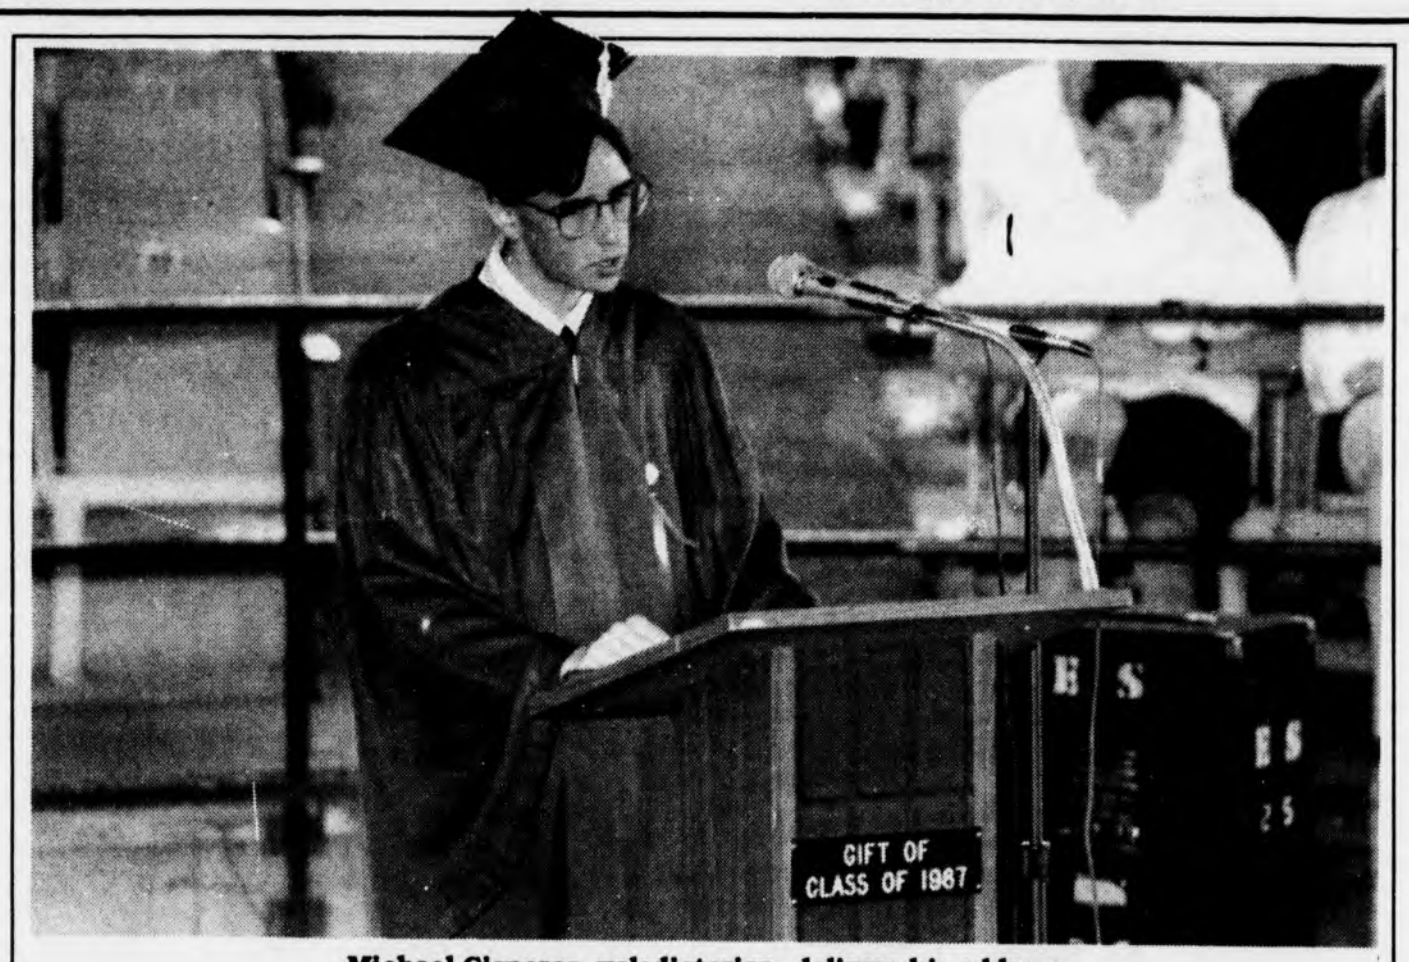
SAFE applauds Selectmen's decision



The Cohasset-based group S.A.F.E. last week applauded the unanimous vote last night of the Cohasset Board of Selectmen to immediately reject a proposal that Cohasset volunteer to take MWRA sludge.

"We applauded this swift and decisive action," said Alix White, President of SAFE. "The Selectmen's unanimous vote helps establish that there is no question that Cohasset does not want MWRA sludge, now or ever," said White. "We congratulate them for this vote, which is in the long-term best interests of all residents of Cohasset."

The Selectmen had recently received a letter from Environmental Affairs Secretary Susan Tierney, asking them whether they would be interested in offering Cohasset as an alternative to the Walpole sludge disposal site. It has been rumored that a special state commission chaired by Tierney had been secretly considering a site in Cohasset for MWRA sludge.

At the Selectmen's meeting May 29, SAFE presented the Selectmen with a petition, signed by over 200 Cohasset residents, which asked them to oppose accepting MWRA sludge. SAFE member John McNabb requested that the Selectmen vote to oppose taking MWRA sludge, and to take the vote immediately—which they did.

and as an act of generosity to the young people of Cohasset. John was a graduate of Boston College High School and the College of the Holy Cross. The scholarship, to be given annually, is to go to residents of Cohasset who are in attendance at Boston College High School and Holy Cross College. Mary Fleming has told me many times what a great and wonderful person her brother John is, I want to take just a moment to tell you about what a great woman Mary Fleming is.

Mary Fleming was 96 years old this month. She lives in a two story house on Parker Avenue here in Cohasset and cooks her own meals and goes up and down a steep flight of stairs every day. But don't feel sorry for Mary. She is so loved that you virtually have to wait in line to visit her!

Somewhere amongst you today sits a graduate who ranks 61st in this class of 86. I would like to direct my remarks at him or her today. The rest of you may listen also.

Actually 61, I hope that you really aren't aware of your class rank — any of you — although I guess that if you are number one or two that you can't help but know at this point, and if number 61 does know who he or she is — my message for today is to forget it — the fact that you are 61, anyhow. I certainly don't know who you are and except for someone who should happen to read your permanent school record, no one else will know who you are. I chose the number 61 simply because it is the equivalent position of number 33 in a class of 47 members. The Cohasset High School class of 1959 had 47 members. I speak to you today from that perspective.

1959 was a great time to be a teenager in a small town in America — especially a town like Cohasset. In fact I sense that 1959 is making a sort of comeback. I occasionally catch one of our great songs on the car radio — "Hello Baby" by the Big Bopper, "Splish Splash I was taking a Bath" by Bobby Daren, and even that all time classic — "Does Your Chewing Gum Lose its Flavor on the Bedpost Overnight." I notice that our cars are becoming hot again too — that '59 Chevy in which Dinah Shore suggested we see the USA seems to pop up in film after film.

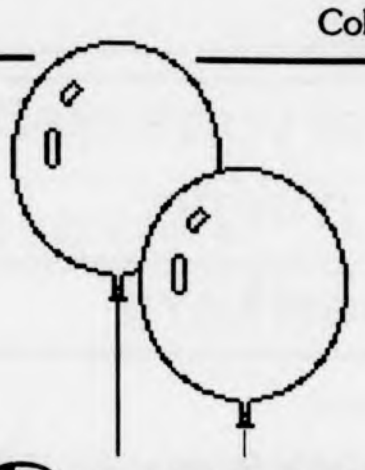
But we didn't really have '59 Chevy's in 1959, at least not me or my classmates at CHS. In fact I was in the minority as a car owner — a 1941 Dodge — a big long black Dodge with doors that opened out like this — A car that I acquired for $40 in cash from a wonderful old lady who had kept it locked in a barn for 15 years and who was convinced that Cohasset was about to be attacked by flying saucers — some of you out there might remember who I am referring to. Anyhow, I don't know if that car had anything to do with my winding up 33rd in the class of 1959 — but I'm sure that some of my teachers at the time felt that it had something to do with "my attitude" (they called it something else then — but you get the idea).

When I decided to run for the school committee for the first time in 1984 I was often asked why, and I can recall giving lots of different reasons at the time, and they must have sounded acceptable — at least acceptable enough to enable me to win. I'm not sure that we ever really know all of the forces or ideas that motivate us to do what we do. But I do realize today that there was another reason that I ran — and that is so I could stand up here today and tell you this story — especially to you number 61 — whoever you are!

When I told Superintendent Hart that I'd like to speak to the graduates I asked him if he would dig out my permanent record from the school archives. I told him I wanted to see it to refresh my memory. When he returned from the depths of the basement — do they keep all of the records down there Steve or just mine — he called my office and asked, "Are you sure that there wasn't another Chris Ford who graduated in 1959 other than the one who resided at 573 Jerusalem Road?" — Steve does have a sense of humor — He then chuckled in a sinister way and suggested that he could send the record home with my son Paul — No! I thanked him — You can mail it in a plain envelope sealed with tape. I wonder if I ever dreamed in 1959 that I would someday be telling the School Superintendent what to do — something that I could repeat in public!

Well, I've got that record here in my jacket pocket and I guess I've got some 'fessing up to do. Memory is a funny thing. You'll each discover that it gets a little fuzzy with the years and perhaps a little conveniently selective as well. My memory had told me that I got mostly b's and c's at good old Cohasset High School and essentially my memory was right — I did get mostly B's and C's — just the emphasis was misplaced. In fact — and this is my confession — as I scanned the final grades for each of my four years I discovered only two B's (what do those little dashes mean next to the B's Steve) — the rest were varying versions of a gentleman's C (I don't really have to confess to the two D's — do I Steve?)

I am having a little fun with this today but this isn't all that easy to do. After all I still have one more son with three more years of High School ahead of him and I suspect that there will be days yet when I regret this public confession. But I also know that while this may be a little difficult today that it is still a whole world easier than it would have been to publicly talk about 32 years ago. In fact as I stood at the back of the High School auditorium this past Thursday night and watched the awards ceremony in progress my memory started flashing back to that night 32 years ago when our graduation exercise was held in that same auditorium. Actually, I don't really remember the ceremony at all — but I do remember worrying about the ceremony. I don't recall that we had graduation rehearsals in those days and we weren't really sure what was going to happen — but this is what I imagined what would happen: I could picture myself being assigned to seat number 33 and having the numerals 33 emblazoned across the back of my robe for all to see. I then could picture the principal standing there and calling us up one at a time — from first to last naturally — with someone announcing over the loud speaker system for everyone in the surrounding communities to hear, "Lets have a nice hand for Mary — she'll be going to Swarthmore next year — on a full scholarship! Let's have a nice hand for Peter — he'll be going to Brown...and lets have a hand for Chris he is 142nd on the waiting list at Bridgewater Teachers College..." Or was I worried that they would just chuckle and announce that Chris was going to an institution in Bridgewater.



Of course none of that happened. No one knew that I was number 33. No one made fun of the fact that my best acceptance was a waiting slip notice from Bridgewater, and no one knew that I really cared what I imagined they knew.

I'm on the fence today as to whether I think there is any virtue in ranking — in numbering people — in classifying them by groups (in 1959 we only had two groups — College Prep and General — now if you are in College prep you're in third place behind those in advanced and honors!) Is ranking a source of motivation? By having winners and losers are we not enabling victors to strive to maintain their position and are we not giving the losers all the more challenge to have their day in the sun — as I'm having today! I really don't know — but as I'm sure is obvious, I have some doubts.

I recall an analysis by a noted European anthropologist who was observing a fourth grade classroom in a suburban American community in the mid-sixties. He recounted a scene of a young boy in front of a blackboard staring at the equation 9/12 while his teacher, at the back of the room kept encouraging him with "Henry, can't you think of a number that goes into both 9 and 12" — Meanwhile most of Henry's classmates were squirming in their seats waving their hands feverishly and after what must have seemed an interminable period to Henry, the teacher finally says "all right Martha — will you tell Henry what number goes into both 9 and 12." Does this strike any of you as a strange or rare occurrence worthy of further analysis by a European anthropologist trying to analyze American cultural patterns?

The anthropologist — whose name I can't remember — suggested that this scene told a lot of the American experience and his conclusions were unsettling. His impression was that Martha and her wriggling classmates were hoping that Henry wouldn't get the answer. His conclusion was that they were hoping that Henry would fail so that they would have an opportunity to win — and that this is not uncommon in American classroom and experience — that day in and day out we create environments for determining winners and losers. And so I ask: is this good? Is it beneficial? Did Henry learn any math in those excruciating moments or did he strengthen an attitude — an internal feeling towards Martha, his teacher, and his wriggling classmates? And what of Martha? What did this victory teach her. Was her math reinforced or was the fact that Henry had to lose before she could win the lesson of the day.

I dwell on this today because of another experience I had. After graduating from Bridgewater (yes, I finally got in about the first week of August and I did finally finish) and spending two years teaching in North Borneo as a Peace Corps Volunteer and then four years in graduate school I returned to the Pacific area as a young PhD teaching teachers in Micronesia. (I can just imagine the expressions on the faces of my old CHS teachers when they heard that Chris Ford was teaching teachers!) Anyhow, from time to time we would have occasion to discuss this scene of Henry and Martha in that fourth grade American classroom and invariably my students would be troubled by the image it presented and when I asked what would have happened had a similar scene taken place in their home island school they'd tell me that the classroom would have been quiet. That there would not have been the squirming and waving of hands — that there would have been sympathy for Henry for being in a situation which could cause him embarrassment — loss of face, if you will — and that ultimately one of his classmates might have found a way to get the answer to Henry. "They would have cheated?" I'd ask. "No," they'd answer, "they would have cooperated!"

Nine years in the Pacific changed many of my basic ideas about teaching and learning and about how to live and how to conduct a business.

Last year I was invited to be a teacher for a day at the Deer Hill School here in Cohasset — I asked for the fourth grade. I was very excited about the opportunity and as I prepared for it I thought a lot about Henry and Martha and I was determined that at the end of the day that I would not produce my version of the humbled Henry and the gloating Martha.

When I arrived and after taking roll call — I announced that we were going to start out with a math test (many groans) and that I was dividing the class into five random groups with a problem to solve — and that as a group they would have to come up with an answer. It was a fun problem. They had to analyze three proposed financial packages for a rookie baseball sensation named Bo Wackson. This was not a quiet class. The discussion got so heated and the noise level so great that emissaries were being sent from neighboring classrooms asking us to quiet things down. Anyhow, we had a great time with it and when the riddle was solved there were lots of smiles and I left feeling good. I felt like we had 24 winners that day — winners through cooperation within a framework of competition.

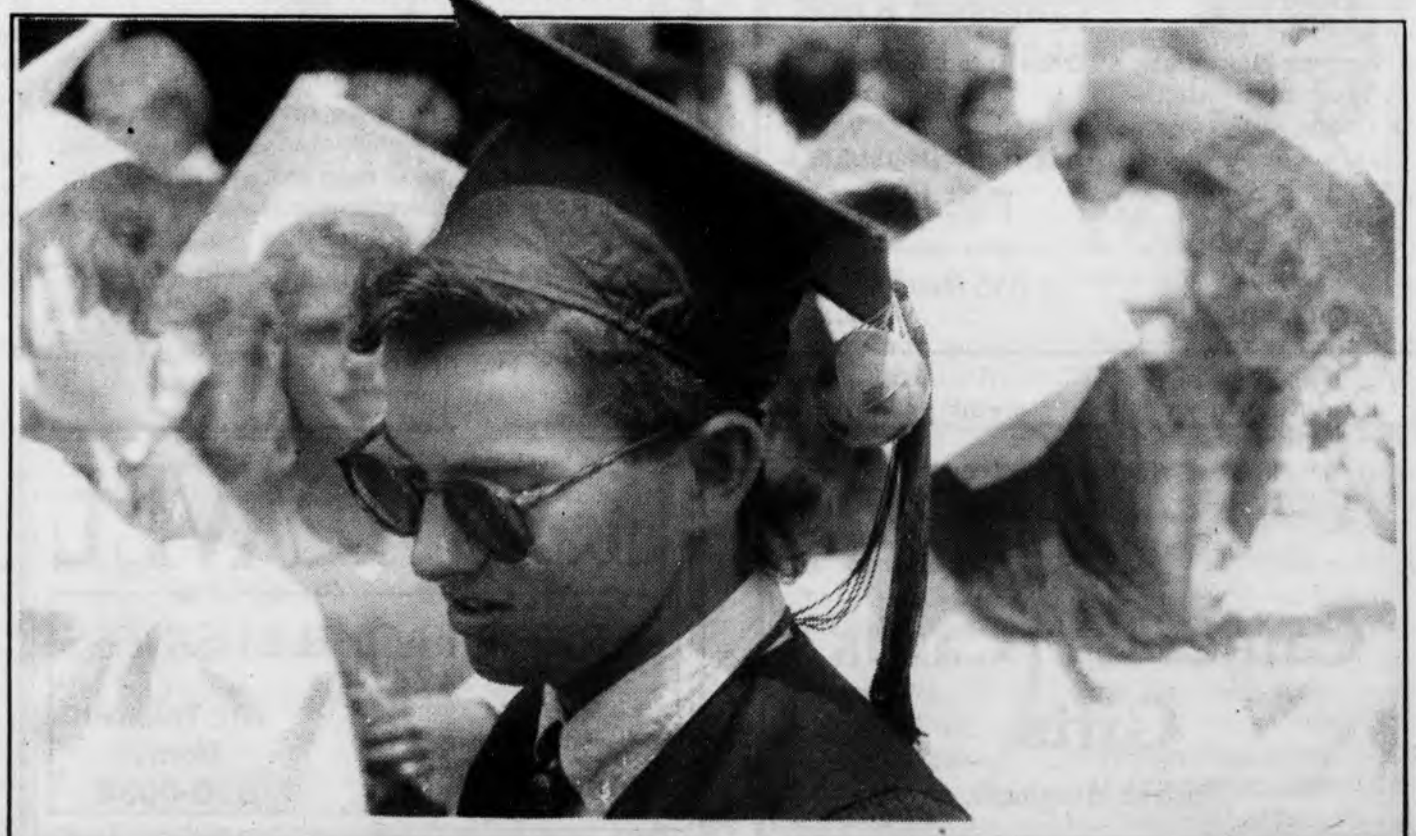
But let's be honest about this. Having winners and losers is here to stay. We will always have our Henry's and Martha's and our Lucy's and Charlie Browns; our number ones and our number 61s. I know that if I find myself on the 18th green tomorrow with my very best friend and he's standing over a four foot putt that will make him the winner (and me the loser) that my silent prayer as I gaze skyward will not be for his success! And I also know that should I be a loser that day it would only force me back to the practice range to work harder — so that the next time I might be the winner (and He the Loser). We continue to grow through our defeats and humiliations as well as through our victories.

But it is when we put too much emphasis on the rewards of competition and not enough on the benefits of cooperation that we stub our toes, as individuals, as school systems, as businesses, as societies, and as nations.



I find it interesting, to borrow another analogy from golf, that one of the more popular formats to emerge in this most individualistic and competitive of sports is the scramble or Florida format whereby all of the members of a foursome must advise and cooperate with one another as they alternate shots if the group is to have any hope of winning.

And in my business, the highly competitive business of real estate sales — we find day in and day out that it is more profitable to cooperate with our competitors than to compete or "wage war" with them and it is better for the buying and selling public as well. My own firm, which is made up of 25 very successful real estate brokers, many of whom owned their own firms at one time or another, is founded on the principle of cooperation. We've achieved, I believe, a unique blend of capitalism and communalism. We are all in business for ourselves and individually retain the rewards of our successes, yet we all share equality in most of our expenses and cooperate collectively so that each of us may be winners in the end.

So, after 49 years of trying to figure out what to do when I grow up — that's what number 33 in the class of '59 is doing today and those are some of my thoughts about life and society. I might add that my mother is still wondering what I will really do when I finally do grow up — but then that's what mothers are for! Isn't it.

So today, you graduates — now at the 17th or 18th year of your journey — today you are all winners. You have cleared a hurdle, and if you are number one or number two a special and sincere congratulations to you — congratulations on a job very well done — to this point. And if you are number 61 or 62 or somewhere before or somewhere after, congratulations to you as well, and keep in mind that however you finished, ranking-wise, that you are not walking out of here with that number emblazoned on your back. Today you are all declared equal. You are all graduates of one of the finest public schools — one of the finest schools — in the state of Massachusetts — and you are stepping out of here proudly today — to continue the first day of the rest of your life.

But I can't close without a special message for you, number 61, whoever you are. Would you do me a favor. Would you make a commitment to come back here in 32 years and share some of your experiences and observations with the class of 2023. Maybe you will be lucky like me and have a daughter or son of your own in that class. In any event would you invite me along. I'd love to sit out there and take it all in and if I'm in a position to do so I would like to be able to offer my version of the Mary Fleming Scholarship. Maybe it would go to number 61. Thank you.

Metco celebrates nearly a quarter of a century

One of the Mercurio children walks through the field at Deer Hill School during the Metco picnic last month.

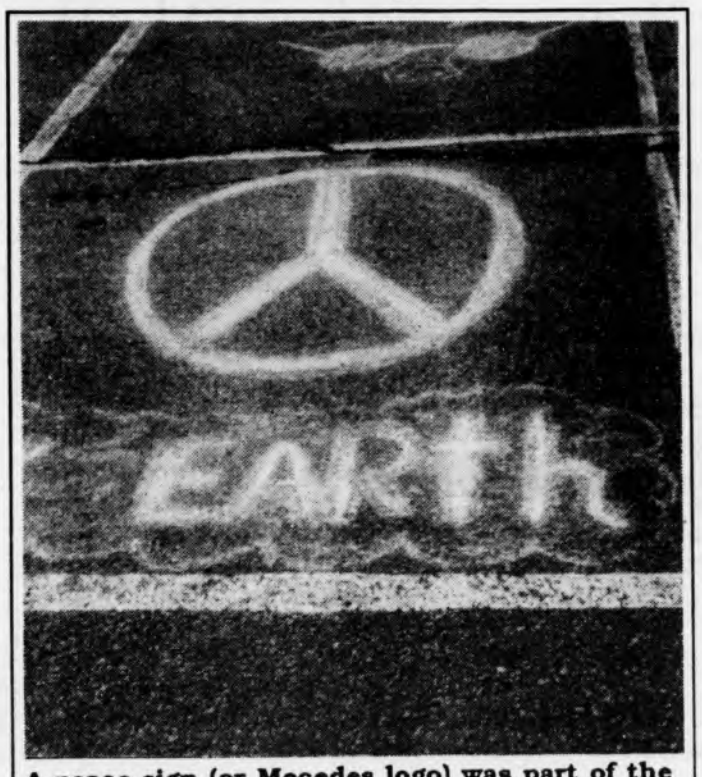
There were no losers at the Metco family picnic last month.

The host families, the Metco students families, school officials, school committee members — everyone at the Deer Hill School in the chilly weather was able to enjoy the warmth of friendship. They were all able to enjoy the success of a program that has existed in Cohasset for 23 years.

Pat Brown, the Metco coordinator, listed the official winners in the days events. Her list was extensive. There were winners in dancing and in chalk art.

Truth is there were no losers. Meanwhile the state budget debate may cause problems for the future of Metco.

But Nancy Sandell, school committee member, said the town is committed to continuing the program.



Joan Kovach of the PSO organized a bus tour of the town for the Metco families before the cookout and games got underway.

This year only one Metco student graduated from CHS — Tenae Bolling, whose host family, the Tolinis, live on Aaron River Road.

Next year there will be two Metco students in the senior class, Shawn Burgess and Oronde Bynoe-Allie.

The new junior class, however, will have nine Metco students. Most years there are three or four Metco students in a grade.

Among those awarded prizes at the celebration were: Erica Hettstrom, Katie Campbell, Ashley Brister, Kim Ullman, Julie Shea, Leigh Ann Walsh, Shimoya Johnson, Joanea Spencer, Katie Brister, Katie Ponstue, Tara Hettstrom, Daniel Trowers, Antoine Nuller, Kevin Andrews, Curtis Johnson, Jeffrey Brown, Raheem Sheppard, Courtney Allen, Raishaun Barboza, Maurice Johnson, Megan Waal, Meredith O'Hayre, Pat O'Hayre, Peter Kovach, Kyle Weber, Sean Connolly, Meagan Connolly and Emily Collins.

A peace sign (or Mecedes logo) was part of the chalk art at the Metco picnic.

Recreation programs heat up with the season

It's the hot season for the town recreation department — summer playground is around the corner, sports programs are on tap and Recreation Director Jack Worley is a busy man.

In the midst of all the work to get the summer season off the ground, Worley manages to issue beach stickers for just about every vehicle registered in town.

Beach sticker registration gets underway June 17 — for those people who like to park without wondering if the police are ticketting.

The answer is: Ticketting is already the rage in the beach parking lot.

Anyway, Worley has bothered to pull together lengthy descriptions of most of the programs that will happen under his auspicice this summer.

Telephone registration is possible for many programs.

From SCUBA diving, golf and tennis to basketball, baseball, soccer and dog obedience training, the recreation department hopes to attract the interest of the young and not-so-young.

Here's some information about what's happening:

Two water sport programs will be taught by Betsy Harling.

A snorkeling certification class will be offered and is open to those 12 and over. The cost of this 12 hour course consisting of six hours pool work and six hours classroom is $83 per person. An additional charge of $10 is necessary for rental of a vest.

SCUBA diving will also be taught by Harling. Children 12 (with parent or adult) or those over 15 may register. The cost of SCUBA Diving Class is $295 per person, which includes costs of charter boat for three open water dives, rental of most equipment, (hood, mitten and booties must be purchased), and text book. Diving sessions are 20 hours in duration with 10 hours water work and 10 hours classroom work. Medical clearance forms must be completed by each participant.

Golf lessons for beginning and intermediate players will be offered beginning June 19. They will be taught by Chuck Young.

Fee for the course is $45. Telephone registrations are being accepted. The beginners class runs from 6 to 7 p.m. and the intermediate class is 7 to 8 p.m.

Anyone without access to clubs should indicate that at registration.

A variety of summer sports camps for those 4 to 18 years are planned. Included will be four soccer camp programs conducted by South Shore Soccer Camp and V.I.P. Soccer Camps, for children and youth ages 4 to 18. Baseball and softball camps will be offered as well as basketball, lacrosse, mini-camp football and pro-play, a movement exploration camp for children age four to seven years. Registrations for both soccer camps and all four soccer camp programs and baseball and softball camps are being accepted. Brochures and registration forms, are available at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, first floor, town hall. South Shore Baseball Club, Hingham will provide both the baseball and softball camps this year at Miliken Field for baseball and CHS Front Field for softball, the week of June 24, Monday to Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. The cost for either the baseball or softball is $100 (discounts for additional children from same family also available). Registration forms may be obtained at the Recreation Office.

The South Shore Baseball Club of Hingham will conduct a one-week instructional baseball camp under the sponsorship of the Cohasset Recreation Commission, from June 24 to June 28, at Miliken Field in Cohasset. Registration for the five-day program is $100 per person.

This is the second year that the South Shore Baseball Club has conducted the Cohasset summer baseball program, which is open to boys and girls 6 to 18 years.

Daily sessions will be held Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., rain or shine. Youngsters will be divided for instructional purposes according to age, size, and ability. Instruction by SSBC's staff of coaches will include daily batting and fielding practice and demonstrations, lectures on baseball theory and techniques, and inter-club games.

The South Shore Baseball Club has a staff of coaches headed by Frank Niles, a former Boston College, Northeastern, and Suffolk University coach, as well as a Division I "Coach of the Year" at Weymouth South High. Vin Hillyer, a former Greater Boston MVP and an All America player at Brandeis, heads the staff of pitching instructors, and Chris Patsos, a former collegiate All America at Florida Southern College and coach of the SSBC team in the Cranberry Baseball League, is the catching coach. Other instructors include Dan McHugh, a former All New England standout at Bridgewater State, and Kevin Greer, a former collegiate All America pitcher at Westfield State.

A $50 deposit is required by June 14.

Classes for Beginner and Intermediate Dog Training taught by Laurie Cleveland have just gotten underway. Classes will be held Wednesdays on the Town Common. Beginner classes will be from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., and the Intermediate-Advanced class will be from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. The fee for the eight week program will be $40. Participating dogs should be a minimum of three months of age. The purpose of the beginner classes will be to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered are proper use of voice corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc. Helpful hints on ownership and responsibility will also be included. The training will include those exercises beneficial to pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dogs in obedience. The Intermediate-Advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the Recreation Department Beginner Class. For the classes, owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a choke chain. The proper size of the chain determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding 4 inches. No spike collars are allowed. For all classes: the fee is $40 per dog for the eight week, one hour per week program.

Basketball Camp, during the week of July 22, will be directed by Arnie Repucci and Paul Carroll. The basketball camp for boys and girls with elementary grades in the afternoons and junior high ages in the mornings. The price will be $75.

For more information, stop by town hall and pick up some brochures in the recreation office.

Weisenfluh delivers subliminally

By Bart Weisenfluh

Teachers, parents and friends: I'd like to welcome you all here on this special night (almost over) to celebrate the achievements of the scholarship (free money) and award winners.

I would also like to take a few moments to reflect on the special events (parties) that 1991 had to offer us in our last year of high school; for these are truly cherished moments that will be forever remembered as the things that shaped our generation (delinquents).

As I look back on the many months we spent diligently toiling over our schoolwork (blow off) and trying relentlessly to succeed at the race for acceptance to our favorite colleges (frat parties), I cannot help but wonder at the unity and camaraderie (cliques) that made our class so special.

It all began in September when we first stepped into our Senior year still tanned and sparkly-eyed (hangovers) from frolicking in the summer sun.

It didn't take long for everyone to re-acquaint themselves with the daily routine (boring) of student life.

Our sports teams (user's fee) found due success in their athletic endeavors, and many a Cohasset spectator (empty bleachers) was caught up in that mighty Skipper spirit.

There was Spirit Week and the traditional pep-rally, a blue and white (red) extravaganza of spirit.

While the Skippers challenged B.C. High on the football field, we celebrated our Homecoming court and honored our chosen king (should've won), Linc Marsac (Eaton) and our queen, Kara Manion.

The night's festivities at the Homecoming dance (Bowen's) added to our senior spirit as the yearbook (we'll never get it) Superlatives were announced.

I think I speak for the entire class when I express my sincere appreciation to the Cohasset Police Department (run for it) who helped to make this a safe evening for everyone.

The year moved on through the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays, and the mad rush of college applications (nervous breakdown) subsided some.

By day, we could be found in our own little sanctuary – the senior study (mess), a place where seniors could always study (skip) quietly during free periods and eat during lunch.

This, however, was not always a place of peace and relaxation (heavy metal) for, some minor problems (missing sofas) did arise during the course of the year. But, these little difficulties only unified our class into a stronger, more nuclear unit.

By night, we all felt overwhelmed by the limitless possibilities of entertainment (drive around) Cohasset had to offer us, with the Semiformal (left too early) at the peak of this excitement.

Soon enough, the spring rolled around as many of us eagerly awaited news (rejections) from our favorite colleges.

As we hung on (sign out) during the final days of school, our Senior year ended (psyche) like the blink of an eye.

And as I stand here tonight, I find it difficult to restrain my eagerness (dread) for the future. In today's world of infinite economic possibilities (recession), numerous job opportunities (unemployment), and with the intellectual foundation of a college education (can't afford it), achievement, in my eyes, seems imminent.

I thank you all (not really) for coming this evening. To my fellow classmates (lazy slobs), I can only say that I hope the future holds as much happiness and fun as our last year of high school did.

(Editor's note: Bart Weisenfluh, President of the Senior Class at Cohasset High, delivered this speech at Class Night May 30.)

Spring soccer is a kick

By Carol Riley

Perfect weather and great loads of enthusiasm have marked this season for the Coastal Youth Soccer League teams of Cohasset.

A team we haven't heard much about this year is the Boys Under 8-6, a feisty little machine composed mostly of first time players who are making their mark on the field. New to town from Chicago is "Crazy Legs" Dan Littauer, who has demonstrated an ability to move the ball downfield like a steamroller. Steady Matt Melkleham has shown a reliability on defense that has thwarted many opposition goals. Kicking Chris Carr proves that power is not measured by size and has frequently gotten the team out of trouble with a solid boot. As a wing, or in goal, fast traveling and determined Troy Cannistraro has been a mainstay to the team. Graceful Jeff Garber is a natural who swoops downfield, interrupting the efforts of surprised older and larger players. Tenacious Nick Laas has played with great enthusiasm for the game and consistently improves his moves. Dean Grinnell, the star defenseman, has dazzled the fans with his 20 yard boot action to take the ball out of opposition scoring position. Speedy David Ingber hustles after the ball on offense and defense, playing with a fierce intensity. Peter Kovach is a standout two way player, doing as well in center as he does stealing goals from opponents in goal. The team boasts neither a second grader on their roster, nor a win in their record, but they have shown enormous love for the game and progress through the season. Their sportsmanship (no spitty palms for this class team) and improvement over the course of this soccer season make them a group of players to watch.

Another unheralded but persistent young team is the Boys Under 8-4, who though losing their last two games showed great energy. They recently lost 7-2 to the formidable Boys Under 8-1 team of Cohasset, with William McAuliffe scoring two goals. John Cotter was voted First Star for his complete hustle at both ends of the field. William Prendergast was a tiger at forward in this game. Last Saturday, Boys Under 8-4 lost to Boys Under 8-2 by a score of 5-2, this time the two goals were scored by Jimmie French. Charlie Anderson showed nifty moves at forward, according to coach Paul Cotter.

Boys Under 10-1 recently demolished Pembroke 5-3, with Charlie Dean scoring his third hat trick of the season with three goals, Scott Chisholm and Eric Hanian scored one each on assists by Marc Verrochi (3) who won the playmaker award, Wiley Wakeman (2 assists), Ben Peterson (2) Scott Chisholm (2), and Doug O'Brien (10.) Sharing duties as goalkeeper, Eric Hanian made five saves; Scott Chisholm made ten.

Last weekend Boys Under 12-2 whipped Marshfield 6-0 in a home game with goals by Greg Bilton (2), Nate Cotter, Derek Bugley, Justin Golden and Andrew Singleton. Setting up goals with brilliant assists and playmaking were John Kasameyer, Noel Grinnell and Ryan McWilliams, who was voted his first star for inspired play at midfield. Andrew Ross in his first ever appearance in goal made several spectacular saves in earning this shutout. Last Saturday, Boys Under 12-2 lost a heartbreaker at home to a very strong Norwell team 7-0. Despite the score, playing formidably at midfield according to coach Paul Cotter were Brian Donovan, Bobby Meehan and Tom Leahy.

Girls Under 14-1 copped another big win, this time over Hingham 6-0 with goals by Melinda Johansen (3), Andrea Mercurio, Tammy Maitland and Katie Ross. This was the fifth shutout by goalkeeper Emily D'Urso. Exceptional on defense were Dawn Meehan and Jessica Snow; at midfield: Allison Ritts and Jamilah Afshar. This team suffered its first loss of the season last Saturday to a strong Plymouth squad, 5-1, with Danielle Nohe scoring Cohasset's single goal. Coach Nino D'Urso commended fine play by Corinna McMackin on defense and Martina Snyder and Molly Pease at midfield.

Girls Under 14-2 outdid themselves in a 3-1 victory over Plymouth despite the fact that Cohasset was missing five players. The passing skills of this team blew by the powerful Plymouth team. Emily Collins and Kathleen Fitzsimmons in half back were always there to pass the ball to key players. Stopper Lauren DeVito and Caitlin Connolly along with fullback Maureen Murphy were fantastic at keeping Plymouth from scoring, commented coach, Sandy Theriault. Last Saturday the Girls Under 14-2 tied Hingham 2-2 with goals by Catie Campbell and Emily Collins. Kelly O'Donnell and Megan Fahey shared goalkeeping duty in excellent form. Maureen Murphy won the playmaking award in this close contest.

Girls Under 10-2 tied Duxbury 1-1 in a home game with Cohasset's single goal by Alexandra DeRosa (who also hit the goalpost three times). Alissa Conley played a super game in goal, making several impressive saves. Jacquelen Kahn at midfield and Jill Magner and Brianne McKenney on defense won the game stars. Last Saturday Girls Under 10-2 lost a tight contest to Pembroke 3-2 in Pembroke. Alexandra DeRosa scored both goals for Cohasset (she has scored eight goals in six games played). According to coach Nino D'Urso, this was one of the most exciting games of the season with tremendous fan support. A tough one to lose. Featured players for Cohasset: Tara Hettstrom on defense, Eileen Ridge and Victoria DeRosa at midfield, and Lydia Crafts at forward.

Hits and hustle mark baseball action

By Joan Kovach
League correspondent

Over the course of the last 13 games, major league performers have continued to provide some of the best entertainment in town with new heroes and surprising upsets at every turn.

On Monday, Joe Magner's fifteen K's did not keep Matt Lewis from going 2 for 3. Greg Bilton also had a hit for the Dodgers in this Red Sox rematch. For the Sox, Andy Hamilton and Bobby Meehan were both 3 for 3, crossing the plate three times. Rookie Kyle Bunstein was 3 for 4, and played magnificently at his first start at first base. For the Dodgers, John Paul Lacks gave an awesome catching performance until he injured a thumb. Injuries have plagued the Dodgers who began this season with four straight wins. Lacks' injury took him out for at least a week and pitcher, shortstop, clean-up hitter Justin Buckley remains on the injured list.

Mark Equi, called up from the minors by the Dodgers began his major league career in time for the riveting Mets-Dodgers game that featured 5 lead changes and ended with a 9-8 game for the jubilant Mets. In what some described as the most exciting game of the year, the Mets clawed back repeatedly from Dodgers' leads, no small task against Matt Lewis' 10 K pitching effort. In the final inning the Mets ran around a one out 8-6 situation to score three runs. A total team effort by the Mets who never quit on themselves featured 8 K's by pitcher Greg Taylor who was 2-4 at bat and made a key hit. Other batters were Ely Kahn 4-4, Larry Adams, also up from the minors, with a rally starting double, Frank Abadie 1-3 and Taylor Devin with a back breaking single. Dodgers' batters Greg Bilton, Jeremy Williams, Bobby Stansill, Burke Davis and Tucker Gledhill all had hits and Dennis Rooney and Matt Lewis contributed a double each.

Justin Golden was terrific in his first start of the year. He went all the way in a Pirates-Sox face off with a four hitter. Jamie DeMichele continued to powder the ball going 2-3 with doubles as did Joe Magner. Pat Hurley was sensational at short with an unassisted double play and six outstanding put outs, many of them rally ending outs that sealed the win for the Sox.

The Dodgers came off the long weekend in fine form and tackled the A's on Tuesday with a frenzy of hits including Greg Bilton's fence clearing home run, rookie Mark Equi's inside the park homer, David Hanson's near homer double and a duce by Jim O'Sullivan. John Paul Lacks, back off the injured list, got a hit as well. Matt Belson did an outstanding job behind the plate and David Hanson played well in outfield. Pitchers Bilton and O'Sullivan combined forces for the win.

Scott Van Hartesvelt pitched 10 strike-outs, giving up only three walks in Wednesday's contest against the Cardinals, who scored 6 runs but could not match the Pirates 11. Mark Connolly was 3 for 3 with 2 doubles, a single and 4 RBI's. Paul Michael Quentin went 3 for 4 with 2 singles and a double.

In another classic Mets vs. Red Sox game, two awesome pitchers faced each other. Joe Magner struck out 12 batters. Winning pitcher Greg Taylor was asked to go the distance and he did, with 6 strike outs and great control throughout the game. Ted Reardon assumed the D.H. position and clouted out 2 doubles, scoring two runs as well. J.L. Williams' base clearing triple drove in all the runs the Mets would need in the third inning. Fans were treated to heads up fielding by Cameron, Taylor, Kahn, Williams and Abadie.

Mets bats lit up in their second game in as many nights on Friday as they exploded with 16 runs. Frank Abadie was 4-4. In another total team effort, hits by Daniel Steel, Patrick Leahy, Brian Walsh and Larry Adams helped crank up the numbers. All star glove play by Sam Goedecke, Greg Taylor, Abadie, Kahn, Williams and Cameron featured exciting throw outs, or gracefully grabbed hot grounders. Ramana Lagemann, Joel Puerro and Larry Adams ran the bases brilliantly and Taylor Devin took the win with 10 K's.

The Dodgers were feeling good and rebounded with their second win of the week after a two game slump with a complete team effort of strong pitching, defense, hitting and baserunning. John Paul Lacks was great behind the plate; Bobby Stansill was excellent at first. Nice fielding by Burke Davis who also stole home successfully. David Marr, Jeremy Williams and Mark Equi added to the list of hits. For the Cardinals, Steve Baker braved Matt Lewis's 11 strike out performance gaining two hits and helping the Cards achieve their mark on the scoreboard.

Finally, Saturday night's Red Sox-Athletics game was the kind that makes a visiting viewer remark, "These kids really know how to play baseball, don't they?" Sean Cogill's top of the 6th homer drove in 3 runs to start a major rally. His efforts were supported by good hits from Eric Hanian, Morgan Sandell and Jeff Flanagan. Sox rookie Jeff Thompson hit a base clearing double and scored a run in his debut as D.H. Andy Hamilton drove in 3 RBI's on a 2 for 3 day. Kyle Bunstein had a golden glove at first, handling 3 hot shots to him, while Justin Golden went all the way to pick up his 2nd win in a row by collecting 6 K's. Wide-awake fielding plays by Mike Rossi and Pat Murphy to make 2 put-outs at second base for the A's combined with smart base running by Josh Flanagan, Ian Simons and Adam Sasso in that 6th inning rally to make it an exciting evening. Tom Kittle and Matt O'Connor shared the catching duties while Ben Ketchum and Sean Norris went three innings each on the hill demonstrating the A's bench depth.

With barely two weeks left of this inspiring Little League season, now is the time to leave the laundry and lawnmower, the term papers or the bulging briefcase of unfinished office work and catch our local stars over mom-made nachos and a coke. See you there.

CHS Girls tennis players are league all stars

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff.

Five members of the Cohasset High School's girls' tennis team have been named as South Shore all-stars, the most from any team in the league.

According to coach Betty Zadel, the all-star nominations were "the highlight of a great season."

"It is an honor within the league," she said. "They are in some real good company. It was the most selections on any team."

Although the team didn't have the record it hoped for (it finished the season 12-4, the same record as last year), its talent was still enough to get it to the state championships.

Zadel said even though the team was losing five valuable seniors, she is optimistic that younger talent on the team will continue to develop.

Sophie Redfield, the team's top singles player who sported an 8-5 record, was one of those names as an all-star.

Zadel said that although Redfield "started off the season shaky" due to an illness, she "managed a respectable finish."

The team's top doubles team, seniors Ellen Schramm and Rebecca Jordan, was also named as all-stars.

The team's two other all-stars, juniors Kathleen Conroy and Corrinna Minnar, managed a 15-1 record during the season.

Zadel said their achievements were impressive because it was their first year playing together.

Zadel said sophomore Karyn Murray, the team's second singles player, had an 11-5 record, and was a solid player,.

"She was real strong for us," she said, adding that Murray would be with the team next year to continue her winning ways.

Zadel said sophomore singles player Nicole Bieryla, with an 11-2 record, would be a part of the team's future.

She said returning players, sophomore Jessica Pyfrom and eighth grader Alexis Zerendow, were expected to fill the void left by graduating seniors Nicole Greco and Kate McNamara.

Laura Slotnick, a seventh-grader, is another building block for the team's future Zadel said.

"I have high hopes for her," she said.

She said Slotnick, who played singles four times this year, is "definitely promising."

Zadel said that even though the team was eliminated in the first round of the state tournament Monday, they should have no regrets.

She said Walpole, the team that eliminated them, was the top-ranked team at the tournament.

"It was a very decent season," she said, adding that the all-star awards were a great way to end a well-played year.

farm league news

By John Kinchla

DODGERS

The Farm League Dodgers in their pale blue jerseys and hats have been playing ball with surgical precision. The team sponsored by Dr. Barry Tufts DMD has been dishing out its own form of "good medicine" against opposing clubs.

Several boys have been drilling the ball. Jerry Etienne and David Ellis have been hammering opposing pitchers with multiple base hits. Dave Ingber has been administering the "laughing gas" with his clutch hitting and exuberant base running. Jeffrey Gaber spins around the bases with heart stopping speed, stitching up RBI's with his every visit to the plate.

Skilled infielders, Brian Lewis, Beth Smoot, Curtis Kahn and Ryan Johnson provide a strong resistance to stealthy enemy batters while the Dodger outfielders Alexander Etkind, Barry Tufts and Dave Ellis fill the cavities behind them.

Providing outstanding coaching to this exceptional farm league team is veteran Coach Kevin Lewis, John Smoot, Steve Etkind and Barry Tufts. This team has fabulous fan support and sells out most every contest.

The United Liquors ORIOLES

The United Liquors ORIOLES coached by Farm League veteran Bob Ernst and Jay Lanzilotti have a commanding presence on the field and potent bats at the plate.

Defensively, Andrew Guild, D. J. Lanzilotti, Greg Ernst, Joel Carpenter and Greg Harrington provide infield strength, while Terry and Morgan Hurley, John Jerz, John Judge and Mike McMillan bring skill to the outfield.

Burly Greg Harrington plays first base with speed and range, while Joel Carpenter sparks the club from the third base side. Between them Greg Ernst and D.J. Lanzilotti can turn a quick double play from their positions of second and shortstop. Andrew Guild also holds down the "hot corner" at third base and rotates in the outfield.

The United Liquor Orioles have played the METS, Yankees, the powerful Astros and the A's to a draw. They play the Giants on Saturday, June 8, and Cardinals June 15 and Pirates June 22 to end the season. Thus far, they have played very exciting baseball.

METS

On Saturday, May 25, the Pompeo Mets clashed with the Yankees in a memorable contest. The Mets displayed solid skills in the able gloves and strength at bat of Peter Maitland, Jake Morgan and Adam Merrill. Several key plays at first base by Sarah Motley cut short threatening drives. The Martin brothers, Liam and Jari, brought strength in both infielding and hitting with multiple base hits and key base coverage. Long ball hitting by Ben Kinch and Greg Smith added several runs to score. The seasoned fielding of Doug McGlaughlin and Dustin Wonnell combined in several innings to squelch Yankee base runners.

Swimmers try out

The Cohasset Swim Team will hold tryouts on Friday, June 14 from 3 to 5 p.m., and on Saturday June 15 from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m.

Diving Team tryouts will be Saturday, June 15 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tryouts will be held at the Cohasset Swim Center on Sohier Street. Registration will take place from 3 to 5 p.m. on Saturday, June 15 directly after the posting of the team roster. Age groups range from eight and under to 16 and under.

Last year, swimming was for the first time a varsity sport at Cohasset High School with the team finishing third in the Pilgrim Conference Championships, defeating North Quincy and Sandwich. Four of our swimmers were named to the Pilgrim Conference Championship Squad, and three were named Boston Globe All Star swimmers. The team has openings for both swimmers and divers, and boys who will be in grades seven through 12 next year are encouraged to participate in the summer swim program as a preparation for swimming on the Cohasset High team.

Raffle to finance batting cage

This year Cohasset Little League is holding a batting cage raffle. All raffle proceeds will go towards the purchase of a metal batting cage, which will offer years of service to the entire town.

Tickets are being sold at $100 each. The minimum prize is $1,000; the maximum prize is $5,000. The actual prize will be exactly one-half of ticket sales. No more than 100 tickets will be sold, so the odds of winning will never exceed one in 100. The drawing will be held on June 8 at the Little League Picnic. The last name drawn will be the winner.

If 100 tickets are sold, the prize equals $5,000 and the odds equal one in 100. If 50 tickets are sold, the prize equals $2,500 and the odds equal one in 50. If 20 tickets are sold, the prize equals $1,000 and the odds equal one in 20.

Tickets may be obtained from any team coach.

Good Sport Award

Congratulations to all Little League players considered for the Good Sport award. The selection committee simply could not single out one individual from so outstanding a group. Accordingly, there will be no award presentation at the Little League picnic. Cohasset parents should be very proud of the fact that so many of the children involved in Little League baseball have exemplified the qualities of good team work, respect toward coaches and umpires, fairness, enthusiasm and sportsmanship.

Picnic for Little League

The Little League Picnic is just a day away. Mark your calendars for June 8 at 11:30 a.m. The picnic will be held at Barnes Little League Field on North Main Street. In addition to hot dogs, burgers, and lemonade, there will be plenty of gate prizes, baseball trivia questions and of course the announcement of the batting cage raffle winner.

After the fun and food, stick around for the major league all-star game. Representatives from each major league team, selected by their teammates, will play. For those who did not pay at the time of registration, the cost of the picnic is $5 per family.

New support group

A Caregivers Support Group sponsored by the Cohasset Council on Aging will be held on the first Tuesday of the month from 7 to 9 p.m. at Cohasset Community Center, 3 No. Main Street.

It will provide emotional support for family members and to assist in accessing resources to help manage home care of loved ones.

Art Festival/Harborfest

The Art Festival/Harborfest was featured on Bob Detweiler's Cable TV Show shown Wednesday, June 5, at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 3 in Hingham, Norwell and Hanover and again on Tuesday June 11 at 8 p.m. on Channel 53 in Cohasset, Scituate, Hull and the three towns listed above.

60 Plus celebrate

Cohasset Sixty-Plus Club will have a luncheon on Thursday, June 13 at Kimballs By the Sea. Social hour is 11:30 a.m. Be sure to call in your reservation. George and Bertha will be on hand to give their musical numbers.

Harborfest is for all

Whether a grandparent or toddler, parent or teenager, there will be loads of family fun for everyone at the South Shore Art Center's Art Festival and Cohasset Harborfest, June 21 to 23. The SSAC Art Festival opens with a special Senior Citizens Day on Friday, June 21 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Admission is free and refreshments will be available. Come to the Art Center at 119 Ripley Road to enjoy the President's Choice Exhibition: ALI "Beyond the Big Top," the Members Exhibit, and Cohasset's Community Garden Club "Art Interpretations" Exhibit. Then stroll up to the Common to see the Juried Art and Juried Photography Exhibits under the tents.

Do some creative shopping at the Craft Artisans Market, featuring over 60 various craft artisans, while listening to the Carillon Concert and performance by The South Shore Conservatory of Music. If you're looking for a bit of afternoon drama, the Cohasset Dramatic Club will offer their original production, "The Kids of Konahasset." There will be restroom facilities and handicap access.

Saturday, treat the family to the Harborfest's Pancake Breakfast ($2.50/person) at the Cohasset Community Center from 8 to 10 a.m. Then return to the Common and Art Center for more family fun. While mom and dad observe the various artist demonstrations scheduled throughout the day, the kids can drop into art workshops to hone their creative skills. Harborfest Water Games will keep the Harbor hopping Saturday afternoon while the South Shore Concert Band will keep feet tapping Saturday evening on the Far Common. A Harborfest Youth Concert from 7 to 9 p.m. in Cohasset Village will finish off the evening.

Art Festival/Harborfest activities continue Sunday from noon to 5. The Blessing of the Fleet at 1 p.m. at the Harbor will be followed by a parade of boats. Then a host of participants, including the young artists from the children's drop-in workshops, will take their Marching Parade from the Harbor to the Common at 2:30. Bring your appetites to the Honor Roll Courtyard in Cohasset Village for the Chowder Contest from 3 to 5 p.m. ($2.50/person). Then cross your fingers for good luck at the Art Raffle drawing at 5 p.m.

The three day event offers many fun and creative opportunities to participate in, appreciate, and contribute to the arts. There will be plenty of food, fun, and festivities for everyone so come on down. For a complete schedule of events, call 383-9548.

Calling all tennis players

Join the fun, be challenged and exert yourself by participating in the Cohasset Community Center Benefit Round Robin Tennis Tournament scheduled for June 28, 29 and 30, rain or shine. Registration deadline is June 10. Call 383-0088 for forms and information.

The Adult Tournament will be held on Saturday and Sunday, June 29 and 30 at private courts in Cohasset and Scituate. There will be doubles matches in Mixed, Men's and Women's categories in Beginner, Intermediate, Advanced, Club "Pro" and Wheelchair levels. The registration fee of $30 will benefit Community Center Programs. The price includes a tournament T-shirt, can of balls and "Point-After" Party.

The "Point-After" Party will be held at the Community Center on June 29 from 5 to 8 p.m. There will be hors d'oeuvres and a cash bar. The general public and friends who have not participated in the tournament are invited, although there will be a charge of $5.

The Youth Tournament for ages 18 and under will be held on Friday, June 28. The $10 entrance fee includes a tournament T-shirt, can of balls and a "sundae" party. Sign up for either Advanced, Intermediate or Beginner categories.

Register at the Community Center before June 10.

senior center news

By Kathy Bryanton

The senior outreach worker establishes one-to-one contact with seniors in the community who may be isolated and unaware of services. Outreach is "bridging" the needs of the elders with available resources.

It helps enable senior citizens to remain in their homes as long as possible with assistance from local, state, and federally funded services.

A referral is made to outreach, contact is established, a home visit is made, an assessment is completed and a referral is suggested or made (by the Outreach Worker) to the appropriate agency. Referrals may be for home delivered meals, transportation, homemaking services, lifeline, food stamps, weatherization, SHINE, social day care or adult day health facilities, New Friends, social services through the Social Service League, Elders at Risk or various support groups. A new program is now being formed under the outreach program called "Caregivers Support Group" which will be held on the first Tuesday of the month from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Community Center. The purpose of the group is to provide emotional support for family members and to assist in accessing resources to help manage home care to loved ones. If you are interested in attending, please call Sue Connolly at 383-9112.

NURSING HOME OMBUDSMAN

The South Shore Elder Services Nursing Home Ombudsman Program is looking for volunteers to help ensure quality of life for nursing and rest home residents. Become an ombudsman in this unique program!!! The next training program begins June 4, 1991 at So. Shore Elder Services, 639 Granite St., Braintree. Please call 383-9790 if interested.

COFFEE HOUR WITH GAIL SLATER

Tuesday, June 11, at 11 a.m. Gail Slater will be available to discuss the subject "Elders Drugs: Harm more than heal?" This talk will outline the latest research on drug interaction among elderly patients recently admitted to hospitals and when they return home again. This program is part of a year long drug and alcohol awareness program sponsored by So. Shore Elder Services and Vista.

SPECIAL DAYS IN JUNE

FLAG DAY - Friday, June 14.

S H I N E - Serving Health Insurance Needs of the Elderly.

This program offers assistance to any senior citizen with health insurance questions or concerns. A certified volunteer is available at the Senior Center on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays to help you:

Complete medical insurance claim forms.

Understand medical bills and insurance benefit claim forms.

Examine the choice of supplemental Medicare insurance and/or long term care insurance. Home visits can be arranged for those persons who are unable to visit the center. If you have any questions or would like an appointment, call 383-9112.

Kasperowicz has no regrets about squealing

commentary

By Peter Kasperowicz

Tinytown tribulations continue this week, right on schedule. Alas, our regular commentator is burnt out this week, and was last seen yelling about Gov. Weld's promise to bring a molded salad to the next Flying Scot party, or something like that.

After living at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, for the past three years, I have some stories of my own that I'd like to share. Perhaps, hidden in the innocent guise of the many student-run groups, we can find the origins of Tinytown politics.

After appearing in a play two semesters ago, I found student-run theater enjoyable enough that I accepted a nomination to run for a board position. I was made membership coordinator and put in charge of planning the banquet held at the end of the semester. The banquet is looked forward to as a chance to dance, unwind and not worry about theater, and I looked forward to making it fun.

That is, until board members began asking me if they could go for free.

I was confused. I knew we were charging general members $10, and non-members could go for $12. I heard somewhere that the "tradition" was for board members to attend at no charge. We had lost around $3,000 on our musical production, mostly because no one paid attention to the budget - another essay for another time. There were rumors going around that said student group funding would be down next year. If the 16-member board went for free, that would be $160 less for the group. Basically, I was concerned that we were giving free rides when we just couldn't afford it.

I brought it up at a board meeting and suggested that we all pay with our own money instead of eating for free at the group's expense. The other side claimed that "we deserve it, we worked so hard," and "it's a tradition," so we voted on it.

Board members go for free: 15. Board members pay: 1.

I was disgusted. When I asked the board if we had the right to just vote ourselves to the banquet for free, one board member said, "The members will never know anyway. And if they ask, just keep your mouth shut."

Ever since kindergarten, I've been told that no one likes a squealer. All my teachers were right. When I told the general membership that the board voted itself to the banquet free of charge, I made few friends that day. My announcement caught most of the board members off guard and they were silent for most of the discussion.

It was amazing; I wouldn't have minded if the membership gave the board a free lunch. The board worked hard and probably deserved something for it. But once the group heard about the board's "private" election, they decided the board should pay (19-3).

Apparently, the membership was concerned with the group's money situation. Imagine that.

This is the actual flak I received from the board during evaluations, which were held after the banquet:

"We were totally caught off guard by what you said. Even if we tried to defend ourselves, it would have looked like we were lying." (If you were responsible to the group, nothing I said could ever scare you speechless.)

"You should have at least told us you were going to do that." (And give you enough time to concoct some lame excuse?)

"You painted us in such a bad way, the membership was bound to vote the way they did." (I'm not a painter. I reported the events at one of our board meetings.)

"You brought it up at the worst time." (Oh, please.)

"I felt attacked." (You were. You're a crook.)

"I was very upset. I love this group and I would never hurt this group." (Except for that free meal you tried to take on the group's account.)

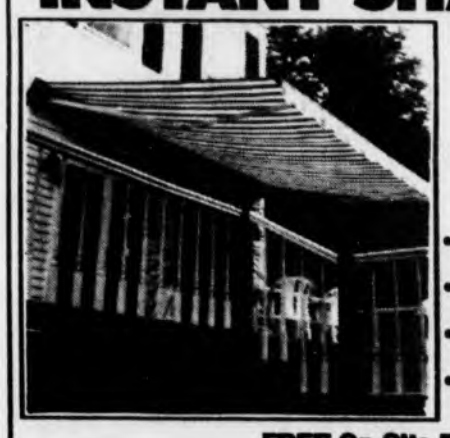
"It's a tradition that the board goes out to lunch and goes to the banquet for free." (Beheading people was a tradition, too.)

"The free meal is a chance for the membership to thank the board for all the work that was done." (YOU thanked yourself.)

"If I can't go for free, then I can't afford the banquet at all." (Many of the members face the same dilemma.)

"The money isn't what I'm upset about." (See you at the banquet.)

They soon realized they had to be more careful. Another board tradition was to get pizza during the evaluations, charged to the group's account. That was cancelled soon after I squealed because "the membership might find out and complain."



Any elected board carries with it an inherent danger: those elected might soon feel that they are deserving or elite. Do you see it? It starts in small places and works its way up, like a politician. And it's wrong. Officials are elected to represent the people's interests, and they work at the will of the people. It's a trust.

"Keep your mouth shut." Does that sound like trust?

I learned something important last semester. People who don't want to talk are afraid of talking. It's easy to see why elected officials go batty when people go over their heads. They want you to "go through the proper channels." Why? So they can neutralize any threatening information before it gets out to the public.

I have no regrets about squealing. Assuming a privilege is the first mistake officials make. Take one free lunch and that's it, they've already dropped the ball.

Town and unions negotiating tough

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

By the end of the summer, five unions representing Cohasset town employees may be without contracts.

Contracts for firefighters, custodians, librarians and clerical workers are either currently overdue or nonexistent.

The contract for the police department expires on June 30 and the contract for Cohasset teachers will expire on August 31.

Since the fire department's contract expired nearly one year ago, negotiations have been locked in a stalemate.

According to Executive Secretary Greg Doyon, talks between the fire department and the town are now in a fact-finding stage, the last step before mediation.

He said that several weeks ago, the two sides agreed to retain an impartial fact-finder, chosen from a list provided by the joint labor management committee.

Earlier this week the fact-finder began work on a report on the state of the town and the union.

Doyon said the report will assess a wide range of criteria pertinent to negotiations.

"He will look at the town's financial situation, and comparable wages," Doyon said, explaining that the report will address whether the union's demands are in line with other communities, and if the town can afford them.

If both parties agree with the report's conclusions, negotiations will continue.

Doyon said agreement with the terms of the report

Ellery Clark Sr. in Hall of Fame

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The late Ellery Clark Sr. was elected last week to the National Track and Field Hall of Fame in Indianapolis, Indiana.

"He was an all-around athlete, he was an all-around man," said his son, Ellery Clark Jr., after being told of the honor.

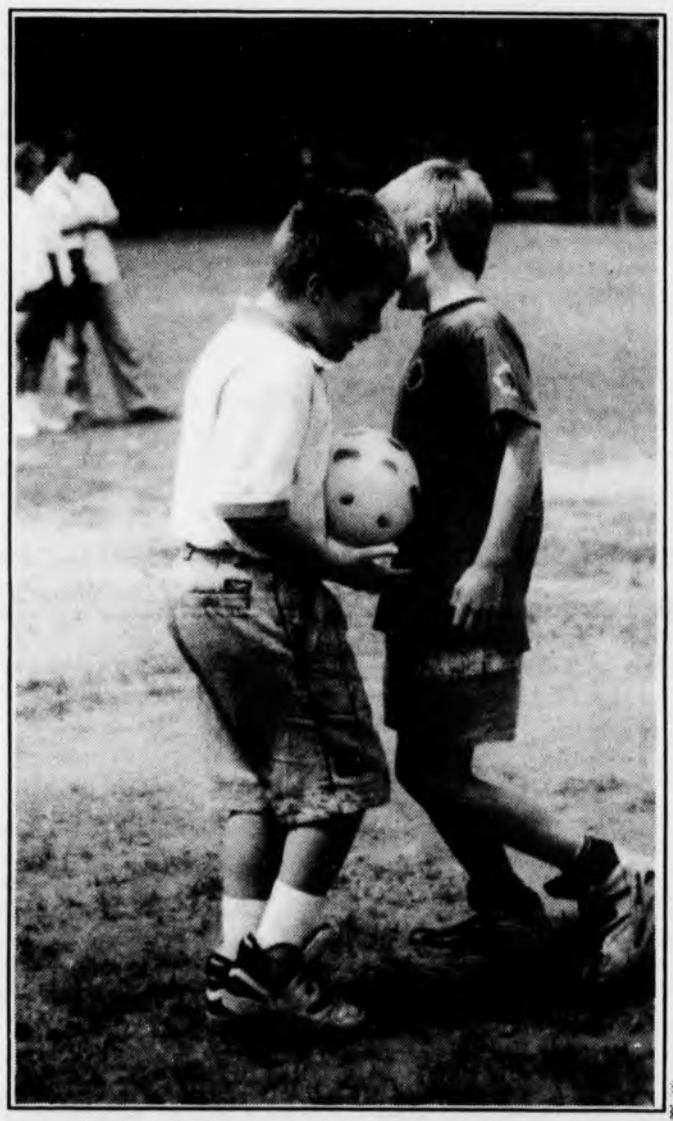
Clark, who is an athlete on the senior citizen circuit, helped his father achieve distinction in at least one area. Earlier this year the father and son team set a new national record as the "oldest father and son combo to win mile walks for the same club."

The senior Clark died in 1949. A graduate of Harvard, he was born in 1874. He was 75 when he died. While at Harvard he pursued a rigorous course of athletics mixed with his studies. He was a member of the Boston Athletic Association, B.A.A.

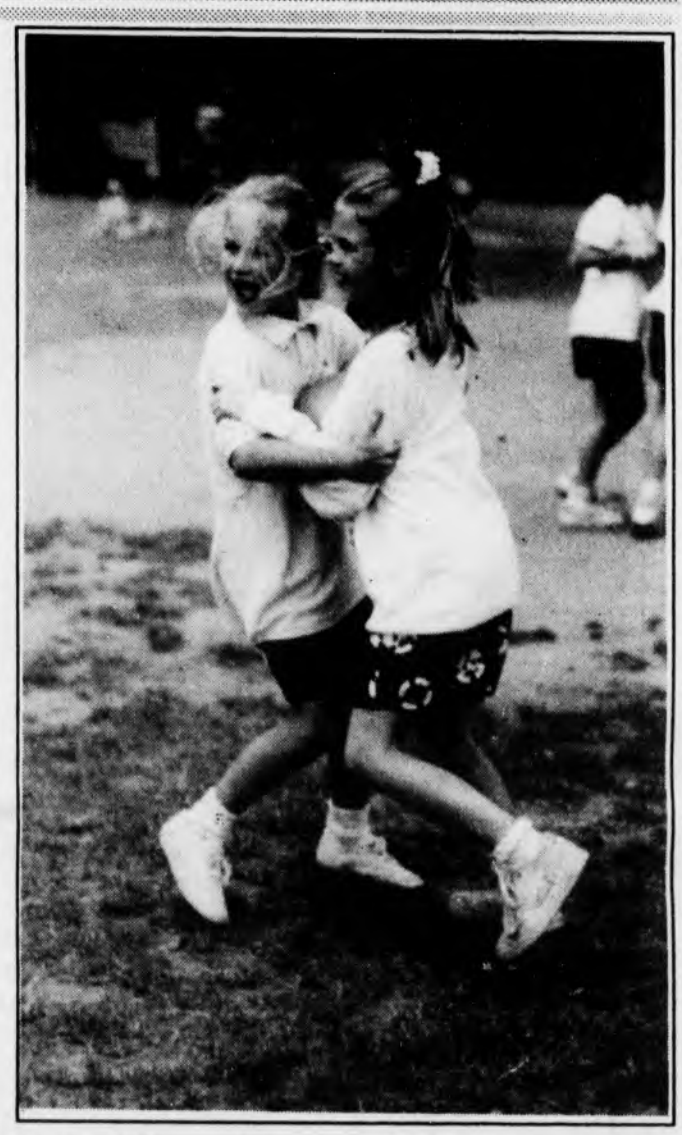
For years he was known as Mr. BAA, according to his 81-year-old son.

The younger Clark pointed out that his father is the first Harvard man to make it to the Track and Field Hall of Fame. He is also the first from the BAA

The elder Clark ran with the BAA for 17 years. During that time he won 63 first place finishes, 41 second place awards and 29 third place trophies.



He was not just an athlete. He was a scholar and author of 19 books. Among his other credits are two movies.



In 1896 the elder Clark competed in a revival of the Olympic Games in Athens, Greece. At the time he wore

SAFE sees the economic lure of trashing

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Sludge and trash disposal continued to to be a hot topic in Cohasset this past week. Activists from the local anti-landfill group, Stop Any Further Expansion (S.A.F.E.), turned up the heat by sponsoring a forum at the Unitarian Church Parish Hall on the issues.

S.A.F.E. opposes plans to expand Cohasset Heights Landfill and its possible use as a site for disposal of sludge, grit and screenings by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA). About 75 residents turned out to hear speakers from communities trying to deal with the aftermath of unsuccessful battles against landfill expansion.

Veteran activists Philip Beach, a member of the East Bridgewater planning board, Michael Murphy, a member of the Governor's Council and chairman of the Canton Board of Health, and Amy Perry, solid waste project director for Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MassPIRG) shared war stories and swapped strategies during the course of the evening.

Browning-Ferris Industries, a waste disposal company, took the biggest lumps at the forum. According to Beach and Murphy, BFI sweet -talked its way into their communities by offering free trash disposal for the community and a short-term stay. After getting a foothold, both operations mushroomed with no end in sight.

"Once you let them in, it's forever. It won't go away," Murphy warned.

Boys' tennis team finishes fine season

After advancing to the south sectional quarter finals, Cohasset tennis dropped out of the tournament last Thursday, losing 2-3 to fourth seed Dover-Sherborn. Cohasset was seeded twelfth out of 16.

Cohasset High seemed overpowering as singles Pat Milligan and Tim Brister each won their first set. Single Caleb Slotnick lost his first, but doubles team Mike Cisneros and Dan DeMichele (or "M.C. Hammer") pitched in with a 7-5 win after trailing 1-4.

The Skipper lead fell apart when only Milligan could win the second set, 6-3. Slotnick's tough two set loss kept Dover and Cohasset tied, 1-1.

"We've been lucky to have Pat," said first year coach Richard Chamberlain. "He's usually a given; all we have to do is split two singles and two doubles, and we have the win. We won't be that fortunate next year when he graduates."

Tie-breaker sets were played for single Tim Brister and the M.C. Hammer team, while the second doubles teams warmed up on the open courts. As M.C. Hammer lost a close set, 4-6, Cohasset hoped that Brister, a freshman, could deliver a win to tie Dover again.

"Tim's win against Bishop Feehan gave us the match last Monday, so he's been under pressure before," Chamberlain noted. The coach is looking for Brister to take the first single spot on next year's team. "He's going to be a really good player."

Unfortunately, Brister lost the final set 3-6, giving his Dover opponent a perfect record for the season and

Handicapped gain access to Sandy Beach via walk

A new boardwalk on Sandy Beach — specially designed to give the handicapped access to the water — will be dedicated Saturday at 1 p.m., according to David Chittim of the Sandy Beach Association.

Chittim said the wooden walk was modeled after one specially built for beachgoers in Marshfield.

The walk is 160 feet long, which means it can span the distance between from behind the small building at Sandy Beach to the high water mark.

"As best we can tell where the high water mark is," Chittim explained.

The walk was constructed by Larry Shultz and Ken Cisneros under a contract from the Sandy Beach Association. The beach association is a private, nonprofit organization that maintains the beach. Paul Corbett is president.

The impetus for the walk apparently began with a letter written to the beach association by Chartis Langmaid after the death of her husband, John. She pointed out that her husband, a longterm town official, would have enjoyed getting to the beach. He had been confined to a wheelchair.

The town Handicapped Commission worked with the Sandy Beach Association in dealing with the details to make the walk work.

After this week, it should be possible for those who are wheelchair-bound or otherwise handicapped in terms of mobility to use the beach.

The walk will be be taken up in bad weather.

New home opens on Elm St.

The housing for mentally-handicapped adults opened Wednesday with a small ceremony.

State officials from the Executive Office of Communities and Development joined with the housing authority and other local officials in marking the official opening.

The house will be home for eight adults. Officials said the residents moved into the home before the official opening.

The building is located next to the fire station, near the Elm Street complex for the senior citizens.

Correction

A story that appeared in the Cohasset Mariner May 30 incorrectly identified the type of wood used in the cover for the town pump, which is now operating on a daily basis at the intersection of Main and Elm streets.

The wood used for the pump is cypress.

the unicorn emblem of the BAA. In the 1896 games, his team won six first place awards and one second place award.

He scored a record-breaker win in the National AAU All-Around Championship of America in 1897. His son explained that the elder Clark won 10 events in that competition with only five minutes between events. The series included: the 100 yard dash, the 120 high hurdles, the mile run, the half mile walk, the 56 pound weight, the 16-pound shot put, the 16 pound hammer, the running long jump and pole vault.

"They were truly iron men in his day," the younger Clark said.

His father repeated the win in 1903.

"As an old man (age 32 and 11 months) he won the high jump at the annual indoor track meet of the New York Athletic Club," the younger Clark added.

He said his father was four times the New England all-around champion.

He was also a Canadian maritime champion, winning five events in meets.

The younger Clark said the medals from the Canadian competition are "wonderful." The medals are topped with a silver beaver.

He continued his athletic pursuits — and continued winning events — into his 50s. In 1930 he twice won mile-long walk events for the BAA. At the time he was 56.

The younger Clark is also keeping up with athletic endeavors, despite his age. He walks with the senior citizens regularly. Earlier this spring, the younger Clark was clocked during the Cohasset Road Race as walking with record-breaking speed.

It was that race, that placed the two Clarks in national records as the oldest father/son team to win mile walks for the same club — the BAA.

The economic lure of trashing

Beach lives on a farm one-quarter mile from the 88-acre incinerator and landfill owned by BFI. He said Cohasset complaints about odors, runoffs and planned expansions sounded altogether too familiar. Beach warned Cohasset to be on guard and learn from East Bridgewater's experience.

"The street names are a little different, but the smells are just the same," he joked. "If you don't want it, you have to stick together and try to control the situation. We haven't been too successful."

Beach said many of the problems in East Bridgewater stem from apathy and a willingness to trade off environmental concerns in exchange for the economic incentives offered by BFI.

The landfill in East Bridgewater began as an incinerator operation on 25 acres, according to Beach. Then BFI needed a place to dump ash produced as a by-product of incineration.

"Soon they were dumping trash every Monday morning because the incinerator was down. Then the incinerator kept breaking down and there was more trash," he said. "Now we get 1,500 tons per day."

According to Beach, BFI sought and gained permission to expand the landfill vertically. He said the landfill will soon reach 280 feet, adding that he expected they would continue to dump trash "until they fill the sky."

Beach said East Bridgewater lacks the will to curb BFI's activity because of the revenue the town derives from the incinerator and landfill operations. He said East Bridgewater gets about $1.9 million from the landfill operations.

"It's like drug money," he warned. "You get dependent on it." Beach frequently refers to East Bridgewater as a wholly-owned subsidiary of BFI or as a company town.

Murphy told a similar tale about the BFI facility located in Randolph on the Randolph-Canton line.

The facility is known locally as Mt. Randolph, but it is not a term of endearment. The landfill earned its nickname because of its 300-foot altitude.

Murphy said he can now see Mt. Randolph from his home. He said it takes in 500 tons of trash per day, generating considerable truck traffic and obnoxious odors. Murphy said the landfill motivates his political activities.

According to Murphy, concern over the facility originally hinged on proximity. Then dump runoff polluted conservation land and streams and townspeople finally realized it wasn't just a problem in somebody else's neighborhood, he said. Relations between the two communities took a drastic turn for the worse when leachate problems caused by the landfill in Randolph required the establishment of a leachate treatment plant in Canton.

"Canton has to monitor that facility from now until forever," Murphy said. "It's like original sin."

Murphy claims BFI made its inroads into Randolph with promises of 25 years of free dumping and millions of dollars in revenue. Murphy prides himself on the fact that Canton town meeting rejected BFI's free dumping offer and negotiated a contract with SEMASS Incinerator in Rochester at a bargain basement tipping rate of $20 per ton instead.

"You must stand up for something or you will fall for anything," he said.

Unfortunately, a lawsuit Canton filed against BFI concerning leachate leakage failed.

"Obviously, the pockets of corporations are deeper than those of any town," Murphy said. He described BFI as a multi-national and multi-billion dollar business. Murphy described seeing the familiar BFI logo on dumpsters in Thailand and the Philippines during business trips.

Beach added that BFI imports trash into the East Bridgewater site from as far away as New Hampshire and New York to reach the maximum tonnage allowed daily for dumping.

Murphy and Perry called for voters to make the state more responsive to problems created by landfill operators. Murphy remains optimistic the commonwealth will act in the best interests of citizens and the environment.

Perry claimed the only way to stop facilities like the ones in East Bridgewater and Randolph is citizen action.

According to Perry, most citizens are too cowed by the regulatory process to participate. That, she warns, gives industry consultants and lobbyists a monopoly on regulators' attention.

"They have policies they can use to say "no," but they wimp out," she claimed.

Perry believes the field is ripe for citizen action because the industry has become lazy and sloppy in preparing reports.

"It's incredibly easy to tear them to shreds," she said. Perry praised Cohasset activists for their willingness to read through the thick report. The record number of comments and questions residents submitted to the Executive Office on Environmental Affairs on the CHL draft environmental impact report certainly made an impact on the decision, she said. Perry described the rejection of CHL's draft environmental impact report by Environmental Affairs Secretary Susan Tierney as "a very good sign."

Perry said project engineers must submit additional information if the facility wants to move forward with its expansion plans.

According to Perry, the best alternative to landfills and incineration is increased recycling.

"The way to promote recycling," she added, "is by shutting off bad options like landfills and incineration."

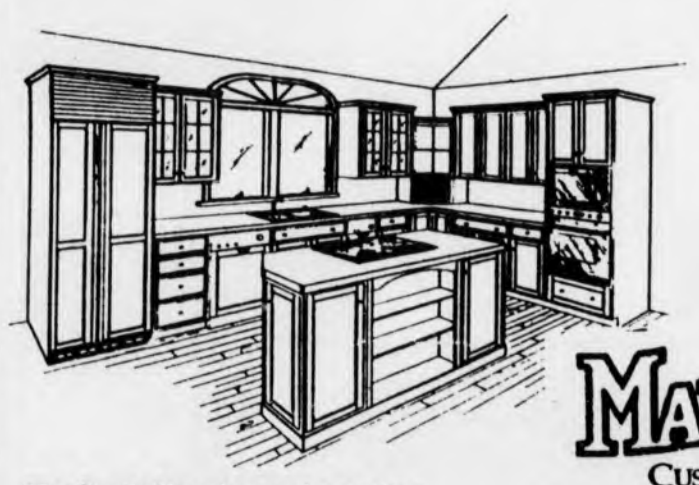
Shutting off landfill expansions reflects official state policy that contends landfills are a thing of the past, Perry said. The policy sets forth a master plan that says no new landfills should be approved and that existing landfills must be phased out by the year 2000. The plan also contains a time line for phasing in recycling and composting mandates. Currently, car batteries must be recycled rather than landfilled. By autumn, yard waste and leaves will join the list.

Perry said that although landfill expansion runs contrary to state policy, the policy and its master plan do not have the effect of law and cheap or free trash disposal in towns like East Bridgewater and Canton act as a disincentive for recycling and composting.

Noting that 60 percent of the trash in the waste stream can be recycled or composted, Perry said MassPIRG hopes to tip the balance against landfills and incinerators and increase the market for recyclables with legislation requiring manufacturers to use recycled materials.

At the local level, Perry faulted the CHL draft environmental impact report for its sketchy discussion of recycling and composting requirements. She also found the one-mile radius of protection around the water supply laughable.

"All landfills eventually leak," she said. "It's absolutely ludicrous. It's as if leachates and contaminants recognize one mile limits."



S.A.F.E. organizer Alix White presented a laundry list of objections to proposals for expansion and sludge disposal at the Cohasset Heights Landfill. The list includes detrimental effects on property values, the risk of contamination of the town water supply, and a continuation of the noisome odors troubling neighbors of the landfill located on Route 3A.

Citing the proximity of CHL to the public drinking water supply, activist Alix White said of the proposal to expand CHL, "Nowhere does it guarantee leachates will not pollute our drinking water supply."

White also told residents that the nearby Whitney Woods contain dead zones where no vegetation grows as a result of dump runoff. S.A.F.E. displayed photographs of the landfill and the abutting woodlands and wetlands to illustrate concerns about the environmental threat.

Some of the concerns raised by S.A.F.E. and their guest speakers were

Town and unions negotiating tough

would be an important step towards reaching an agreement.

If either side disagrees with the report's conclusions, negotiations will then go into mediation.

Doyon expects the fact-finder will hold a hearing with the union and town representatives by the end of the summer. He said statutes require that a report be issued within 30 days of the hearing.

Although neither side will comment on why negotiations have stalled, several firefighters have taken issue with comments made by members of the advisory committee.

The committee has campaigned for wage freezes and the elimination of a "minimum staffing" requirement in the contract.

The "minimum staffing" requirement in the expired contract requires that at least five firefighters be on duty at all times.

According to Arne Gjesteby, the chairman of the advisory committee, there are only 24 permanent firefighters in the department. He said it is nearly impossible to meet this requirement without spending overtime pay.

He said firefighters "have got their hands right on the jugular of the town" by "forcing the issue into contract negotiations."

Gjesteby has also attacked the departments sick-day policy.

"I wouldn't say that they are abusing their sick time, but they are a pretty sick group if they are not," he said.

Fire Captain Robert Silva has defended the minimum staffing requirement.

"Certain members of the advisory board do not have the safety of the town in mind," he said, explaining that "minimum staffing is no more than keeping the equipment manned," he said.

He said the requirement is needed to protect the town.

Doyon said negotiations with the police department, whose contract expires June 30, are currently underway and a new contract for the teacher's union is currently being negotiated by the school committee.

According to School Supt. Stephen Hart, the teachers union's three-year contract expires on August 31.

The contract covers all teachers, guidance counselors, and department heads in the system.

Hart said representatives of the union have been meeting with a sub-committee of the school committee and a negotiator to hammer out a new contract.

The last year of the present contract provided for 6 percent raises.

The Cohasset Library Association (CLASS), the newly formed union for town librarians, is currently negotiating its first contract.

The union came into existence in July, 1990.

The Konohasset Clerical and Custodial Union, part of the National Association of Government Employees, is the other new union in town.

Doyon said the town has not yet entered negotiations with the union.

New programs for handicapped

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

South Shore Collaborative will be opening two new program in Cohasset schools next year.

The new programs will be located at the Deer Hill School and at the junior/senior high school, according to Dr. Michael Savage, executive director of the collaborative.

The collaborative takes in handicapped students from as far away as Boston. But the collaborative mainly serves severely disabled students from the member communities of Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Weymouth, Braintree, Quincy and Hull.

The agency provides an alternative to private school placement for severely disabled children.

This past year there was a program at Deer Hill offered jointly by the collaborative and the Cohasset school system for developmentally delayed students.

This coming year the numbers of students are rising slightly for the collaborative, but the $4 million plus budget was basically level-funded. The exception to the level budget was due to two new programs added to serve new students.

The new program at Deer Hill will provide an intergrated pre-school, which means a pre-school class will be offered for handicapped youngsters as well as students who do not require special services.

Dr. Savage said the collaborative will be able to operate basically within the same budget as last year by cutting back on materials. Two parttime jobs have also been reduced, he said.

"Actually, there is no cutback because then we have the new programs going in," Dr. Savage said.

There are 10 programs now operated by South Shore Collaborative for students from 3 to 22 years.

The Community program is located in Hingham, serving students who are "severely to profoundly handicapped." That program is based at the East School in Hingham with one class at Foster School.

The deaf/hard of hearing program operates in Norwell at Cole School and the Norwell Junior High.

South Shore High, an alternative high school, is located at the East School in Hingham.

The Mini School, which serves autistic students or students with other severe behavior and learning disorders, operates in Cohasset.

The secondary learning disabilities program is located at North Quincy High.

The Teen Parents Program has been housed in the Jenkins School in Scituate. Next fall it will move to Weymouth.

The intermediate learning disabilities program, at Cohasset junior high, serves students with communication problems.

The South Shore Middle School/Quest is for disturbed students from 12 to 14. This program is housed at the Jenkins School in Scituate.

The residential program, located off Beal Street in Hingham in a new group home, serves 14 emotionally disturbed adolescents.

The economic lure of trashing

eased by earlier actions taken by the board of selectmen and the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs.

Last week selectmen unanimously rejected use of Cohasset Heights Landfill as a site for disposal of sludge, grit and screenings from the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA). Selectmen were responding to a letter from Environmental Affairs Secretary Susan Tierney asking if the town would be interested in serving as an alternative to the proposed Walpole site. Cohasset has been rumored to be on a short list of possible sites under consideration by the Weld administration and the MWRA.

Additionally, selectmen turned thumbs down on the Cohasset Heights expansion plan. Owner Paul Barry wants to add an additional 27.5 acres to the landfill, doubling its size. Barry had asked selectmen to reconsider a previous decision based on a town meeting vote that left the door open to possible expansion.

Barry's plans received a double whammy with Tierney's rejection of the draft environmental impact report.

Extra Special Olympics bring out the best

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Competition was the watchword at the 14th annual Extra Special Olympics at East School in Hingham June 7 as students from the Community Program conquered handicaps.

The 45 contestants in the Extra Special Olympics performed with energy and speed for a crowd of staff, volunteers, relatives and friends.

All 45 of the students received awards for the success stories that proved to be extra special.

Joseph Fitzgerald, director of the Community Program, which is one of those sponsored by the South Shore Collaborative, explained that the point of the games was for the students to compete against themselves.

Students from the program at the Cole School in Norwell for the deaf and hard of hearing, students from Foster School in Hingham as well as those from East School combined for a day of festivities and joy.

The games aren't the same as games in other competitions. The games are adapted from therapeutic efforts. There was a bowling game where students slid into the pins. There were several games using hula hoops as relay items. There were some simple races

Holding the hoops was a task in itself for some of the students.

The program serves severely to profoundly multi-handicapped students from 3 to 22.

The kids were as proud of their simple achievements as an athlete finishing a marathon. Indeed for some of them, the events took that much energy and preparation.

The day began with an Olympic march. There were no torches. But there were banners for The Little Rascals, The Sensational Six, Bitters Critters, The Wheel Cool Bunch, The Octipeds, the Communicators and Cole's Kids.

As Dr. Michael Savage, executive director of the South Shore Collaborative, introduced the events, relatives cheered on the athletes and the students took over the cafetorium.

The Wheel Cool Bunch were all students in wheelchairs. Many of the chairs were designed to help overcome other handicaps.

Over the loud speaker the sound of Olympic music played, putting everyone in the mood for the coming competition.

Just about everyone at the school wore a special T-shirt for the day. The shirt proclaimed the 14th annual event with colored streamers. The shirts were donated by WearGuard. Volunteers were on hand to provide more than a one-to-one ratio for the students in the games.

Montillio's provided the cake for the celebration. Students from South Shore High as well as members of the Hingham Kiwanis Club served as volunteers during the day. There were many other volunteers from among the family and friends of the staff and children.

There's a Garfield poster in the Community Program office that summed up the day.

"It's amazing what one can accomplish when one doesn't know what one can't do."

Government Island project depends on support at forum

Joseph McElroy and a group of citizens are working to preserve the historic lighthouse keepers' house at Government Island but change its use. McElroy wants the property maintained by a nonprofit corporation to keep it from draining town funds.

A forum on the topic was scheduled by selectmen for Wednesday, June 12, at 8 p.m. at town hall. The timing put the forum after the Mariner press deadline.

Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts was to serve as chairman for the evening as representatives from organizations and interested citizens talk about the alternatives.

One of the failed override questions would have provided $30,000 to renovate the kitchen and bath rooms in one of the two units in the duplex.

The property which overlooks the harbor remains in disrepair. Half the building is vacant. The other half is rented to a family.

McElroy and his group hope to organize a town-wide fundraiser for the property. He said the lighthouse keeper's house has been nominated for the National Historic Register. Various groups — such as the Rotary, VFW and scouts — might be interested in using the property, McElroy said.

But McElroy said he would drop the project if there is no support for it.

Volunteers sought

Selectmen are seeking volunteers for appointment to the handicapped commission, the arts lottery council and the cable TV committee.

obituary

Margery Koss Kurtz

Margery (Barnard) Koss Kurtz of DesMoines, Iowa, originally of Norwell, died June 4 at the age of 83.

The second daughter of the late James H. and Emeline (Burrage) Barnard, who lived on Main Street, Norwell, she is survived by her husband, Bernard D. Kurtz Sr. of DesMoines; two sisters, Mrs. George F. (Elsie) Hodder of Needham and Mrs. Richard P. (Sally) Wheeler of Cohasset; five stepchildren and many step-grandchildren. She is also survived by a niece: Mrs. Richard A. Child (the former Julie Wheeler) of Holbrook; a nephew, Christopher B. Wheeler, of Denver, CO; one greatnephew and two greatneices.

Mrs. Kurtz was a graduate of Derby Academy in Hingham, Dean Academy in Franklin and the Child-Walker School of Fine Arts in Boston.

In 1930, she married George C. Koss of DesMoines in Norwell's First Parish Church. Mr. Koss died in 1972.

She married Mr. Kurtz in 1974.

Memorial contributions in her name will be greatly appreciated by the Trustees of Reservations, 2468-B Washington St., Canton, 02021. These contributions will be used for the care and maintenance of the Albert F. Norris Reservation in Norwell.

New support group

A Caregivers Support Group sponsored by the Cohasset Council on Aging will be held on the first Tuesday of the month from 7 to 9 p.m. at Cohasset Community Center, 3 No. Main Street.

It will provide emotional support for family members and to assist in accessing resources to help manage home care of loved ones.

Summer theatre signups

A final reminder that the Young People's Summer Theatre, based in Scituate but open to all area youths, will hold its annual Registration/Orientation Night on Thursday, June 13 at 7 p.m. at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church on Country Way in Scituate.

The group, celebrating its 15th anniversary, has two programs. Ages 12-22 will be discussing the upcoming auditions and rehearsal schedule for the annual musical (this year The Apple Tree). Although everyone who registers performs in the show, auditions for casting will be held next Saturday and Sunday at 5 p.m. at the church. A non-musical will also be produced. Registration for this age group is $45.

Ages seven through 11 may also sign up for the morning program during the hour-long Registration meeting. Registration for the younger group is $100. Don Capen, Director, will address new and old members and be available to answer any questions.

around town

❑ Sssh...a town-wide secret is about to be unfolded, and we cannot let it leave Cohasset. Many of you remember Beth Goff, the super gal that did everything and did it well. She was involved in the schools, your children and mine, sports, everything. Well, she's coming to town in July, and Jan Figuerido is planning a big 50th surprise cookout in her honor. The date has been set for July 13 (with a July 14 raindate) and the place will be Janet's house. Janet surely will need some help though, so all of you that know and love Beth, give Janet a call...her telephone number is 383-1432. It certainly sounds like a lot of fun.

❑ The CTA (Cohasset Teachers Association) had a nice, but sad, farewell party for four retiring teachers last week. Pat Wunchel, Doris Lahage and Ed Leach were all there to be honored, and a great time was had by all. It sure is hard to imagine the High School halls without those members (Tom Hughes will be leaving too), they are "legends" in a lot of our memories. I still remember the patience that Pat showed while trying to teach me how to sew...and Doris having to teach our daughter (a lefty) the art of the business machines...best of luck to all of you, and here's to a long and happy retirement.

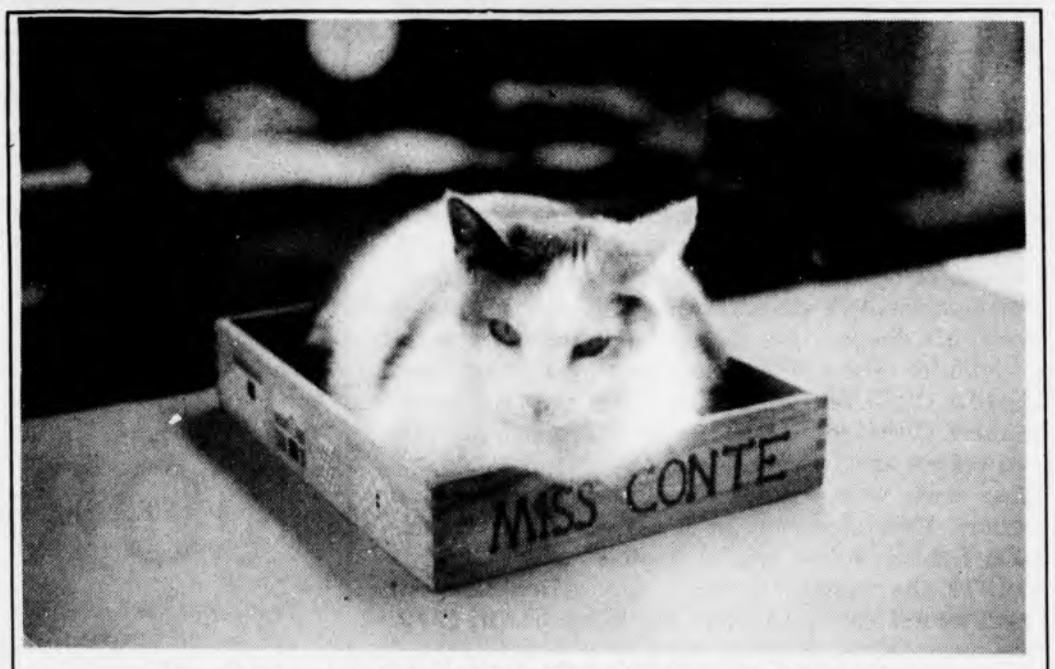
❑ The All-Stars were announced for the various sports this past week, and there are certainly a lot from our small school. A standing ovation goes to the following: in softball, Kara Manion; in Lacrosse, Travis Coley; in Boys Tennis, Pat Milliaan, Mike Cisneros, and Dan MeMichele; and, Girls Tennis, Sophie Redfield, Ellen Schramm, Rebecca Jordan, Cathleen Conroy, and Corrina Minnar. Congratulations go to all of you on a job well done.

❑ Congratulations to Jay P. Rattenbury who recently graduated with honors from South Shore Votech in Hanover. At graduation, Jay was the recipient of three awards, the Richard A. Fitts Memorial Scholarship for $500; The Leonard T. Cody award for Coop excellence for $100; and he was named the Outstanding Automotive Mechanic of 1991 graduating class. You should be very proud of yourself, Jay; we know your family and friends sure are.

❑ Hats off to Nicole Gamst, who graduated from the University of Mass at Amherst with a degree in Political Science. Nicole graduated with high honors, and has been accepted in the MBA program at the University of Connecticut at Storrs.

❑ Another proud graduate is Lisa (Kurtz) Goff, daughter of Marlyn and Connie Kurtz. Lisa graduated May 24 earning her Doctor of Medical Dentistry from the University of Florida at Gainesville.

❑ We must bring your attention to the lovely posters that are scattered "Around Town" this week, made by the students in grades one through three and the Cohasset High School Art Class. They are in the Library and in the windows of the Old Central Market, the Lilac House and other locations. The theme of the posters is Discovery Day, and the students watched a video of the beginnings to the present of World's End in Hingham. On June 22 from 1:30 to sunset the celebration will take place. Look at the posters for all the details, as well as for their beauty, and enjoy what sounds like an interesting afternoon.



❑ This is for all of you making your plans for summer vacations, the dates for Physical Exams for fall sports. Boys Soccer and Football will be Thursday, August 22 at 1:30 p.m., Girls Field Hockey and Soccer will be held on Friday, August 23 at 9:15 a.m. This will be the only time physicals will be offered by the school before practice begins on Monday, August 26. If you are unable to take advantage of the physical at this time you will need to be examined by your family doctor and get a note stating that you are in good physical condition to participate in athletics. No student will be allowed to begin practice until he/she has had a physical examination.

❑ Finally, be sure to get a whiff of the excitement that is in the air. The 36th South Shore Art Center Art Festival Cohasset Harborfest is coming fast.

❑ Hats off to Steve Pozatek and the Milton Tennis team! As most of you know, Steve is finishing his senior year at Milton, then on to Middlebury College. Anyway, he sure helped Milton get a name in the tennis world, having recently participated in the New England Independent Schools Championship. They won! Then it was on to the Nationals, where Steve came in 2nd in singles, and second in doubles. The team overall finished second, losing to a Florida Tennis school. Way to go, Steve and Milton. And, lucky Middlebury, where Steve will be playing next year.

❑ That's the news from here. Please call me with your newsworthy event. We all love to read about it!!

Wild Birds Unlimited
SPRING AND SUMMER BIRD FEEDING
"When should I stop feeding the birds?" is a question we are asked occasionally at our store. The answer is you may feed them all year long. The birds that stayed with us during the winter now sing songs that weren't previously heard. Inviting birds to our yards can also help control insects without pesticides. Many seed eating birds eat insects and most birds feed insects to their nestlings. Some birds will come to our yards not for seed in our feeders but for water or nesting sites. Providing food and water sources close to the nesting sites reduces the danger of traveling far from the nest for the baby birds and their parents. Bird baths in the hot summer are also important because they help keep the birds cool, provide them with a cooling drink, and keep their feathers in good condition.
Summer bird feeding can help the birds and it adds more enjoyment to our lives.

Tag those kegs

The town's drug and alcohol committee have been working long and hard at increasing our awareness of the problem substance abuse can cause.

This group came up with the wherewithal to run the Safe Homes program for our students. (For those with short memories, that program created a network of parents who were willing to take a stand on the use of alcohol by minors in their homes.)

The committee is responsible for seminars for the senior citizens explaining the problem that statistics indicate has been growing for that age group.

The same group is working to create a town-wide drug-free weekend early next year.

Now the group is working to see that the town impliments a Tag-a-Keg program that was first attempted in Greenfield under the sponsoring of Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

The idea is that a keg purchased at a liquor store would be tagged with the name of the purchaser, who would become responsible for keeping it out of the hands of minors.

Selectmen have discussed the program at least twice with Keith Knowles, chairman of the drug and alcohol committee.

The board has scheduled a public hearing on the idea for Monday, July 15, at town hall. The hearing will take place during the regular selectmen's meeting which begins at 7:30 p.m.

We happen to think the idea of tagging the kegs is great. If adults are providing minors with that much beer, they should definitely be tracked down and dealt with.

The only problem we see is one of enforcement. It seems to us there are some liquor laws already on the books that are not enforced here.

This new program will only work if minors at a party are confronted by the police. The tags on a keg will be meaningless if no one ever bothers to read them and follow up on the prosecution.

The drug and alcohol committee works hard.

We think they deserve the support of the community on this one. We also think they deserve to see some visible effort at enforcement to back up the program.

We don't expect to see the trash cans at Sandy Beach overflowing with beer cans this summer.

We just want to remind the community that the graduating class of 1991 voted that the Golden Apple Award go to Michael Gill, the health coordinator. Accepting the award, Gill himself pointed out the incongruity of the students voting for a man who tells them not to eat junk food, not to drink, not to drug and not to have sex.

The graduating class of CHS is wise beyond their years. Now it is time for us — the authority figures — to show we are serious about keeping beer out of the hands of minors.

COA give thanks to voters for 'Outreach'

letters

To the Editor:

The Council on Aging is grateful that voters in Cohasset recognized the importance of the Outreach position at the Special Town Meeting, October 1990 and again on the ballot, May 1991. When the Council is successful in carrying out its mandate, keeping senior citizens emotionally and physically well, the need for hospital care or for assistance from their children is often eliminated or postponed, and additional taxes for many years of institutional care can be avoided.

The past four years, the Council on Aging has been the most rapidly expanding department in the Town of Cohasset with a 40 percent increase in activities and services since 1988. Unfortunately, while the Senior Center has been growing, the budget for expense has been shrinking. The Council on Aging had been level-funded for four years until the Outreach position was added.

Some line items cut are: Telephone, $1,200 to $900; Postage, $1,400 to $400; Programs, $2,300 to $300; Gasoline, $1,500 to $800; Van Maintenance, $450 to $336. Also cut were office supplies, education and travel and meetings. Congregate meals remained $400. All these cuts were made while the Senior Center was growing.

The Senior Center would not have survived without many generous persons and business contributions, Federal & State grants, arts lottery money and the financial and moral support of its important fund raising group-the "FRIENDS" of the COA. May the board and the director take this opportunity to thank them all once more for their time and efforts on behalf of the senior citizens.

We often hear suggestions that we utilize volunteers and raise some of our own funds. Evidently some are out of touch with the enormous amount the COA achieves at a minimal cost to the town. In a total town budget of over $12,000,000 (12M) the COA budget is less than one-third ($40,000) of 1 percent ($120,000). The council has been very self-sufficient having supplied four-fifths of its capital items at no cost to Cohasset residents – $4,400. The dollar value of the volunteers is $156,000. Printing and mailing the monthly newsletters to over 1,000 seniors, part of the cost of programs and some bus trips are funded by the "FRIENDS" – value over $6,000. Formula Grant money and salaries of the Senior Aide and the Shine worker – Federal & State grants – equal $16,000. The total dollar value yearly is about $178,000 total. No other department matches town funds to such a great extent.

The Council will continue to do what it can independently. Its growth is leveling off, and costs for operating the Senior Center and its programs will not increase so dramatically in the future. When you consider the many programs and services that are offered through this department, the financial needs of the Council on Aging are small by comparison.

Once more the COA board wishes to thank those who supported this department. They should feel rewarded knowing they contributed to the happiness and well being of many people. We look forward to continued interaction with the students, the Social Service League and other interested departments.

The Council on Aging has worked hard for the last five years to develop concrete services for the benefit of a growing elderly population. We need your support now and in the future to maintain adequate services. People need to realize that at the turn of the century, one-third of Cohasset's population will be over 60 years of age.

Treasurer, COA

SAFE congratulates selectmen

The Cohasset-based group S.A.F.E. congratulated the Cohasset Board of Selectmen for their recent decision to let stand their unanimous vote of May 29 where they rejected a proposal to dump MWRA sludge and sewer residuals in Cohasset.

"The selectmen did the right thing," said Alix White, President of SAFE. "Their decision helps establish that there is no question that Cohasset does not want MWRA sludge, now or ever," said White. "We congratulate them. Their decision is in the long-term best interests of all residents of Cohasset."

At selectmen's meeting May 29, SAFE presented selectmen with a petition, signed by over 200 Cohasset residents, which asked them to oppose accepting MWRA sludge. SAFE member John McNabb requested that selectmen vote to oppose taking MWRA sludge, and to take the vote immediately — to make it very clear that Cohasset does not want the sludge.

At their meeting Monday, June 3, selectmen were asked to reconsider their vote. After a discussion, where SAFE member John McNabb presented selectmen with over 100 additional signatures on the petition opposing the taking of MWRA sludge, selectmen did not reconsider their vote. Selectmen Chairman Edwin Tebbetts then declared that their original vote still stands.

Affordable family housing promoted

(The following letter was sent to the Mariner for publication.)

Open Letter to the Board of Selectmen
Dear Selectmen,

In September 1988, the Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD), the Cohasset Board of Selectmen, the Planning Board and the Housing Authority executed a Memorandum of Agreement. Among the commitments agreed to by all parties was that " . . .the Board of Selectmen will explore the possibility and feasibility of converting a Town Office Building located on Elm Street (The Bates building across the street from the fire station) to one or more units of housing to be designated for low and moderate income people, at the time that the building is vacated and no longer used for municipal offices."

commentary

By Tanna Kasperowicz

There is a God. And she has sent us Joe McElroy. How she wishes him to be utilized at this time, is unknown. But! There is no doubt in my mind that he has an instant campaign committee ready and able to raise him to whatever victory he wishes, whenever he wishes.

* * *

So, I tried the 1-800-TAXPAYER telephone pipeline (May 3) to register my suggestion for downsizing state government - and it works! And I received a prompt letter back (May 5) reporting my comment, which was sent to the Governor's office. And then I fainted dead away. On May 24 the governor's office (Karen A. Sawyer, Director of Constituent Services) wrote thanking me for my suggestion. I suggested that the state should get rid of the Ethics Commission. Its budget is too high and it does not serve a purpose in this type of economy (shoots and ladders). As some of you might remember, one of the persons I had complained about to the Ethics Commission knew too many people in high places. One of the persons who helped to get him off was himself being investigated by the unethical commission. This has always amazed me. There for a while it seemed like every Democrat in the state was working to get my guy off. And then of course, they did.

So, I said, obviously this unethical commission is packed with rogues. So, why bother with it? If there are not 10 honest men and women in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts why not just eschew the pretense of ethics?

Cute letter from Norfolk County Commissioner Jim Collins – good friend of Rocco Laugelle's – in last week's Mariner. Hey Jim - Rocco says hi!

The nerve of a TT selectperson, calling me a vicious writer. Oh sure, pension costs soar and hundreds of small cities and towns lose control of pension costs because many representatives to the Norfolk County Advisory Board are comotose; but I'm a vicious writer (Cable TV June 3). Just like Collins "vindicated" Selectman Laugelle last week. He obviously doesn't know how county government works (see Page 3, Cohasset Mariner, June 6). He didn't know the commissioners voted on Feb. 1, 1989 to repeal the $30,000 cap on pensions, while the Norfolk County Advisory Board (Laugelle's group) voted on March 8, 1989 to repeal the cap. Maybe Collins will write again next week and tell us what else he doesn't know. This is one of the one hundred million reasons there is a bill before the legislature asking that County government be abolished. Call Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and tell her to abolish county government...just another fattening layer.

There is only one message I'm trying to get across, forever.

Our budget problems can't be solved by cutting out Steve Wigmore's wire department...or cutting out recreation, or refusing to replace the "wee" rug at Osgood School. It's staying in touch with the big stuff, the pension stuff, the stuff that's driving government out of sight. What should TT selectpeople and TT school committee people be doing right now? Easy answer - freezing salaries. I'd love to give Franny Marks, the town clerk, a raise...ten raises. I don't want to have to cut recreation because town officials won't deal with the issues. What issues do the TT selectpeople champion? Well, they're now sponsors of a woman who wants to sell children's clothing on the beach. Selectmen Diana Kornet and Jane Goedecke will appear (if they already haven't) before the zoning board of appeals asking for special dispensation to sell clothes in a residential area (Sandy Beach). Isn't that special? This looks like a political favor. Good news! The ZBA is recommending the planning board change its fence height maximum from 5 to 6'. I'm impressed. Another whole foot! What hath God wrought?

TT Selectperson Chairman Ned Tebbetts has a wild look in his eye (which we can see much better now that the mustache's gone) these days. On TTTV the mustache sort of took over the face. All the better to see you, Ned. Tinytown columnist's sources say the person wishing to abolish Jeff Waal from the conservation commission is a land surveyor (L.S.) representing clients before conservation. Sources claim the L.S. has his three votes to get rid of Waal (hey, political favors happen all the time...why should this one bother you?) Here's what we'll lose: Waal has a B.S. and an M.A. in engineering, and is a Registered Professional Engineer. Goodness gracious! This person is a little more qualified than TT selectpeople usually like.

Tinytown is big on housewives. If selectmen do replace Jeff, it will probably be with a sensitive, communicating (good on the phone) Tinytown housewife who just loves people.

Kerri Golden married a nice young man from Georgia this spring. Her mother, Doris, planned the entire wedding which was held at the Old North Church, and involved many of the bride and groom's friends, many of whom Doris didn't know.

"It's really difficult planning a wedding for wedding guests you've never met," Doris said. But she did, and everything was going along nicely until "Two days before the wedding I received a phone call from the videographer."

"Mrs. Golden, this is 'Ed Seesaw'," the man said. "I'm sorry, we won't be able to make the wedding." Well, Doris went wild. She was, understandably, under a lot of strain, entertaining over 30 guests at her home. "I don't believe you're doing this to me," she shrilled. The man apologized, repeatedly, "But we thought the wedding was Saturday."

"What do you mean you thought the wedding was Saturday? Is this the way you run your business? It's a wonder you're in business. I don't believe this is happening, you're putting me in an awful position - two days before the wedding, what am I supposed to do? How will I replace you? I can never replace you," she shouted, slamming down the phone in his ear.

The happy couple and the groom's parents, some guests and Jack were drawn to the Golden kitchen, where they heard Doris imploding. "Mother, who was that?" Kerri asked.

"That was Ed Seesaw, the videographer, cancelling," Doris complained. Kerri said, "Mother, he's an invited guest. He's not the videographer."

Doris was mortified - this performance had taken place in front of all of her daughter's prospective inlaws. And what would they think of her now?

Artists demonstrate talents at SSAC Art Festival

Ever wonder how artists create their masterpieces? You can see it all firsthand as various artists demonstrate their techniques during the South Shore Art Center Art Festival June 21 to 23 on the Cohasset Common.

Portraiture artist Constance Flavell Pratt will preview her talents Saturday afternoon. Pratt, whose courtroom scene sketches for Channel 5 News and portraitures of prominent figures in New York and Washington, D.C. have brought her national acclaim, is a Norwell resident.

A watercolor demonstration will be given Friday morning by Cohasset's Kit Bryant while Susan Cameron, also of Cohasset, illustrates the art of basketweaving Friday and Saturday. The unique process of monotype will be explained Saturday morning by Esther Maschio of Weymouth. George Dalton of Plymouth will demonstrate the fine art of pottery while Boston's You-en Li introduces Chinese Brush Painting and Hingham's Betty Burke displays her painting style, all on Sunday.

For those who want to paint along with an artist, North Marshfield artist Virginia Avery invites the public to bring their paints to her Saturday morning workshop on the Common at 11. Drop-in workshops for children will be offered all day Saturday.

Juried Art and Photography Exhibits will be on display on the Common throughout the weekend complemented by a craft artisans market featuring over 60 booths. The SSAC President's Choice Exhibit featuring Boston's Pucker-Safari Gallery artist Ali and the Festival Members Show will be featured at the Art Center, 119 Ripley Road. For a schedule of Art Festival and Cohasset Harborfest events, call 383-9548.

Boston Artist Ali Featured

The circus has been the focus of many artists' works but none portray it quite like Boston artist Ali. Layering pieces of cloth with thread and yarn, Ali combines collage, painting, and folk art to create a unique art form of its own.

"Beyond the Big Top," a collection of Ali's cloth paintings and silkscreens, will be the South Shore Art Center's President's Choice Exhibit June 20 through July 27. Chris Rifkin, SSAC President 1988-91, selected the artist and the works. The exhibit, courtesy of the Pucker-Safari Gallery in Boston, opens the Art Center's three-day Art Festival with a champagne reception Thursday, June 20, 6:30 to 9 p.m. at the Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset.

Ali uses fabric to create regions of light and dark and to separate space and structures in her illusions of circus and beach images. While her cloth paintings and silkscreens are inspired from places seen and found, they reflect much of Ali's own inner vision.

Tickets to the champagne preview, a benefit for the Art Center's educational programs, are $10. The Festival Members Show, the Cohasset Community Garden Club's "Art Interpretations" flower show, and a display by faculty member Berj Kailian will complement Ali's exhibit. Musical entertainment will be provided by the Hingham Woodwind Quintet.

The SSAC Art Festival opens on Cohasset Common Friday, June 21 at 10 a.m. and continues through Sunday, June 23. Ali's exhibit, the Festival Members Show and Berj Kailian's exhibit, on display at the Art Center during Art Festival weekend, will remain on display through July 27. For more information, please call the Art Center at 383-9548.

Harborfest is full of it

On June 22 beginning with a Pancake Breakfast and ending on June 23 with a Chowderfest, this year's Cohasset Art Festival and Harborfest promises to be full of pleasant surprises.

Following the Pancake Breakfast on Saturday, June 22, there will be an extravaganza of games in Cohasset Harbor for young and old alike, beginning at 3 p.m. For the young at heart there will be water balloon tossing at the Government Island Pier. The folks between six and 12 years of age have been asked to make 'model' boats of wood and these will be raced in the Harbor under the watchful eye of the Harbormaster. For the more adventurous, there will be log rolling in the harbor and dinghy races for those strong of arm. Throughout the day and weather permitting, a 41 foot Coast Guard Cutter and Heliocopter will be on hand for viewing. From the Harbor at 5 p.m. the activity shifts to the Common for a Band Concert of popular music. The last activity on Saturday will be a youth concert in the Square (actually on South Main Street in front of the Texaco Gas Station).

The activities continue on Sunday with a Blessing of the Fleet scheduled for 1:30 p.m. in Cohasset Harbor. This will be followed by a Parade that will begin at Border Street and march down Elm Street to the Town Common with floats, bands and marching units. The last activity will be the Chowder Contest; which has at this writing some seven local restaurants competing for the coveted "Claim of the Year Award."

Of special interest, will be the brunch served at the Chart House Restaurant which will afford the diner with a 'ringside' seat for the Blessing of the Fleet and Parade. For information and reservations call Tim Neil at the Chart House. Seating is limited and will be on a first come first served basis.

Visitors will also be able to view the replica of Minot Light's top section, enjoy a stroll along the Captain's walk, visit the Historical Museum and have an opportunity to view the 36th Annual Art Show, sponsored by the South Shore Art Center.

Strawberry Festival June 29

Strawberry treats of all kinds, plus a "country store" offering home-made baked goods and the arts and crafts products of many talented local artisans, will be presented at a Strawberry Festival-Country Store to be held at the Second Congregational Church, Cohasset, on Saturday, June 29 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Projected as what it is hoped could become an annual summer event, the Festival-Store is also considered an opportunity to display the newly renovated and expanded church building and its attractive patio area adjoining Cohasset's Town Hall on the Common.

A project embracing the entire congregation, the event is being spear-headed by members who have been particularly active in the four-church Village Fair staged annually in December.

While strawberry shortcake is to be the obvious centerpiece of the Festival, a variety of other strawberry

April student of the month

Bethany Quintin has consistently manifested sincere interest and genuine motivation toward her work in school. She is exceptionally able to accomplish work without instruction or close supervision. In addition to a full academic schedule, Bethany finds time to participate in figure skating competition on a regular basis. Her accomplishments on the regional and national levels include several championships and numerous medals and recognition awards.

The rigorous schedule she follows gives one an indication of a very energetic and totally involved individual.

Bethany's academic achievements, while pursuing her demanding and time-consuming practices and competition, have been nothing less than outstanding at all times.

For more information please call the Community Center at 383-0088. Make checks payable to Cohasset Community Center.

March student of the month

Alyson Gallant has been an active member of the Community Volunteer Service this year. She attends each weekly meeting and makes valuable contributions of time, energy and enthusiasm.

As our representative to Ripley Road Nursing Home, she has kept us aware of events and programs that we would become involved in. Each week Alyson has made sure that two students volunteered to play bingo or to visit with the residents of the nursing home.

Alyson has been reliable and conscientious and we believe she is an excellent example of what volunteerism is all about.

Osgood students shocked by loss of a frog

To the Editor:

Enclosed please find a group of letters written by my first grade class at Cohasset's Joseph Osgood School. The letters were written by the children to express to the reading public their sadness, and disbelief at a senseless act which occurred recently in our classroom. A rather large frog whom the children named "Guardian" was captured and brought into school by one of our classmates, Trevor Hardie. He had a temporary home in an aquarium with pond water and a few rocks and the children were learning first-hand about their "amphibian" friend. He even acknowledged us in several loud "ribbits" which absolutely amazed and delighted these nature-loving children and caused moments of silence in our classroom as we listened to our friend "Guardian" communicate.

However, to our great shock on Thursday, May 30, the children arrived to discover their pet missing from his spot. After a thorough search of our classroom, the hall, etc. the children were convinced, as was I, that our friend could not have "escaped" without help. One child wrote a tender prayer on the blackboard requesting help in finding Guardian, Amen.

We do not know what happened, or how, or why. The children decided to write to the Mariner and let your readers know of our disappointment. I hope whoever performed this unkind act will think twice about their actions in the future. Twenty-three saddened children have learned about cruelty at an early age but responded to each other's needs and feelings in a very positive and heartwarming way. I am very proud of each and every one of them.

Affordable family housing promoted

The Annual Town Meeting recently voted favorably on a resolution to have the selectmen sell the Bates Building to a non-profit group for $1. The Bates building would be Cohasset's first two units of owner-occupied family affordable housing in the town. The South Shore Habitat for Humanity's proposal will cost the town nothing beyond the contribution of the surplus land and building. The sooner the Bates building is sold to Habitat, the sooner it will be on the tax rolls.

Cohasset has made a good faith effort to follow though on family affordable housing by voting to sell the Bates building to Habitat. The Habitat proposal is perfectly in line with Cohasset's 1988 agreement with the state. If Cohasset backs off on the memorandum of agreement and the commitment to Habitat, how long can the selectmen guarantee discretionary funding to be safe? Can Cohasset really afford the potential risk of losing any discretionary state assistance?

The 1988 Cohasset memorandum of agreement states, "The Board of Selectmen recognizes that further applications for state discretionary funding will depend upon good faith efforts to follow through on this Agreement, when executed in final form. In light of the commitments described above, the Secretary of Communities and Development does hereby agree that the Town of Cohasset is not, at this time, unreasonably restrictive of housing."

While short term balancing of the books by selling the Bates Building to the highest bidder may seem prudent today, the selectmen have an obligation to the taxpayers and the other boards in town to see that development related assistance remains in place for Cohasset. That stability will be assured by living up to our agreements, ensuring that Cohasset's next capital project has its fair share of state developmental grant money.

McNabb works to contain dump

To the Editor:

Opposition to any expansion of the Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL) is growing. Over 300 Cohasset residents (so far) have signed the SAFE petition to oppose any expansion of CHL.

The owners of CHL have recently proposed that Cohasset consider accepting "only" about four or five truckloads a day of MWRA "grit and screenings."

Further, they attempt to argue that the vote of the Annual Town Meeting in April, against a resolution opposing accepting MWRA residuals, was an indication that residents of Cohasset are "open" to considering "grit and screenings." That is NOT true. It was defeated for other reasons - because it involved other issues, and because there was little notice that it was coming up. Also, it lost by a narrow margin.

There are some serious objections to their proposal:

• This "grit and screenings" proposal is not beneficial to the town. It will lower our property values, and endanger the town's water supply for generations.

• Once he was able to sell CHL to the MWRA, there would be no way for Cohasset town officials to limit what they could dump there - which could include sewer sludge as well.

• Any expansion of CHL, whether for "grit and screenings" or solid waste, because of its location and proximity to our public drinking water supply, would be risky.

• The residents of Cohasset seem to be overwhelmingly against considering taking MWRA "grit and screenings." The selectmen have voted UNANIMOUSLY to oppose this.

• CHL IS lobbying hard for Cohasset to be chosen. The state sludge Siting Commission is seriously considering Cohasset. We need to firmly and unequivocally state our opposition to taking MWRA sludge or "grits" in Cohasset. If we consider it, we will get it.

Thank you.

Sincerely,
John K. McNabb, Jr.

SAFE on MWRA sludge

• Cohasset is not in the MWRA district. Cohasset receives no services from the MWRA, and should not be asked to bear its burdens. There are 43 cities and towns in the MWRA sewer district—certainly a suitable site can be found there. In fact, the MWRA has a policy against using a facility outside the district, unless local officials actually ask to take MWRA sludge or residuals.

• A suitable site already exists—in Walpole. The MWRA has spent $10 million evaluating 299 sites within the MWRA sewer district, and chose a site in Walpole as the most suitable site. There is no need for an alternative site. In fact, MWRA Executive Director Paul Levy, in an April 14 letter to the Cohasset Selectmen, has made it clear that they are satisfied with the Walpole site and have no intentions of using Cohasset.

• Cohasset Heights is a lousy place for sludge disposal. Current landfill operations have produced noxious odors, damaged adjoining wetlands, and posed a potential threat to Lily Pond, the town's water supply. Studies have shown that about ten percent (10%) of contaminated leachate from the landfill is flowing toward Lily Pond. The site is in a recharge area for drinking water supplies, and impacts nearby wetlands resources and open space areas.

• MWRA sludge, etc. is dangerous stuff. The Walpole site, or Cohasset, if chosen, would be used for disposal of sludge, 'grit and screenings,' the unprocessed garbage and solid material which is screened out of sludge and which cannot be recycled or reused, and as potential backup disposal capacity for sludge or any other wastewater material left over from the sewage treatment process. These materials, sludge, 'grit and screenings,' or whatever, could contain hazardous heavy metals, organic pathogens, or anything which could be dumped into a toilet, storm sewer, or factory drains.

• Property values will be lowered. Who wants to live near a sludge dump? Who wants to move into a town with a sludge dump? Inevitably, siting an MWRA sludge dump in Cohasset will lower property values, making an already difficult real estate market even tougher. Reportedly, property values in Walpole have already been reduced.

recreation report

The South Shore's first summer day lacrosse camp will be held this July in Cohasset, according to Recreation Director Jack Worley.

The South Shore Lacrosse Camp, running from July 15 to July 19, will be directed by two of the state's top coaches — Northeastern University's Dave Lewis, and Weymouth High's Tony Manzelli. Terry Kahn, former Harvard goalie and coach of the Cohasset High junior varsity, will also join the staff, as will other local coaches.

The South Shore Lacrosse Camp will cost $100 per camper for the five-day session. The camp will be for boys ages 12-16, and each camper will be responsible for his own stick, helmet and gloves. Elbow pads and shoulder pads will be optional.

Campers will also bring their own lunches and drinks. Each daily session will run from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. at Cohasset's Milliken Field. The sessions will include instruction, drills, and daily scrimmages. In the event of rain, the camp will use the Cohasset High School gymnasiums for training videos and instruction.

Registration for the camp has already begun, and players can secure their spots with a $30 deposit. Worley recommended that campers register by June 30 to guarantee enrollment. All campers will receive a special camp scrimmage jersey.

"We're extremely excited about the prospects for this camp," said Worley. "The coaches are outstanding and for youngsters picking up the game, this is the only camp they can go to without leaving home."

FITNESS AND EXERCISE

The recreation department is planning to expand exercise and fitness programming with two new concepts in fitness training. The first class to be offered will be circuit training, taught by Margret Watson.

Aerobic circuit training is the latest in fitness training. It combines the muscle-building benefits of weight training with the cardiovascular benefits of aerobics in one class. This hour-long class consists of a group warm-up, circuit exercises using free weights with aerobic activities interspersed throughout the circuit and a cool down and stretch. Lose weight, burn fat, build muscle and achieve total fitness through aero circuit. This is the fitness class of the nineties.

Men and women on any level of experience may participate. Check with your physician before beginning any exercise program if you are a beginner or have not exercised regularly in recent weeks. Wear comfortable clothing. Bring a towel to class.

Class will meet Tuesday and Thursday 6:15 p.m. in the town hall auditorium. Sessions are conducted in six-week cycles, costing $48. Checks should be made payable to "Town of Cohasset," and sessions continue on a year-round basis.

Watson is a well-known exercise instructor, and has taught for the recreation department for the past decade. The program is open to both residents and non-residents for all ages. However, early registration is advised. Due to the expected popularity of the program, classes will tend to fill quickly.

The second fitness program will be step training.

BAND CONCERT

The Recreation Department will sponsor a Band Concert on Cohasset Common, on Saturday, June 22 at 4:30 p.m. in conjunction with the Cohasset Arts Festival and the Harborfest.

Performing will be the 30 piece, South Shore Concert Band, under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh. The public is invited. It is suggested that each person bring a lawn chair or blanket to sit on. Insect repellent can be a good item to have available.

Concerts are provided through special grants and donations to the Cohasset Recreation Commission, from the American and Brockton Federation of Musicians and the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc. All of whom are thanked for their generous, continuing support of this program.

mariner sports

Scott Van Hartsvelt and his Pirates took on the Dodgers Monday night and found Justin Buckley, off the injured list, healed up, revved up and back on the mound. Buckley and Jim O'Sullivan pitched three innings apiece for the Dodgers. They were assisted by Bobby Stansill's triple, John Paul Lacks double and singles by Tucker Gledhill and Burke Davis, and fantastic fielding by Davis at first and Greg Bilton at second. But events like Mark Connolly's two line-drive doubles and four RBI's for the Pirates, Adam Donovan's smooth double, and the fine work of Robbie Buckley behind the dish, catching two pop flies and making one throw out to first, as well as Ben Roine's stellar performance at third, supported Van Hartsvelt's superb 9 KO's 4-hit-pitching and served the Pirates up a win.

The Red Sox-Cardinals game was rained out Tuesday and has been rescheduled for June 11. On Wednesday, the Mets continued their winning streak to make it a string of nine. Down 7-3 in the fourth inning, the Mets rallied for 6 runs in the fifth for an exciting comeback and 10-9 victory. Daniel Steel's triple, Ely Kahn's double (he was 2-2)and J.L. Williams third hit of the game set up Doug (2-3) Cameron's fence busting 3-run homer. Greg Taylor, Sam Goedecke, Williams and Abidie get kudos for outstanding fielding. Ely Kahn pitched bulldog tough. This and his entire team's effort with Taylor Devin closing out help gave the Pirates this close one.

With no down time, the Dodgers rebounded smartly Thursday night in a make-up game with the Sox and took them in a Buckley and Bilton pitching show and shutout. In the outfield, Stansill, Mark Equi, David Hanson and Tucker Gledhill played splendidly, combining their good work with hits from Jim O'Sullivan, Matt Lewis, Jeremy Williams, Burke Davis, Matt Belson and Stansill for an evening that worked well for the hard working Dodgers.

Those well-rounded Cardinals and Athletics had to schedule their game at 5 last Thursday so their singers and musicians could perform in the Annual Deer Hill Concert, coached by McGuiness and Biagini that night, and what a wonderful performance it was, with every major league team represented on stage! Before they harmonized and blew their horns, the A's racked up 13 runs, 7 of them in the fifth inning starting with Sean Norris' solo homer to take it away from the Red Birds. Ian Simons' patience at the plate got him two walks that became runs. Sean Cogill continued to hit well. The A's young infield of Jeff Flanagan, Eric Hanian, Pat Murphy and Morgan Sandell combined for a super defensive effort against the Cards who were hitting well enough but not making it around the bases. Cards catcher Charlie Dean stopped short the A's aggressive base running at one point with two tag outs at the plate. Pitching three innings apiece Sean Norris and Ben Ketchum took the day.

On Saturday, the A's held their own well against the winning Mets, playing catch-up after the Mets scored 8 runs in the first three innings and almost making it. Great hitting all night by the A's, especially Adam Sasso's line drive in the fourth, was negated by good fielding plays by the Mets infield. In the fifth and sixth innings the A's came within two runs with triples by Sean Cogill and Matt O'Connor. Pat Murphy, Jeff Flanagan and Ben Ketchum helped the A's scoring in the late innings with alert base running and scores, but the A's stranded eight men on base and continue working hard to bring their players across the plate to make the win/loss difference. Tom Kittle had two good innings at the dish and Norris stopped Mets runs in the last of the fifth with a great play at the plate. Eric Hanian showed his awesome utility playing center field. Josh Flanagan split the duty at second base with Mike Rossi who slapped down a hard shot to make a close play at first. Pitcher Cogill and Ketchum finished up the last three innings well, but the Mets came out ahead eight to six, hanging on to their streak.

Major league action continues this week as the season winds down. This may be your last chance to catch some of the 12-year-olds in action, so come by and watch!

A Little League catcher gets the job done.

Spring soccer finale ends with victory

By Carol Riley

Cohasset wrapped up its spring soccer season in the Coastal Youth Soccer League with some very impressive victories this past weekend.

Girls Under 14-1 team pounded Pembroke 8-0 in their final game of the regular season. Scoring for Cohasset were: Danielle Nohe with a hat trick (3 goals), Melinda Johansen (2), and one goal each for Tammy Maitland, Corinna McMackin and Katie Ross. Playing outstanding defense were Jessica Connor and Steffie Lubitz, siding powerhouses at midfield: Jessica Jenkins and Alissa Sexton. This fine team will be at the Coastal League playoff.

Girls Under 14-2 won their division championship with an impressive season total of 8 wins, one tie and one loss. They will go on to their next round of competition and hopefully represent Cohasset in the State Championships in Amherst later this month. In their final game of the regular season Girls Under 14-2 pummeled Scituate on their home turf 4-1. Goals were scored by Amie Theriault, Megan Fahey and Kathleen Fitzsimmons on assists from Catie Campbell, Kelly O'Donnell and Andrea Freeman. Courtney Goff was outstanding at midfield. An awards presentation and cookout followed the game at the Goff home. Coach Sandy Theriault commended her team for "the high quality of team effort and sportsmanship. It is a direct reflection of the parents of these young ladies. It has been a pleasure coaching."

Girls Under 10-2 looked sharp in two games last weekend, especially so in a 9-0 rout over Carver. Scoring goals for Cohasset: Alexandra DeRosa (3), Victoria DeRosa, Eileen Ridge, Kyralea Cogill, Alissa Conley, Alexandra D'Urso and Susana Candia. Outstanding at midfield was Sara Eaton Bruce; on defense, Annie Palone. Cohasset dominated a tight contest with Plymouth on the same day, which ended in a 1-1 tie. Alexandra DeRosa scored Cohasset's single goal, while the Plymouth goal was scored on a penalty kick. Jill Magner was unstoppable at midfield as were Jacqueline Kahn and Brianna McKenney. Lydia Crafts was tireless at forward.

Boys Under 16, after tying Hingham in a close contest 3-3 on Saturday, on goals by Chris Kondrat and Charlie Endris, lost 5-0 to Marshfield on Sunday.

Boys Under 14-1 beat Norwell in an away game Friday 2-1. Scoring goals for Cohasset were Jim Magner and Ryan Freeman. As usual, Chris McKenna was superb in goal.

Boys Under 12-2 lost a 5-2 heartbreaker to Marshfield. Greg Bilton and Morgan Sandell scored two goals each for Cohasset. Assisting on goals were Nate Cotter and Stephen Kovach. Cohasset totally dominated this game in which Marshfield scored on breakaway goals. Pat Leahy and Noel Grinnell each had near misses.

Boys Under 10-1, the "Hotspurs" copped a 3-1 win over Scituate on goals by Charlie Dean, Doug O'Brien and Steve Sceery. Assisting were Chris Golden, Dennis Rooney, Ben Peterson, Charlie Dean, and Eric Hanian. Co-captain Eric Hanian made six saves as goalkeeper in the first half, while Wiley Wakeman held off six shots in the second. The "Hotspurs" played two games last Saturday, one a draw against a tough Pembroke squad 2-2. Dennis Rooney scored the first goal on assists by Wiley Wakeman and Steve Sceery. Eric Hanian scored next on assists by Steve Sceery and Doug O'Brien. Sharing goalkeeping duties were Wiley Wakeman and Nick Herzog. In the next game against Duxbury, the "Hotspurs" lost 2-1 with Steve Sceery scoring the only goal on assists by Nick Herzog and Doug O'Brien. Goalie Wiley Wakeman made five great saves. Coach Charlie Dean praised his team for their "effort, energy and most of all their positive attitude."

Boys Under 8-5 celebrated a 3-1 victory over Boys Under 8-4 in their final game of a very successful season (a win-loss record of 8-1-1). Scoring wining goals were Brayton Pearsall, Greg Smith and Bryan Wasp on assists from William Moody, Alex Etkind, Nick Cavanaugh and Nick Lavigne. Greg Harrington was superb at midfield. Condolences to Chris Caron who was out for the season with a broken ankle. Jimmie French scored the single goal for the Under 8-4's, while Charlie Anderson and William Prendergast played exceptional soccer at midfield.

All in all this was a fine season for the 29 teams from Cohasset, ranging in age from 7 to 19 years of age, in the Coastal Youth Soccer League. Congratulations to all players and coaches for their spirit, enthusiasm and good sportsmanship.

Cardinals beat Sox in 'Blaze of Glory'

By Sandra Noble
League correspondent

The Cardinals banged out five hits in Saturday's game beating the Red Sox 10-7. Leading the parade was center fielder Nate Cotter who went two for two. Interestingly, Nate jumped on a Joey Magner fast ball for his first of two doubles. Other base hits were supplied by Ted Goff, Alex Schwein and David Payne. Steve Kovach continues to lead the ball club in attitude and with his slick glove work. He assisted on three outs going 4-3 on the plays. Another fielding highlight was when Joe Magner was out down at the plate on a 7 to 6 to 5 to 2 relay. Charley Dean applied the tag at the plate on a sliding Red Sox.

Twelve-year-old leader, Dave Noble started on the hill for the Cards vs. last year's league champions. Dave worked two complete innings yielding five hits and four runs. Young Dave Payne came on in the third and proceeded to throw the next four innings. He completed the ball game and threw the best innings of his major league career. Payne struck out 9, walked only 2 and gave up only one hit. Speedster Ted Goff had his consecutive game scoring streak halted at 6 games. Nate Cotter scored two runs as did Dave Payne. Single run scorers were Steve Kovach, Al Schwerin, Dave Noble, Steve Baker, Charley Dean and Charley Toppan.

PIRATES VS. ATHLETICS

The Pirates took it away Sunday in a 20 to 12 win. Ben Smoot hit two singles and one terrific triple, joined by Jarrod Batts with a triple and Rob Buckley hitting three singles. Keith Jackson and Colton Ralston did an outstanding job on the mound.

In a late surge with the bats, the A's scored 7 runs in the last inning to close the gap but came up short. Golden glove stops shared by Eric Hanian and Morgan Sandell were seen at second base. Eric Hanian gave an especially gutsy performance, considering an injury prior to the game. The A's used five pitchers with Sarah Berger finishing strong in the last inning. Pirate catcher, Robbie Buckley's strong arm was tested by the A's successful base running.

ATHLETICS VS. CARDINALS

The Athletics had an all-out victory Tuesday night against the Cardinals, (we won't mention the score). Morgan Sandell continues to frustrate pitchers with great discipline and patience at the plate. A lot of hits were recorded with two hits each by Ben Ketchem, Sarah Berger, Sean Norris, Sean Cogill, Mike Rossi, Matt O'Connor, and Pat Murphy. Good fielding plays by Josh Flanagan at second, Jeff Flanagan in right field, Adam Sasso in center, Ian Simons in left, and Pat Murphy at first base. Sean Cogill and Sean Norris anchored third base and short stop, with Tom Kittle finishing strong as catcher.

Ben Ketchem pitched five and 1/3 innings, getting stronger as he went on. Sarah Berger faced four batters, striking out the last batter to end the game. Tom Kittle, Matt O'Connor, Eric Hanian, Sean Norris and Ian Simons were quick to take advantage of opportunities on the bases. Aggressive base running was also shown by Adam Sasso, and Sarah Berger.

Games not reported in this article will be covered in next week's Mariner.

Wah Lum trophies

Recently several students representing Wah Lum Kung Fu Academy of Cohasset competed in the N.E. Open Karate Championships.

Four students who won trophies were Jake Gifford of Weymouth, fourth place in beginners weapons; Scott Jeffery of Roslindale, third place in mens' beginner form; Gerry Amado of Hull, second place in beginners' weapons; and Caryn Brooks of Hingham, first place in girls' beginner fighting. For further information on Wah Lum Academy, call 383-6822.

Belmont Hill School awards

A Cohasset resident was recently honored at Belmont Hill School when Christopher Wadsworth, headmaster, announced the varsity sports awards for the spring season. Among those receiving varsity letters was Brian P. Pompeo, son of Arthur M. Jr. and Nancy L. Pompeo. Pompeo received a letter in varsity baseball.

scouting news

The Scouting program provides many opportunities to learn skills and to use them. Recently, Troop 28 of Cohasset attended a two day SCUBA orientation program at the McMullan Pool in Norwell. This program was sponsored by the Pro Divers a USA Dive Shop of Braintree.

First of all, SCUBA is defined as Self Contained Underwater Breathing Apparatus. Mike Dyson, assisted by Steve Weydt, the instructors, donated their time for this instructional weekend for our Boy Scouts.

On Saturday, the Scouts participated in water safety and swim practice. The SCUBA orientation followed on Sunday. The Scouts learned to use a snorkel underwater, learned how to surface dive, how to use SCUBA gear, how to inflate and deflate diving vests and how to use a regulator on the air-compressed tanks. A great experience was had by all.

Any boys interested in scouting are welcome to attend one of the meetings. The Scouts meet on Monday nights at the Joseph Osgood School from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Howie Montenko, Scoutmaster, may be reached at 545-0127 for further information.

Boys' tennis team finishes fine season

the Dover team a spot in the semi-finals against Sharon. Instead of breaking the tie, John Brister's and Bill Jordan's doubles victory could only cut the Dover lead 2-3.

"We did pretty well, but we wanted to go farther in the second round," Mike Cisneros said. "We got off to a bad start."

"One thing I'm going to do next year is get our teams set earlier," said Chamberlain. "I kept making changes up until the last minute, particularly my doubles teams. It was unsettling for some players, and they didn't have the time to get used to playing with each other."

"We had a pretty good run," Slotnick said of his team's 11-5 record. Cohasset's other four losses were to Scituate and Norwell, two games each.

The tennis team will lose four players to college: Mike Cisneros, Harvard; Caleb Slotnick, UCLA; Pat Milligan, University of Florida; and Doug Drysdale, Tufts. Milligan, who was offered to attend Duke to play tennis, chose Florida instead, insisting that "the weather down there is just great."

Chamberlain's recruiting program has already begun. "I understand there are some pretty decent players, but you have to convince them to play tennis," he said. "But I think we'll have a pretty good team. We already have the Brister brothers and Dan DeMichele, and Bill Jordan has improved a lot.

"Sasche Ordelheide got a few matches in. He'll be a junior, and he's improved too. I just have to keep him from playing golf."

Chamberlain is also interested in Joey Slotnick, who will be a freshman. "I haven't seen him play yet, but I'm looking forward to it. He definitely has potential," the new coach said.

Chamberlain replaced coach Ed Amaral, who died of cancer a few weeks before the season started. Chamberlain lives in Hingham and coaches J.V. soccer for Cohasset during the fall, and looks forward to the challenges of next spring.

"This was definitely a learning experience. I'd like to play more than 14 matches next spring; we might scrimmage against Hingham or other teams that aren't in the league. A couple more matches against teams we can beat and some matches against better teams; that's the only way to improve."

Swimmers try out

The Cohasset Swim Team will hold tryouts on Friday, June 14 from 3 to 5 p.m., and on Saturday June 15 from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m.

Diving Team tryouts will be Saturday, June 15 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tryouts will be held at the Cohasset Swim Center on Sohier Street. Registration will take place from 3 to 5 p.m. on Saturday, June 15 directly after the posting of the team roster. Age groups range from eight and under to 16 and under.

Last year, swimming was for the first time a varsity sport at Cohasset High School with the team finishing third in the Pilgrim Conference Championships, defeating North Quincy and Sandwich. All Star swimmers. The team has openings for both swimmers and divers, and boys who will be in grades seven through 12 next year are encouraged to participate in the summer swim program as a preparation for swimming on the Cohasset High team.

Discover World's End

The world's oldest land trust, The Trustees of Reservations, will celebrate its 100th birthday on Saturday, June 22 with a festive "Discovery Day" at World's End in Hingham. The celebration, which runs from 1:30 to 8 p.m., is free and open to the public.

An exciting array of activities has been planned for all ages. For those looking for leisurely tours of the property, horse-drawn hayrides will be offered along the lower road. For the energetic, there will be kite-flying on top of Planter's Hill. Betty Levin of Lincoln will bring her border collies and sheep for a demonstration of sheepherding in the field below Planter's Hill, and Nick Popovich from the New England Wildlife Center will be on hand with several hawks to discuss the special role these raptors play in maintaining the health of our ecosystem. In addition, the New England Orienteering Club will sponsor an orienteering clinic designed to introduce newcomers to the sport.

At 5:30 p.m., accordionist Mabel Biagini of Quincy will lead picnickers to the top of Planter's Hill. Later, Frederic Winthrop, Jr., Director of The Trustees of Reservations, will welcome Discovery Day-goers and a surprise guest from the past, who will arrive for the celebration by horse-drawn carriage. Evoking life on World's End at the turn of the century, other horse-drawn carriages will parade around the area. At 6:30 p.m., Winthrop will lead guests in the planting of several Centennial trees and cut the 100th birthday cake.

The Mass Confusion Barbershop Quartet will entertain picnickers from 7 to 8 p.m., at which point naturalist Philip Swanson will explain the wonders of the Summer Solstice as the sun goes down over Planter's Hill.

Visitors are welcome to spend all or a portion of the day at World's End. Those coming just for the evening should plan to be there by 5:30 p.m. and are encouraged to bring a picnic supper, spread blankets and chairs about and enjoy the beautiful views of Hingham Bay and the Weir River. Complimentary Veryfine juices, birthday cake and cookies will be served beginning at 5:30 p.m. (Hot dogs and soda will be on sale throughout the day.)

Co-Chairmen of the Discovery Day Committee, Debbie Zildjian of Hingham and Lynne Layman of North Scituate, wish to acknowledge the support of the planning committee, who worked together to organize this Centennial event. They include: Eleanor Anastos, Peter Bickford, Ed and Marge Hills, John and Nancy King, Anne Reardon, Debbie Sankey, Susan Spofford, Henry and Elizabeth Stokes and Helen and Greely Summers, all of Hingham, and Sherry Becker, June Hubbard, Shirley Marten, Jean Simonds, Grace Tuckerman and Frannie Wakeman, all of Cohasset.

The Trustees of Reservations is grateful to the Garden Club of Hingham, the Community Garden Club of Cohasset and the Cohasset Garden Club, which joined together to donate the Centennial trees. Special thanks, also, to Veryfine Products, Inc. of Westford for the donation of assorted fruit juices and to CYRK of Gloucester, which donated special birthday buttons for distribution to Discovery Day participants.

Graced by dramatic topography and magnificent landscaping, 251-acre World's End attracts visitors year-round, who come to walk or jog, cross-country ski or be refreshed by the panoramic ocean views. Acquired by The Trustees of Reservations in 1967, World's End was originally owned by the Brewer family, who for many years maintained the property and made it available for public use.

World's End is one of 72 properties owned and managed by the Trustees throughout the Commonwealth. Since its founding in 1891, the organization has been dedicated to preserving for public use and enjoyment properties of exceptional scenic, historic and ecological value throughout Massachusetts.

Parking will be available in the fields on Pine Hill and on the west side of Planter's Hill.

No dogs will be allowed in World's End after 10:30 a.m. on June 22 only.

council on aging news briefs

By Kathy Bryanton

The Graying Population: The over 65 years of age population numbered 31 million in 1988. Nationally, this represents about one out of every eight people. Massachusetts ranks tenth among the states in numbers of elders with 813,000 or about 13.8 percent of the general population. Cohasset seniors number 1450 or about 20 percent of the town's residents.

The older population is getting even older. The 85 and older group is the fastest growing segment of our society, having grown 24 times larger than it was in 1900. Persons reaching age 65 in 1988 can expect to live an additional 16.9 years.

Housing: Three out of five elderly households own their own homes. Their housing is generally older and less adequate than non-elders who own their own homes. After they retire, 85 percent of the people over 65 have stated that they prefer to stay in their own homes.

Income: The medium income for older males was $13,107 and $7,655 for older women. The major source of income for older individuals is asset income earnings, public and private pensions and other sources.

Poverty: About 3.4 million elderly live below the poverty level. In Massachusetts, approximately 78,861 elders are living at this level. For elders 85 and over, almost 32 percent are near or below the poverty line. Widows are four times as likely to be poor as wives of the same age. Half of all poor widows were not impoverished while their husbands were alive. At present, 45 percent of older women living alone are poor or near poor compared with 38 percent of the men.

Employment: With the elimination of mandatory retirement, older workers have more flexibility in retirement. AARP and National Council on Aging research shows that the closer workers are to retirement age, the less they want to retire. Approximately half of the workers over 65 in 1989 were employed parttime.

While older workers still face discrimination in employment opportunities, some companies in Massachusetts such as the Marriott, Days Inn, Bay Bank and McDonald's have actively recruited older workers. Some even developed new policies such as flextime, changed benefits and offered training to attract employees.

A new law empowers workers 40 years and older who believe they have been discriminated against on the job. Plaintiffs in age discrimination cases have the right to seek a jury trial and can receive double or triple damages in civil suits.

Health and Health Care: In 1988, 22 percent of older persons assessed their health as fair or poor. While the number of days in which usual activities are restricted because of illness or injury increases with age, a study conducted in Massachusetts reported 56 percent of persons over 95 years old, indicated they had not spent a single day in bed due to ill health in 1988.

(Statistics provided by AARP, the Administration on Aging and the Massachusetts Census Bureau.)

Family respite assistance set

An innovative new Family Respite Assistance Program designed to benefit Alzheimer's victims and their family caregivers was recently introduced by the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore, Inc. of Hingham. According to Jo Ann Mitchell, president, this pilot project is intended to relieve the physical and emotional stress of the family caregiver who must cope with around-the-clock care of an Alzheimer's patient, and to encourage families to seek alternative sources of help within the community. The program will serve the communities of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate, and Weymouth.

For more information, call Jo Ann Mitchell at 749-5417 or Judy Donahue at 925-9341.

Fire chief ousted over budget

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

Selectmen voted Monday not to renew Fire Chief Daniel Brock's contract because of his refusal to comply with the board's budget restrictions.

Brock, 42, has been Cohasset fire chief since 1986. His contract expires on Dec. 31. Under terms of his contract, he must be notified by July 1 if the town does not plan to renew.

A statement read by Chairman Ned Tebbetts and approved by a majority of the board, read in part:

"Chief Brock came to Cohasset in January 1986 when the fire department was in turmoil.

"It is to the Chief's credit that this unrest has subsided during his tenure.

"His knowledge of fire sciences and technology is also not the issue.

"What has become apparent is that some of the Chief's goals are incompatible with the financial realities facing the town.

"In an era of retrenchment, the Chief has requested increases in his budget, while other departments have made significant cuts."

The statement also said that Cohasset's fire department budget ($1 million) is "disproportionate for a town" of its size.

The statement closed by saying that Brock is a "dedicated fire professional" and wishing him "well in his future endeavors."

Selectmen Rocco Laugelle voted against terminating Brock's contract, and said he did not agree with the statement.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby also disagreed with the statement, but did vote with the 4-1 majority not to renew the contract.

Laugelle questioned whether the board "knew what they wanted."

"I don't know what you are looking for," he said, asking if the board was being influenced by "vendettas" against Brock.

"I don't know what you people think you are going to get ... is it power?"

Laugelle proposed a one-year extension to Brock's contract, but could not get any support from the rest of the board.

Firefighter William Protulis told the board that Brock had the support of a majority of the department. He presented the board with a letter of support signed by 26 of the department's 38 permanent and call firefighters as well as signed letters of support from fire chiefs in Scituate, Hingham and Hull.

Protulis said Brock has been instrumental in bringing equipment and protective clothing in the department "up to standard."

"I just want you to stop and think what you are doing here," he said to the board. "What kind of applicants do you think you are going to get. You are setting up a revolving door policy of every three to six years getting a new fire chief. Who do you think is going to apply?"

Protulis said many of Brock's budgetary problems are caused by a contract approved by selectmen three years ago.

Meet the CVS

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Last week the members of CVS, the Community Volunteer Service club, got together to celebrate the end of their second year of existence at Cohasset High School. They brought pizza, soda and warm memories.

From the laughter filling the senior study hall, you might suppose these kids know how to party well. You wouldn't be wrong, but you wouldn't know the most important things about them. This group prides themselves on being kids with causes.

Art Festival and Harborfest offer culture

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

For months now committees have labored long hours working to make South Shore Art Center's 36th annual Art Festival spectacular.

This year for the first time the event will involve townwide activities as the merchants of the community create the first Harborfest.

Meg Robbins, chairman of the art festival, worked with dozens of community organizers to create an event of gigantic proportions.

Saturday from noon to 4 p.m. Continental Cable will televise live from the Common under the direction of Robert Belliveau. He has 30 volunteers on line to produce a special for Channel 53.

The usual artisans market and assorted children's workshops will take place throughout the weekend. But there will be a first of its kind parade at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, June 22, from the Harbor to the Common. The

Shadd appointed

The Cohasset Conservation Trust recently announced the appointment of Deborah A. Shadd, 31 Summer Street, as a new Trustee, according to Jack Hubbard, Chairman.

Shadd attended Middlebury College, graduating in 1975 with a Bachelor of Arts in German. She received her law degree from Columbia Law School in 1981 and served as a law clerk for a Massachusetts Supreme Court Justice for several years following law school. From 1982 to 1986 Shadd was an Associate with Foley, Hoag and Eliot, specializing in Environmental Law and Real Estate.

In recent months the Cohasset Conservation Trust has received gifts of five acres of salt marsh on the Gulf River from Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dormitzer, 2.4 acres of shorefront property along Atlantic Avenue from Catherine L. Scott of Lexington, Kentucky, and Andrus Island in Lily Pond together with three acres of land from Prescott Low.

Resolution opposes landfill

The citizens group SAFE is proposing a resolution at the June 26 session of the Annual Town Meeting. This session will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the High School.

"Our resolution will be very simple and to the point," said SAFE President Alix White. "We will be asking the Town Meeting to vote AGAINST the siting of any MWRA facility in Cohasset, whether for "grit and screenings," sludge, scum, or any other by-products of the Boston-area sewer system."

"We feel that most Cohasset residents are already strongly against having any MWRA landfill in Cohasset," said White. "We have received over 300 signatures on our petition so far. About 75 people came to our public forum last week. And, the Selectmen have voted unanimously to oppose having an MWRA facility anywhere in Cohasset. One of the strongest reasons, apart from potential environmental damage to oppose this," said White, "is that having the MWRA here will lower property values - and thus will both lower revenue used for Town services and reduce equity in our homes. We invite all Cohasset voters to join us at Town Meeting to support this resolution."

The text of the resolution is as follows: "RESOLVED, that the citizens of the Town of Cohasset are strongly opposed to the disposal of "grit and screenings," sludge, scum, or any other residuals, so-called, from the sewer system of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA), anywhere in the Town of Cohasset.

RESOLVED, that this Town Meeting hereby urges our Selectmen, Board of Health, State Representative, State Senator, and all other town, state, or federal government officials to take whatever steps may be necessary to insure that Cohasset is not selected as a disposal site for any MWRA sewer system residuals."

Police/Fire Open House

The Cohasset Police and Fire Station renovation committee will hold an Open House at the facility from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday, June 22 and from 12 to 3 p.m. on Sunday, June 23.

Both the Police and Fire Stations will be open for inspection by the public during Harborfest activities.

The public open house concludes an eight-month renovation and rehabilitation of the 38-year-old facility.

The work included bringing the facility up to current code with full handicap access and additional facilities at both stations for female personnel.

The renovation committee includes Joseph Manfredi, Gerard Buckley, William Higgens and David Chase. The work was accomplished below budget.

The committee issued thanks to various Town Departments: Harold Litchfield, Highway Department; Peter Lagell, Tree and Park; Greg Doyon, Selectmen's office and others.

"Bob Egan as clerk of the works, performed yeoman service and concurrently saved the town money.

"Special thanks to the Roy Family for a generous donation of furniture and kitchen cabinets," the committee report said.

Donations sought for lighthouse

The Cohasset Historical Commission has been accepting donations from interested individuals for the completion of the replica of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse on Government Island, Cohasset. This project is in Stage 2 and a Third Stage in 1992 should see its completion.

Noel Ripley, Chairman of the Commission, in conjunction with the planned Harborfest Days on June 23 will have a display of T-shirts, Minot's Light Pins, Number Plates and other mementos available to the public on the day of the celebration.

Each window light in the replica can be given in memory of some donor. Government Island is located on Border St.

CVS is more than just great parties at Rosie's Place, a shelter and food kitchen in Boston.

"I worked with the homeless," she said. "It was really fun."

Jen Reidy and Lisa Schramm reminisced about the Friday afternoon bingo games with the residents at the Ripley Road Nursing Home. Lori Gallant and Jed Terry spoke about the joy they found in helping kids enjoy themselves and win medals at a Special Olympics competition in Braintree.

Junior Terry also jokes that it has been a great way to meet girls. The ratio of males to females can't be beat if you're a guy.

The group's publicity person, Ann-Margaret Grew agrees that members meet a lot of new people through their activities.

"The meetings are a riot," club advisor Gale Civale adds.

Civale and fellow advisor Lori Pearlman point out that in addition to doing good and having fun in the process, members also demonstrated leadership, commitment and organization. According to Civale, many college admission committees rate volunteer activities highly when evaluating applicants.

Community service has been made mandatory in many school systems, but Cohasset's program is entirely voluntary. CVS members want to keep it that way. They think it makes their efforts more meaningful.

Although the club numbers less than 20 students, they tap into the faculty and student body for help with their special events. The success of the events shows how readily Cohasset reaches out a helping hand.

"Just do it" is the club's motto for good reason.

In October, they held a canned food drive to stock the food pantry shelves at Wellspring. The sophomore class lent a helping hand by knocking a dollar off the admission price to their class dance for anyone toting a donation for the drive. By the end of the drive, CVS had collected more than 500 cans of food.

CVS organized a letter-writing campaign to make sure the men and women serving in Operation Desert Storm would not be forgotten. At least 250 letters went off to Saudi Arabia. Several students, including club members Reidy, Gallant and Grew, received responses.

The holiday spirit arrived in December. Students joined forces with Project Bread and decorated more than 100 large wooden spoons for the Santa's Kitchen fundraiser. The spoons hung on Project Bread's giant Christmas tree in Boston's Downtown Crossing. CVS members also wrapped toys and gifts for distribution to preschool students attending Plymouth's Headstart Program.

Sara Deveney, Meredith Hansen, Marc Mercurio, Lisa Schramm and Kate Murray are ready to load canned food for distribution at the food pantry at Wellspring in Hull.

Donations for Rosie's Place, the women's shelter in Boston, are prepared by Jed Terry, Jemilah Afshar, Ann-Margaret Grew, Tara Gallagher and Jen Reidy.

Several local businesses supported the good works of the Cohasset students. Woolworth's donated the spoons and Buttonwood Books & Toys, Good Sports, Inc. and Kit & Kaboodle donated gifts. Stop & Shop gave the organization a gift certificate.

Vacation and exams claimed their attention after Christmas, but they came back in full force in February to make valentines for the veterans at Brockton's VA hospital. They also threw a big party for the special needs students attending the mini-school, a special needs collaborative program in the high school.

In March they held a fund-raiser at Papa Gino's. Thanks to family, friends and supporters, the treasury was $160 richer. They found lots of good causes to spend the money on.

Rosie's Place benefited in April. The club collected personal care products like soap, shampoo, toothpaste and the like for the guests of the shelter. And although cleanliness may be a virtue, it is not all there is to life. The students added toys, books and clothing to the bundles they took into Boston.

May found club members participating in the Walk for Hunger and the Special Olympics.

All these special events came on top of the other activities the club supported.

Every Tuesday two students delivered the meals prepared in the high school kitchens to the senior luncheon sponsored by the Council on Aging at the First Unitarian Parish Hall. On the first Tuesday of each month, two students went into Rosie's Place with adult volunteer JoAnn Chittick to serve meals. The students shared their experience with other club members.

Fridays found students playing bingo with the residents of the Ripley Road Nursing Home. CVS members also sponsored holiday events at both Ripley Road and Cohasset Knolls nursing homes.

The special education program could always count on CVS members to lend a helping hand to their programs as well.

The members plan to keep in touch throughout the summer, planning events, preparing a video and orientation program for incoming students. And having more fun.

The kids with causes plan to keep the good times and the good works rolling in the 1991-92 school year.

FOR AN IDEA OF HOW DIRTY YOUR ORIENTAL RUG IS, RUB THIS AND LOOK AT YOUR FINGER.

Oriental rugs are constantly picking up various types of soil. Some are greasy and some are gritty. But they all can eat away at your treasured possession.

For your Oriental rug to retain its beauty and value, it should be cleaned at least once every three to five years.

At Grillo Oriental Rug Cleaning, we carefully examine each rug, then give it the most suitable treatment. Sometimes that means gentle machine-washing, other times it means our 'Art-Safe' hand-washing. And our exclusive equipment and methodology enable us to remove the deep-set grit that others miss.

Furthermore, unlike harsh commercial cleaning, our individualized, museum-quality care is always safe, always effective.

Handicapped find beach almost accessible

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

There was a small parade of handicapped people at Sandy Beach Saturday as officials dedicated the new boardwalk with a simple ribbon cutting.

Deborah Richards, vice chairman of the town's handicapped commission, was wheeled down the cedar walk to the edge of the water by Ray Buckley, father of the commission's chairman.

Behind that pair, John Zotos, another member of the commission, wheeled himself down the sloping incline. The walk begins at the edge of the parking lot and runs to the high water mark.

High tide Saturday had already gone by the time officials were ready for the ceremony.

Both Zotos and Richards praised the new ramp. Both of them said they would enjoy using the beach.

The boardwalk is not just for those in wheelchairs. It will also make the walk to the water easier for others who have impaired use of their legs but may be able to maneuver only with difficulty.

The ramp cost the Sandy Beach Association about $3,500. Donations from the public as well as a contribution of some materials from Hingham Lumber made the project possible.

Paul Corbett, president of Sandy Beach Associaiton, said he expects selectmen will approve handicapped parking spaces in the town lot adjacent to the beach. He said he hopes to see the parking spaces this summer.

David Chittim of the Sandy Beach Association, one of the prime movers, was not able to attend the ceremony dur to surgery.

Earlier Chittim said the wooden walk was modeled after one specially built for beachgoers in Marshfield.

The walk is 160 feet long, which means it can span the distance between from behind the small building at Sandy Beach to the high water mark.

It was constructed by Larry Shultz and Ken Cisneros under a contract from the Sandy Beach Association. The beach association is a private, nonprofit organization that maintains the beach.

The town Handicapped Commission worked with the Sandy Beach Association in dealing with the details to make the walk work.

Michelle Buckley, chairman of the handicapped comission, said she hopes the facilities in the bathhouse can be made handicapped accessible in time.

The walk will be be taken up in bad weather.

Ray Buckley pushes Deborah Richards along the new boardwalk at Sandy Beach.

Chief Brock will be let go in Dec.

"(Brock) can only make budget cuts," he said. "You are the people that ultimately have the final say and you have done nothing, absolutely nothing."

He implored the board to "work things out with Brock."

"Please give the Chief a chance, even if it is a one-year extension," he said. "You have got a good man here, don't lose him."

Jack MacNeill, a call firefighter, also spoke out in favor of Brock.

He said that Brock's successor tried to "drive a wedge" between the call and permanent firefighters.

"It took us a lot of time to get over that," he said, adding that Brock helped bring the two groups together again.

"I would ask you to try to work with him," he said. "We have a good leader here, we would like to keep him."

Tebbetts said Brock has given the board "a lot of resistance" to budget cuts, despite Cohasset's "great budget problems."

"We have had cooperation from most town department heads," he said, adding that Brock refuses to spend within their guidelines.

Brock was present at the meeting, but did not speak.

Later, he said he "did not agree" with the board's action.

He said his hands are tied by the department's contract. He questioned whether he should be blamed for the department's troubles.

"The restriction I have is that I am handed a contract, they have negotiated, and not given any leeway," he said.

He said the contract dictates how he uses his manpower, and the level of staffing.

"I go tell (selectmen) that I need more money to live up to the contract, and they get upset and tell me to find another way to do it. I end up in the frustrating position of being stuck in the middle."

Brock said as long as the current contract remains in place, it would be difficult for his replacement to fare any better with the board.

The contract actually expired last year. Negotiations between the town and fire union are in fact-finding stages.

One of the key issues, according to the advisory board, is the clause that dictates minimum manning levels. Five men are on duty at all times, under the terms of the contract.

Spotter issue emerges

SAFE last week urged the Cohasset Board of Health to continue pressing the Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL) to provide a "spotter" to monitor the wastes coming into the landfill.

"We are encouraged that the Board of Health is addressing this issue," said SAFE President Alix White. "Under the terms of their 1986 site assignment, CHL is required to have a spotter on the site. This issue has been unresolved for about five years."

While CHL is now permitted to accept only "demolition wastes," members of SAFE have questioned how the owners of CHL could limit the wastes unless there is a spotter.

"We are concerned that, without a spotter, the facility may be accepting other, more hazardous, wastes, which could pose a threat to the town water supply, Lily Pond, which is located less than one mile downhill from CHL," said White

around town

❑ We hear that exciting things are in store for Vicki Hafer, who has just resigned as nanny for Dr. Bobbi O'Pray's three children. She'll take the summer off to relax and spend time with her family and friends, then in September she'll be taking her new position with an exclusive New York agency. Vicki will be in charge of matching families with nannies, and will be terrific at it. Best of luck from all of your friends Vicki, you will be missed.

❑ We sure hope that Danny Silvia is recovering rapidly after his recent skateboarding accident. Dan was a patient at Mass. General, but is home now and we know he would love some cards and calls ... do that.

❑ The residents of Cohasset once again proved their strong sense of community spirit with a successful Red Cross Blood Drive. On Tuesday, June 4, 103 volunteer blood donors reported to the First Parish House to carry the drive over the goal of 95 pints. Shirley and Jack Cibelli, co-chairmen for the Cohasset blood drive, reported that it was a very smooth operation. The donors were evenly spaced throughout the scheduled hours of 2 to 7 p.m. and moved quickly through the donating process. A special thanks goes out to the following volunteers who worked on the day of the blood drive: Corinne Cahill, Jeff Steele, Al Odermatt, Grace Joyce, Shirley Martin, Ozzie Ingram, Joan Trask, Jane Marsh, Alice Riley, Laura Connor, Polly Doggett, Arlene Harris, Angie Kelley, Vi Tuthill, Katie Cibelli, Caitlin Hurley, Marisa Gallant, Aly Gallant, Georgine Butman, Jamey Watts, Caroline Derose, Elizabeth Hills, Janet Hoyler, Alex D'Urso, Kara Petrocelli, and Amy Parisi-Butman.

❑ The Duxbury Dance Shoppe held its dance recital at the South Shore Music Circus last Sunday afternoon, and it was wonderful. The theme was a Disney celebration, and the costumes were great. There were quite a few Cohasset girls in the production, and if you would like to watch it for yourself, tune in your cable tv's on Wednesdays beginning July 1 on Channel 3 at 7:30 p.m.

❑ Congratulations go to Stanley J. Manifase Jr. and Joan B. Andrus on the birth of their baby boy, born June 1 at South Shore Hospital.

❑ ★atthew Lombardy of Cohasset graduated June 2 with the class of 1991 at Archbishop Williams High School, Braintree. Matthew participated in the Baccalaureate Mass June 1 and in conjunction with the Awards Program and Senior Banquet was presented with a Media Center Award for maintaining the school's media center and assisting students; he also received an athletic letter for golf. At Commencement Exercises Matthew received a gold medal award in Performing Arts for excellence in public speaking. Matthew was a senior peer leader and was very active in the Williams campus ministry program. Matthew has actively participated in the F.B. Battle Division of the United States Naval Sea Cadet Program located in Scituate. He is currently a midshipman and the Division's Operations Officer. Matthew has served on numerous naval exercises on Coast Guard cutters and on the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy. In the fall, Matthew will enter Saint Anselm College in Manchester, New Hampshire.

The Harborfest Steering Committee jokes while planning the Blessing of the Fleet and Parade of Boats scheduled for June 23 during SSAC Art Festival/ Harborfest weekend. Left to right are: Keith Knowles of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, Jim Lagrotteria of the Mass. Lobstermen's Association, The Rev. Gary Ritts of Cohasset Clergy Association, South Shore Art Center Art Festival Chair Meg Robbins, and Bob Martin of the Chamber of Commerce. The Art Festival opens June 21 and runs with Harborfest on June 22 and 23.
Little League players continue to make great plays.

Little League players continue to make great plays.

❑ Two little girls are brand new to our town, as of last month. On May 8 Joseph J. and JoAnn M. Laprise of 282 Forest Ave. had a baby girl at South Shore Hospital; on May 11 David R. and Margaret R. Coogan had a baby girl. Before we know it they'll be in school together.

❑ Here's one part of the South Shore Art Center Art Festival Cohasset Harborfest ... the Cohasset Firefighters Association is going to have a dunking tank, located in the front yard of the Cohasset Community Center. They are trying to raise money to purchase a sign carved by David Hasson for the newly renovated fire station. So far they have received promises from Jack DeLorenzo and Paul Laugelle to be "on stage", but they need more volunteers than that. If you wish to help, call the fire station, then all you have to do is find your best suit, wear a smile, and you're on. It's fun. The Association will also be selling T-shirts, commemorating 100 years that our firemen have been in this town, 1891-1991, incredible.

❑ Welcome back to Abby White——next time you go to the Cohasset pool be sure to say hello.

❑ That's the news from here, now that vacation is starting be sure to keep us informed of your plans!!

Grenada exhibit

Grenada, located just 12 degrees north of the equator, is a cultural eye-opener set within a mountainous countryside and amidst classic Caribbean beaches and several beautiful waterfalls. The island, as rich in history as it is in culture, was the setting for a recent South Shore Art Center sponsored art trip with Marshfield's Virginia Avery and 15 watercolor enthusiasts.

For eight days last March, Avery and her students took to their easels with watercolors, acrylics, and pen and ink to capture the beautiful Grenada scenery on canvas. Later each evening, Avery led a critique session to discuss each other's works.

The final products of their Grenada adventure will be on display at the Art Center, 119 Ripley road in Cohasset from June 27 through July 27. An opening reception will beheld Thursday, June 27 from 6 to 8 p.m. If you haven't had a chance to visit the island yourself, learn of its beauty through this beautiful display or for those who know Grenada, reacquaint yourself with its splendor.

The Glorious Grenada Exhibit will be open to the public Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Call 383-9548 for more information.

Meehan wins

Dawn Meehan, an eighth grade student at Cohasset High School has won two gold medals in the New England Junior Olympic Championships. She will now go on to compete for the National Junior Olympics in Florida.

Jay Rattenbury graduates

South Shore Vocational Technical High School will graduate 99 seniors on Friday, May 31, with the usual pomp and circumstance, but there will be something a little different about this year's class.

Traditionally, most of the graduates leave Vo-Tech for employment, according to Guidance Director Pam Titus. But this year, because of the economy, many of the graduates have no jobs lined up. "This is a class that realizes the struggle of going into the economy. Unlike other classes, the job outlook is not so good for these seniors, Titus said.

Another difference in this year's class, as noted by student council advisor, Hank Stefano, is that the class officers included several young men. "It was different this year that so many ran and were elected," he commented.

Spotter issue emerges

asked the Vice President of CHL, Paul Barry, whether he would agree to provide a video camera to automatically track what trucks come into the gate, and to provide funds for the town to hire a part-time town employee to act as a spotter.

"Mr. Barry stated that he would not cooperate with these conditions," said White. "Then, the Board asked him to discuss the issue with his partners, and to report back. They indicated that, if CHL would not agree to those conditions, that they would then consider re-opening the public hearings on the 1986 site assignment - which have never been officially closed. SAFE hopes the Board can quickly resolve this issue."

Show up at Town Meeting and vote

Town Meeting reconvenes at 7:30 Wednesday, June 29, at the high school auditorium.

At least two groups of people are talking about attending the meeting — the people who are concerned about the Cohasset Heights Landfill, CHL, and the group who want to see the old lighthouse keeper's house at Government Island turned into something other than rental housing.

We have listened to the arguments of both groups and are ready to give them a heartfelt endorsement.

First of all, on the CHL issue: We oppose the idea of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, MWRA, coming to our town — which operates its own sewer and water facilities — and dumping.

CHL is located on a hill above the town water supply, which is Lily Pond. While we've seen the studies that show most of the runoff goes away from the pond, we understand that in times of heavy rains, some of the water rolls toward the water supply.

We know the town water is tested on a regular basis and the results have shown there are no current problems with chemicals in Lily Pond. We want to keep it that way.

The MWRA has its own member communities — let one of them deal with the grit and screenings. On town meeting floor the MWRA was described as an agency with deep pockets.

Well, water is a precious commodity. It becomes more expensive every year.

We don't think any state agency has pockets deep enough to compensate us if we lose our precious water source.

More than that we don't want the added aggravation of dealing with the grit even if the landfill were reconstructed in a way that guaranteed no pollution would escape.

On the matter of Government Island, we have yet to hear any good reason to discourage the change in its use.

If a group of residents are willing to go to the bother of raising funds to renovate the building, then let them begin.

Joe McElroy estimates it could cost $200,000 to bring the building back to life.

The $30,000 request — rejected by the voters in the May 18 override election — would have only renovated kitchen and bath facilities. A quick look at the outside of the building is enough to show anyone there is more work to be done.

VoTech students honored

South Shore Vocational Technical High School held its annual Awards Banquet in the cafetorium at the Hanover campus.

Openings remarks were given by Superintendent Director Dr. Clifford Easton who stressed goal setting as an important part of our lives.

Also present were School Committee members (Marie) Val Baker from Scituate and Larry Mitchell from Cohasset.

A good man is hard to find

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Just make sure you talk to them last!

The adjourned session of the April 6, 1991 annual town meeting will take place next Wednesday (June 26) and while I really do try to stay away from this kind of stuff, TT Selectman Diana Kornet's right, we should all go. Please note my opinions are always due Monday a.m. so I don't know what TT Selectmen did June 17...they may have decided to do a quick adjourn of the adjourned session, because of so many unknown facts.

As luxury, non-luxury and private housing across the state and the nation has turned into Section 8 housing, I do not feel the Great Commonwealth of Massachusetts has any need for the Bates building (i.e. giving it to Habitat). With approximately 300 plus Tinytown citizens out of work, TT meeting has a definite need to do some serious middle class charity work in TT.

In last week's Mariner Fred Koed (a state employee) talked about the good old Dukaka (sic) days of 1988 during which time TT boards and committees told the Mass. Executive Office of Communities and Development they would "explore" the possibility of converting the Bates building into low and/or moderate income housing units. Were we ever told about that? All I remember doing at TT meeting is voting to sell the thing when TT selectpeople built the new TT hall addition. When did I say I would make it into low income housing? Wish people would stop doing this stuff behind my back.

Times have changed, Fred. Phil Johnson was replaced, the Duke was driven out of town, the world turned into Section 8 housing, and Bill Weld said he's not going to play the discretionary funding game with cities and towns Dukaka played. Weld's worried about keeping cities and towns solvent, afloat.

Here's a real threat for TT selectpersons to consider. Give away valuable real estate and you may never see the passage of another override ballot in your political lifetimes. That's how angry Tinytown will be.

Here are the questions which should be asked of TT selectpeople at the adjourned session of Tinytown meeting. If they can't answer any of these questions, they shouldn't be voting to give $125,000 plus (remember, Wayne Sawchuk said he'd buy it for that) away:

1) Do you have hard and fast figures on local aid?

2) Does anybody up there have any idea of what the 80 plus state tax appellate cases are going to cost? Some have already been settled out of court; Tinytown does have an elected actuary, but unfortunately he's suing Tinytown and is probably not a reliable source.

3) Projections - somebody better have made some. Is the Tinytown Treasurer seeing any kind of trend? I'm sure she is. Will the Tinytown Accountant be at this meeting with numbers in hand? She really needs to be there.

If none of these questions can be answered, it would be foolish for TTown meeting to re-convene for any serious voting.

I'm now looking to Habitat for leadership, because there is little and no leadership on the TT board of selectmen. TT Selectpeople already have a perfectly valid and voted article to advertise the Bates building for sale for six months. But. This is the year we're into non-binding stuff.

Commentary

Just remember, the only articles which can be discussed in the adjourned session are: 3, 4, 5, 9, 14, 19, 27, 28, 31 and 45. I'm sure the TT moderator knows this, and TT counsel knows this, but now they know that "you" know this.

Sources say there will be a strong end-play by TT selectmen to eliminate the recreation budget from Article 4; still other players are threatening to eliminate TT Selectpeople salaries.

And, I wouldn't count on the movie, if I were you, TT selectpeople. There's strong indications from Hollywood that TT Selectpeople were just a little too greedy; one unnamed film-maker source said "We can't solve all of Cohasset's financial problems." Accordingly, my source says Housesitters is well on its way to Dover.

Weird TT week. A TT citizen called to ask for a little preview of what's in the TT column last week...so I threw out a few teasers, and then asked: "Why do TT selectpeople do these things...like name six vendors to Sandy Beach (this kind of stuff causes wars!)? Why don't they seem to have a basic philosophy of government? And why do they want to remove Jeff Waal from the conservation commission?

A couple of weeks ago my friend came to me, complaining of a headache which she couldn't understand. I said, well, it's always good to try to remember what you've eaten...because often food is the culprit. She doubted it was food, thought maybe it was the pollen. Here's what she had for breakfast: donuts and coffee. Lunch: ice coffee, Doritos, and malted milk balls. Tact (sic) party: raw vegetables and salami. Graduation party: pizza, Circus Marshmallow Peanuts (brand), cereal mix, Wintergreen candies, wine, cake. We both agreed, it was that nasty old pollen.

Grit worries some residents

To the Editor:

On Monday, June 17, I and many other Cohasset residents received a letter from Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL), asking us to consider taking MWRA "grit and screenings."

In this letter, CHL attempts to make "grit and screenings" sound palatable. CHL implies that only "grit and screenings" would be dumped here, and that we have a choice only between "grit and screenings" or the CHL proposed solid waste expansion. However, there is no guarantee that CHL will get their proposed expansion.

Also, if CHL was sold to the MWRA for $20 million — which is what they are actually attempting to do — then no one in Cohasset would be able to tell the MWRA that they could not also dump sludge, scum, or other sewer residuals here.

Since "grit and screenings" are not treated at all, and because the Boston-area sewer system has many industries tied in, "grit and screenings" would often be soaked in or coated with raw sewage containing toxic heavy metals or other contaminants.

"The decision rests largely with the town itself."

SAFE has collected over 400 signatures (so far) of Cohasset residents OPPOSED to accepting an MWRA

(See page 11)

Paul Barry, owner of Cohasset Heights landfill, wrote to town residents about the financial and environmental benefit of choosing one kind of waste over another. Barry believes he can actually convince voters that it is in their best interest to allow Cohasset to be the dumping grounds for the MWRA's sewerage byproducts.

House errs in taxing Social Security benefits

By Sen. Robert L. Hedlund
Special to the Mariner

Earlier this month, the House Ways and Means Committee budget contained a section which would have terminated the current "no tax" status for Social Security benefits that seniors depend on to maintain a certain standard of living. Older members of our society worked hard and contributed diligently to the Social Security system.

Placing these benefits within the reach of Massachusetts' very high income tax for any senior who has an income of over $8,000 (married couples $12,000) does not properly reflect the reality that seniors face today.

During the budget debate, on a voice vote, the House of Representatives reinstated the "no tax" statute for SS benefits. However, when the House clerk printed the final budget, the Ways and Means' language which would allow the taxing of Social Security was still present.

Subsequent confusion was justified. Many concerned constituents contacted my office to express their opposition to this tax increase on our senior citizens. I am confident that we will correct this mistake in the Senate.

Breathalyzer bill

An early June session proved to be successful for those who want to further increase the influence of breathalyzer machines as a means of punishing motorists who are suspected of driving while intoxicated.

The bill would allow prosecutors to admit a refusal to take a breathalyzer as evidence in a trial.

However, these machines already play a significant role in the practical application of courtroom deliberations. Those who presently refuse to take the breathalyzer automatically lose their licenses to drive an automobile for three months, regardless of their guilt or innocence.

Therefore the law already provides breathalyzers with a strong affect on an individual's civil liberties. Augmenting this written law is the aura of guilt that surrounds a defendant who refuses a breathalyzer test as his case is heard.

As one of the few senators who opposed this bill, I placed this issue in what I believe is the proper context, that being the viability of the machine itself.

The breathalyzer machine is flawed and not completely trustworthy. Enhancing its power as a measurer of a citizen's guilt is not a constructive change to our judicial system.

If we are that eager to cede a greater role in dispensing justice to machines, let us at least be prudent and await technology more worthy of that honor.

Until the constitutional question of whether a citizen's Fifth Amendment safeguards are being threatened is sufficiently resolved, we should resist the inherent temptation of the aforementioned bill.

Local initiatives

I will be sponsoring an amendment on the Senate floor with some of my colleagues that will eliminate MBTA assessments on those communities which do not receive direct MBTA services.

This initiative will save our district approximately $ 1.3 million, which will be a great boon for the affected communities to compensate for any local aid reduction they may suffer. Local services will obviously benefit if this initiative succeeds.

SAFE wants no expansion

To the Editor:

Recently we received a letter from Paul Barry, Vice President of Cohasset Heights Ltd. (CHL). In this letter, he urges us as town residents to accept the proposal that he and his company are making to the Sludge Siting Commission. He is asking us to be a host community for "grit and screenings" from the 43 towns hooked up to the Boston sewer system. Now isn't that generous of him?

We are told in the open letter that "grit and screenings" are better than solid waste. The fact that is that these two choices hinge on one decision: the state's approval of CHL's proposed 100 percent expansion of its landfill. This expansion has not been granted, and should not be granted. This 16-year-old landfill is one mile uphill from our water supply, Lily Pond. This landfill is abutting and polluting its neighbor, the conservation trust Whitney Woods, and as we all know, the odor from the existing facility is so strong that at times it makes it difficult to breathe.

The clear and SAFE choice to these proposals is: none of the above — no sludge, no grit and screenings, and no solid waste. The Executive Office of Environmental Affairs recently rejected CHL's Draft Environmental Impact Report because of this dump's impact on Lily Pond.

We, as Cohasset voters, have a chance to make the choice at Town Meeting on Wednesday, June 26 at 8 p.m. SAFE is offering a short, non-binding resolution opposing the disposal of "grit and screenings," sludge, scum, or any other residuals from the sewer system of the Mass. Water Resource Authority (MWRA). Please join with me and the more than 400 residents opposed to sludge (etc.) at CHL. Please vote "Yes" for the SAFE resolution.

Thank you,

Insurance salvaged for chiropractic care

To the Editor:

Within the hundreds of pages constituting the proposed state budget known as House Bill 5600 submitted on Beacon Hill last week were contained 7 sections between Section 318 and 331 which had nothing to do with the state budget at all. What they proposed was to totally wipe out all Chiropractic services under Blue Cross Blue Shield and all commercial health insurance carriers within the Commonwealth. Other sections similarly affected the health care professions of Podiatry and Optometry as well. Section 318, for instance, would have deleted the so-called insurance equality law, the law which allows each person to choose the health care provider of their choice and be reimbursed under commercial insurance.

Public demand for alternative health care, such as Chiropractic, resulted in it being offered by insurance companies in the first place. Withdrawing such coverage would have resulted in little or no savings; on the contrary most patients would be forced to seek more expensive alternatives. The state wide outcry against these actions within the budget was based on the fact that these essentially insurance bills could be enacted without public notice, public hearings, or due process of law.

Thanks to an amendment proposed by Representative Larry Giordano, these sections were rightfully removed from state budget considerations. Due to the rallying of many citizens across the state, Legislators on Beacon Hill were called and notified of the needs and wishes of the people. If changes are to be made in the current insurance system, let it be done through proper committees with full public hearings and the knowledge of the citizenry of this state.

On behalf of myself, my profession and most importantly all Chiropractic patients, I wish to publicly acknowledge and thank all of the many men and women who cared enough about personal freedom of choice to contact their senators and representatives quickly and let the will of the people be known. Their efforts are deeply appreciated and will never be forgotten.

Group home for mentally impaired opens with ceremony

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

More than a decade ago, members of the housing authority and the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens began trying to pave the way for a group home for the mentally impaired in Cohasset.

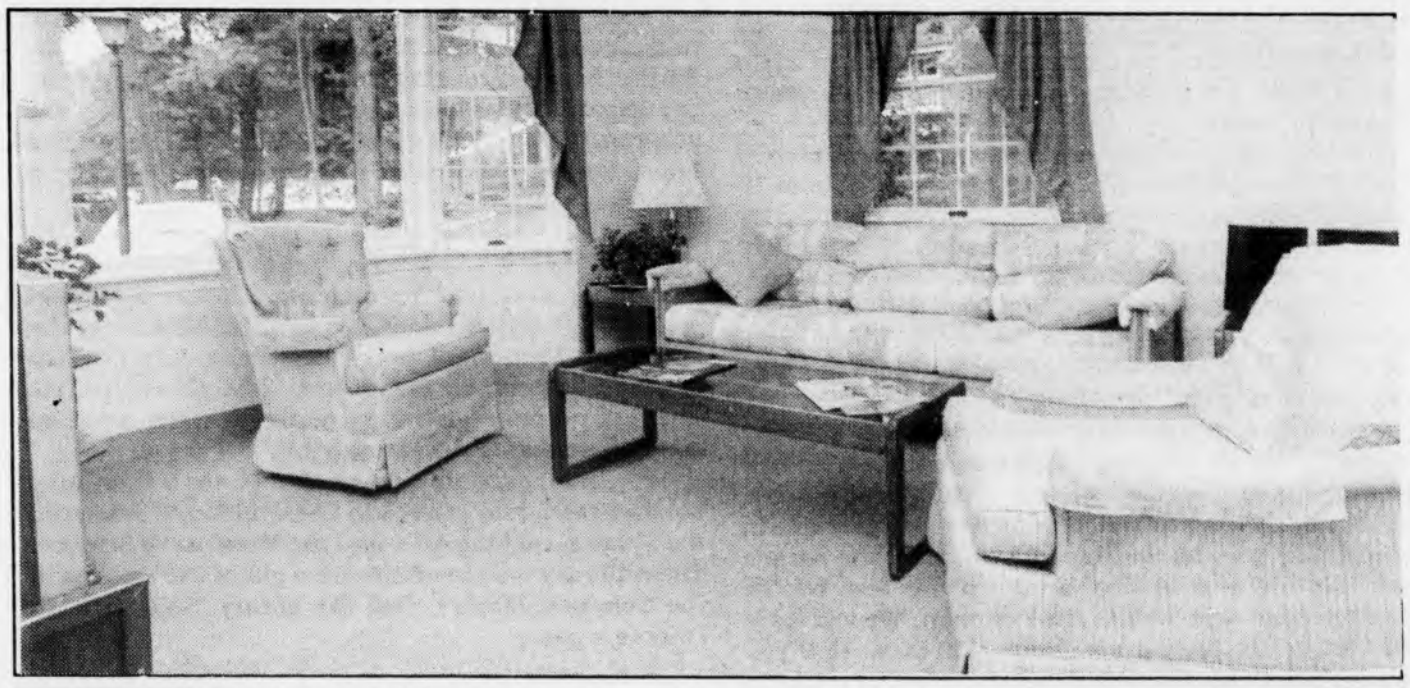
Eleven years later, the home is a reality.

Town and state representatives celebrated the opening of the home last week.

Four men and four women have been living in the one-story cape-style house since May 8, according to Housing Authority Director Barbara Clain.

The home is divided into two sections, each with four bedrooms, a living room, two bathrooms, a living room, and a kitchen and dining room.

Attending the celebration were: members of the Cohasset Housing authority; State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset); Maria Plante, a member of the board of the South Shore Association of Retarded Citizens; Russell Tremain, the architect who designed the home; Doug Mullen, the construction engineer who oversaw the building of the home; Kevin White, the acting secretary of the state Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD); Kathleen Catano of the state Department of Mental Retardation; John Callahan, the builder; and Selectman Martha Gjesteby.



Rev. Clifford Cutler, the pastor of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, read the invocation.

Housing Authority Chairman John Muncey was unable to attend the ceremony, but was thanked for his hard work.

The $365,000 cost of the home was absorbed by the EOCD.

The house sits on a lot at 72 Elm Street that was sold to the town several years ago by Jane Trettis.

Clain said the idea for the project dated back to at least 1986; in February of 1988, an architect was hired for the project and a grant application was sent to the EOCD.

The housing for the mentally impaired opened officially last week off Elm Street near the police and fire station. The building looks contemporary. The inside looks like a model.

Children's Art Tent

The South Shore Art Center Festival will once again offer a "Kids' Tent" to give young artists of all ages a chance to "create!"

The tent will be located on the Common across from Town Hall and will be open Saturday, June 22 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, June 23 from 12 to 5 p.m.

Children can create visors, "flying fish," puppet fish, treasure hunt of art, murals and sponge painting. There is the "Kids Korner" with projects for the younger set (suggested age four to six); the tent tables for those six and up and a sketching corner for older children with cartooning and sketching.

A special section for all is costume making with the theme of "Under the Sea." Children can create their own costumes of sea creatures, fish, King Neptune, etc. and if they choose, are welcome to march in costume in the Sunday parade. Participants will meet the parade near the fire station and bring up the rear by the viewing stand and back to the Common. We will leave the tent to join the parade about 1:30 p.m., so if you want to march leave time beforehand or on Saturday to make the costume.

If you are interested in volunteering at the tent or helping with the parade of sea costumes, please call Children's Tent Chairman Rhonda Myers at 383-2969.

Summer reading program

This summer all Cohasset school children are invited to join us here at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library in the summer reading club, "WizardRead." Find magical adventures in reading with the help of the Reading Wizard, who holds the key to the wonders of other worlds and flights of fancy. The library will provide you with reading cards and charts, bookmarks, fantasy games and activities—and, of course, plenty of good books.

Reading cards for recording the titles read on each child's own reading level may be picked up at the library. These cards must be endorsed by a parent. Those participants in grades 1-3 who read 20 books will be awarded a paperback book of their choice. Participants in grades 4-6 need to read 15 books for their paperback gift, and those in grade 7 and up need to read 10 books.

Once again this year there will also be a program for "Almost-Readers," those younger children who enjoy being read to or are just beginning to read themselves with help. These children will receive a booklet in which they can stamp in the spaces to chart their progress with the library's special dragon stamp.

Dates of the summer reading program are June 19-August 16. There is no registration required—just stop by the library and pick up your reading cards. All participants will celebrate with a party at the end of the program. Our special guest storyteller will be Marilyn Pope, former children's librarian at the Paul Pratt Library.

Summer story hour

Summer story hour for children 3 1/2 to 5 years of age will be held on Friday mornings at 10 a.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, beginning July 12. This program will run for six weeks, through August 16. There is no pre-registration required. Each program lasts approximately 45 minutes.

Cohasset residents are reminded that they may borrow free family passes to the Children's Museum, the Museum of Fine Arts, and the Museum of Science. These library memberships are a gift of the Friends of the Cohasset Library. Call the library, 383-1348, to reserve a pass.

General Richard I. Neal on Pierson

On Thursday, June 20, Wigmore Pierson's guest on Pierson to Person will be former Hull resident and Deputy Commander of Desert Storm in the war against Iraq, Marine Brigadier General Richard I. Neal.

Pierson will question Neal about the press and the war, military strategy and tactics, military personalities, and the future of the U.S. military.

General Neal grew up in Hull but now lives in Woodbridge, Virginia, outside Washington, D.C., with his wife, the former Kathleen McCann, and their three children.

Before joining General Schwarzkopf as his Deputy Commander in Operation Desert Storm, General Neal was the Director of the Manpower Plans and Policy Division at Marine Headquarters in Washington.

The Pierson to Person show is broadcast live each Thursday evening, 8-9 p.m., on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate, and Hanover and on a tape delayed basis in Marshfield, Weymouth and Quincy.

The public is invited to be part of the studio audience and should be at the Continental Cablevision studio on Gannett Road, North Scituate by 7:30 p.m. on Thursday evening, June 20.

For further information call Robert Belliveau, Executive Producer of Pierson To Person, at 545-0643.

Walking tour Saturday

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold a walking tour of Cohasset Harbor on Saturday, June 22. The tour will meet at the Society's Maritime Museum, Cohasset Village, at 10:30 a.m. The walk will proceed along Elm Street (once called "Ship Cove Lane") to the town's historic harbor, then along Border Street to view the old stone fishing wharves that date from the 17th and 18th centuries.

Descriptive historical information will be presented along the way. The tour will end at Government Island, site of the former U.S. Lighthouse, where the history of the famous offshore lighthouse will be detailed.

The walk around the harbor will follow the route of the "Captain's Walk," a walking tour that marks a number of 18th and 19th century sites related to Cohasset's unique maritime history. 19th century fishing wharves, shipbuilding sites, and early homes of seafarers will be pointed out and viewed. Historical commentary will be given by the Society's Senior Curator.

Cohasset Harbor, long called "Ship Cove," was the center of an extensive seafaring industry throughout the town's early history. Fishing, mercantile trade, shipbuilding and related trades were located along the shores of the harbor. Numerous Cohasset families made their living from the sea, and Cohasset's young men went to sea, sometimes by the time they were 10 to 12 years of age.

Plan to join the Historical Society's Harbor Walking Tour this Saturday for a glimpse of this unique story about a small New England seafaring community.

Tennis tournament party

The committee organizing the Cohasset Community Center Benefit Round Robin Tennis Tournament scheduled for June 28, 29 and 30 is currently planning a "Point After Party" to be held at the Community Center on Saturday night from 5 to 8 p.m. All tournament contestants are automatically invited. As a way of supporting the Community Center benefit weekend, friends and other members of the community are welcome to attend the party at a charge of $5 per person. Hors d'oeuvres will be served at the party and there will be a cash bar.

For those of the general public interested in watching the final matches on Sunday, June 30, please call the Community Center at 383-0088 for information. During the tournament weekend a program book will also be available listing the schedule, location of the courts and advertisers supporting the event.

Festival/Harborfest schedule

The South Shore Art Center Art Festival and Cohasset Harborfest is June 21-23. The three-day event on the Cohasset Common, the Art Center, and the harbor, offers arts and entertainment for everyone.

If you are interested in getting a head start on your Christmas shopping this year, there will be lots of art work for sale on the Common and at the Art Center at 119 Ripley Road. A craft artisans market featuring over 60 different booths will also be featured on the Common and the Art Center's Gift Gallery is stocked with many colorful and unique creations.

If art appreciation is your goal for the weekend, there will be lots to take in. Two juried shows will be under the tents on the Common while the President's Choice Exhibit featuring Boston artist Ali and the Festival Members Show will be on display at the Art Center.

Perhaps you've wondered how artists perform their craft. If so, you can attend the various artist demonstrations scheduled, including one by noted portraiture artist Constance Flavell Pratt. For children interested in trying their hands at art, there will be drop-in children workshops on Saturday and Sunday.

Be sure to bring an appetite...there will be lots of food to enjoy including a Pancake Breakfast Saturday morning from 8 to 10 a.m. at the Community Center and a Chowder Contest Sunday afternoon from 3 to 5 in the Honor Roll Courtyard.

Carillon Concerts and performances by the South Shore Conservatory of Music, the South Shore Concert Band, and the Harborfest Youth Concert are scheduled throughout the weekend. Adding some drama to the weekend will be the Cohasset Dramatic Club and the Hull Performing Arts.

A REASONABLE PROPOSAL

PROPOSED

that the residents and officials of the Town of Cohasset join with Cohasset Heights, Ltd (CHL) in sponsoring the CHL landfill as a grit and screenings facility: ONLY GRIT AND SCREENINGS! NO SLUDGE!

BACKGROUND

Governor Weld's Blue Ribbon Commission is seeking a town to host a facility for the disposal of grit and screenings generated by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA). The MWRA generates four to five truckloads of grit and screenings per day. The Commission also seeks a back-up sludge site. Join with CHL in saying "YES!" to a grit and screenings facility; and "NO!" to SLUDGE.

BENEFITS

- Once the MWRA assumes control of the CHL site for grit and screenings, all CHL landfill operations will end. Costly legal, administrative and technical wrangling between the Town of Cohasset and CHL would cease.
- MWRA supervision could mean substantial financial benefits and expert assistance for Cohasset.
- What precisely will the Town's benefits be? Let's find out! What harm is there in asking?
- Join with CHL in persuading our selectmen to re-open lines of communication with the commission.

HISTORY

- Cohasset's Scituate Hill has been the site of a private landfill since the 1970's. CHL has owned and operated this landfill since 1982.
- In 1989, the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) approved CHL's plan to expand landfill operations into a three acre area, known as Area IV A.
- In 1989, the Secretary of Environmental Affairs received notice of CHL's intent to further expand into an additional 20 acre site. CHL is proceeding with the Secretary's review. Once the environmental review is completed, CHL plans to seek a site assignment.
- CHL's plan for expansion includes 500 tons per day (TPD) of solid waste disposal, 100 TPD of solid waste processing, and 300 TPD of recycling.
- Meanwhile, CHL will continue to accept up to 300 TPD of construction and demolition debris under it's current permits.

THE OPTIONS

The MWRA takes full control of the entire CHL site for the disposal of up to 4 or 5 truckloads of grit and screenings only.

THE FUTURE

We are all part of the problem, as we all generate waste. At least now the Town of Cohasset has the opportunity to downsize the present landfill operation and still become a part of the Commonwealth's solution to the problem of waste management. Please join with CHL in offering the CHL site to the Governor's Commission for consideration as a grit and screenings site. The commission is inclined to favor towns which show some willingness to act as a host community.

We need your support and endorsement.
Please read the flyer enclosed in todays edition of the Cohasset Mariner, and please attend the Annual Town Meeting at the High School, the night of June 26, 1991 starting at 7:30 p.m. to support our reasonable proposal.
Thank you.

Kate Carroll and Ali Welz

Students of the month

Kate Carroll is an example of the rare, one-of-a-kind student who combines superior academic achievement, outstanding leadership qualities, record shattering athletic performance and well-deserved popularity.

Kate is a perpetual high honors student carrying a heavy load of honors courses. Her strong leadership as Treasurer of the Class for the past two years has been recognized by her peers as Kate was elected President of the Class of 1995 in the recent student elections. A three sports star, Kate shattered the Junior High School record in the mile run with an eye-opening 6:06 and was also the team's third highest point scorer for the season. Her classmates and teachers enjoy her subtle sense of humor, quick wit and generosity.

She was recommended by Scott P. Newkirk.

"I just wanted to make you aware of the extraordinary effort of Ali Welz in preparing my sixth graders for a musical play we've been working on for the past few weeks. She has been here faithfully twice a week teaching them the many songs required for the production.

"She is a very talented young lady and the kids are very enthusiastic about working with her. If I were in a position to nominate her for your Student-of-the-Month program, I certainly would. Lacking any musical talents myself, I could never attempt such a project without her help," said Mrs. Cisneros, Grade 6, Deer Hill School.

Summer camps

Registration continues for the Summer Day Camp, Gymnastic Camp and Theatre Dance Group at the Cohasset Community Center.

For pre-schoolers ages three to six there are weekly changes in theme programs starting June 10 to 14 and continuing ending with the last session from Aug. 27 to 29. Sessions are held daily. July sessions are available at a cost of $60 per week. The camp offers a wide range of subjects that will appeal to your youngsters. A few examples are Insects, Growing Things, Space Travel, Seasons and Weather, Five Senses, Animals, The Sun, Moon and Stars, Dinosaurs.

Gymnastic Camp, always well attended, offers girls ages 7 to 12 an opportunity to perfect their gymnastic techniques under the expert tutelage of Ruthann Sargent, with extended periods of more personal instruction. Each day will consist of warm-ups, aerobic dance, time on the beam, time on the bar, a break for snack, work on the uneven bars, vault, floor exercises, and conditioning. As an added feature, bowling will be included. Gymnasts may enroll for as many sessions as they wish. Prizes will be awarded each week for numerous contests. Enrollment is limited and will be on a first paid basis. The schedule follows: Aug. 6 to 8, 9 a.m. to noon, Session 1 $39; Aug. 13 to 15, 9 a.m. to noon, Session 2 $39; Aug. 20 to 22, 9 a.m. to noon, Session 3 $39; Aug. 27 to 29, 9 a.m. to noon, Session 4 $39.

Registrations are still accepted for the Theatre-Dance Camp which offers young thespians a chance to learn more about the theatre and use their artistic talents and perform before their friends and parents at the close of the two-week session at a cost of $120. The students ages 6 to 12 will be directed by Shelly Cotta of the Duxbury Dance Shoppe, will learn the art of set design, costumes, make-up, acting, singing and dancing.

Please call the Center at 383-0088 to register or for further information.

A report from the PSO

As we approach summer vacation, please join the schools, the town, and the PSO in support of a safe environment for our teenagers. The schools have a K-12 comprehensive health education program which develops both knowledge and self esteem. It is believed that this approach is the most effective way for schools to help prevent the use and abuse of alcohol and other drugs by our young people. In addition, a drug/alcohol peer education program has recently been implemented in the schools. This innovative program is designed to train high school students to work as influential role models and drug/alcohol educators for younger students. The School Committee has adopted a definitive policy on drug and alcohol use in school and during school activities. Sports Boosters and Arts Boosters clubs have agreed not to provide alcohol at school related functions. The PSO works with school and community groups on these issues and sponsors "safe" student activities, like the prom reception and breakfast.

The Social Service League has sponsored workshops on drug and alcohol abuse for parents and teenagers. They maintain an excellent "lending library" of films on drugs, sex, AIDS, suicide, and other teenage issues.

In 1990 Cohasset appointed a Committee on Drugs and Alcohol to address town-wide problems. The Selectmen, the School Committee and the PSO support their drug-awareness weekend in January. Their Safe Homes program has been endorsed by the Board of Selectmen, the Police Department, Cohasset Public Schools, Cohasset Clergy, and the PSO. Please consider joining the Safe Homes program, and, for the safety of our children, consider its outline of civil liability and legal implications.

Civil liability: "If an adult gives or allows alcohol to be consumed by anyone under 21, including one's own child, and that person causes personal injury or property damage, the adult and minor are both civilly liable for financial damages. Therefore, if there is a party with alcohol in your home, even if you are unaware of it, you are responsible for injuries and damages."

Legal Implications: "In Massachusetts, it is a crime with possibility of arrest:

- To serve alcohol to anyone under 21 other than your own child, even in your own home, even with permission of other parents;
- For an adult to sell alcohol to, or purchase it for, anyone under 21;
- For anyone under 21 to purchase alcohol;
- For anyone to borrow an I.D. or to falsely state to be 21 or older in order to purchase alcohol;
- To alter, transfer, or deface I.D. cards purchased from the Registry of Motor Vehicles;
- For anyone under 21 to transport alcohol, opened or unopened, in a car;
- To drive while under the influence of alcohol;
- For anyone, regardless of age, to have alcohol on public school premises, even in the parking lot;
- To consume alcohol, at any age, in a public place unless specifically authorized by law;
- For anyone age 16 1/2 to 18 to drive between 1 and 4 a.m. without a parent or guardian in the car."

Thank you for your thoughtful consideration of these critical problems. If you would like more information about any of these programs, or if you would like to help, please contact Mike Gill at Cohasset High School at 383-6107, JoAnne Chittick at 383-9220 of the Social Service League, or Keith Knowles at 383-1331 of the Committee on Drugs and Alcohol.

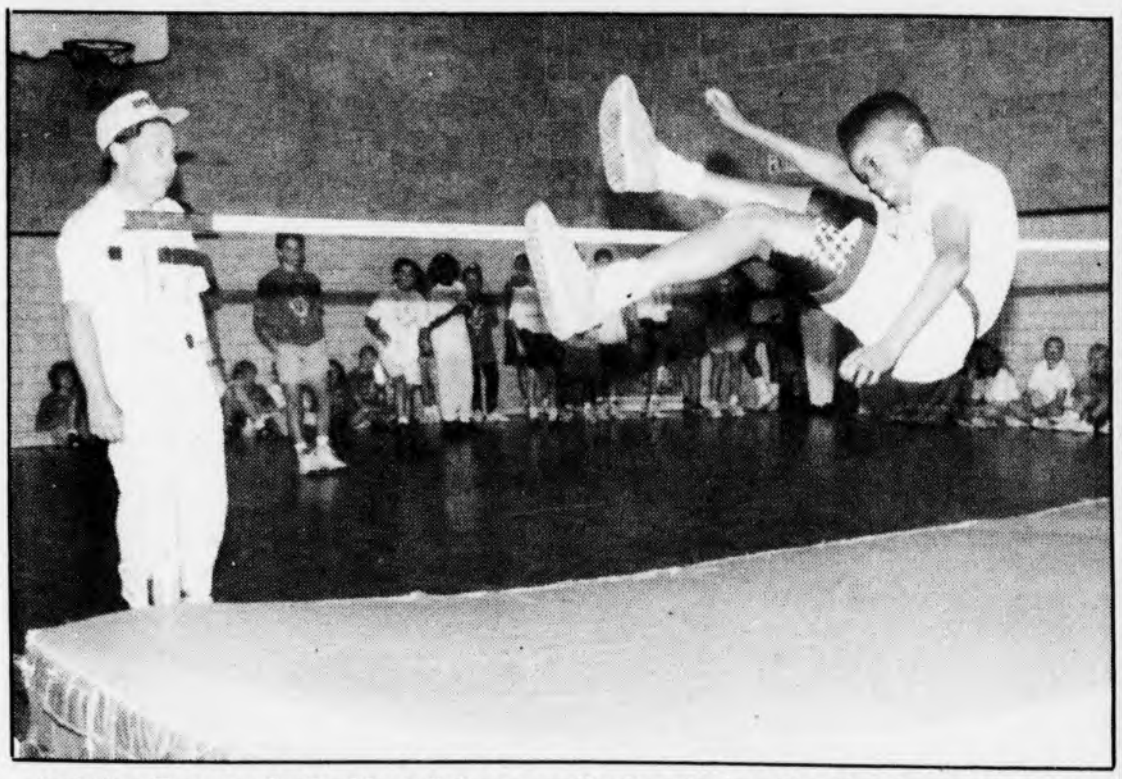
Discover World's End

The world's oldest land trust, The Trustees of Reservations, will celebrate its 100th birthday on Saturday, June 22 with a festive "Discovery Day" at World's End in Hingham. The celebration, which runs from 1:30 to 8 p.m., is free and open to the public.



An exciting array of activities has been planned for all ages. For those looking for leisurely tours of the property, horse-drawn hayrides will be offered along the lower road. For the energetic, there will be kite-flying on top of Planter's Hill. Betty Levin of Lincoln will bring her border collies and sheep for a demonstration of sheepherding in the field below Planter's Hill, and Nick Popovich from the New England Wildlife Center will be on hand with several hawks to discuss the special role these raptors play in maintaining the health of our ecosystem. In addition, the New England Orienteering Club will sponsor an orienteering clinic designed to introduce newcomers to the sport.

At 5:30 p.m., accordionist Mabel Biagini of Quincy will lead picnickers to the top of Planter's Hill. Later, Frederic Winthrop, Jr., Director of The Trustees of Reservations, will welcome Discovery Day-goers and a surprise guest from the past, who will arrive for the celebration by horse-drawn carriage. Evoking life on World's End at the turn of the century, other horse-drawn carriages will parade around the area. At 6:30 p.m., Winthrop will lead guests in the planting of several Centennial trees and cut the 100th birthday cake.

The Mass Confusion Barbershop Quartet will entertain picnickers from 7 to 8 p.m., at which point naturalist Philip Swanson will explain the wonders of the Beach vendors vie for position

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

Selectmen and five beach vendors are stuck with what one board member called a "nightmare."

Earlier this year, selectmen granted five licenses to sell food at Sandy Beach, unaware that a zoning bylaw limits the number of vendors at the beach to two at a time.

The board will also have to hold a hearing to revoke a license it granted to a resident that wanted to sell hand-painted clothing .

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he thought the current dilemma was ridiculous.

"Violation, my eye," he said. "Don't talk about violations. I think this is the most ridiculous thing there is. I could see if a person was throwing stuff around, but all of them are very neat."

Paul O'Leary, who operated a hot dog cart last year, opposed a suggestion that the vendors be assigned certain days of the week.

"You don't know when the sun is going to shine or if it is going to rain," he said, adding that vendors would have to hit the beach as often as possible or they would be unable to earn their living.

He said the vendors have already lost money by not being able to get a start on the season.

Jane Goedecke rejected a proposal that the vendors work out the problem and logistics among themselves.

She said the board would wind up with "a fight every week" if they chose that solution.

As the Mariner went to press Wednesday, a meeting was scheduled with the vendors and Executive Secretary Greg Doyon to try to reach an agreement and devise a fair schedule.

Red Lion wins patio

Selectmen Monday night granted permission to the Red Lion Inn on South Main Street to serve alcohol at a planned outdoor patio.

Paul Keeler, the manager of the inn, told the board that the 287-year-old building will soon undergo "extensive interior and exterior renovations" including the addition of a 2,000-square-foot patio that will hold 14 tables and 52 customers when full.

Selectmen approved Keeler's request to extend the inn's liquor license, but limited it to between the hours of 11 a.m. and 8 p.m.

Michael Karp, who lives in an apartment near the inn presented the board with a petition signed by 20 other neighbors that protested the change.

He said the potential crowd of drinkers could "intimidate" people walking by.

"As it is I hear the fighting and foul language all night," he said.

Keeler said he would work to prevent the crowd from getting out-of-hand and said the restaurant has instituted new serving policies that should eliminate any problems.

He said the patio would be primarily for lunch and "dining al fresco, as opposed to a drinking area."

He said he expected that most of the diners on the patio would move indoors shortly after sunset because there are no exterior lights and "mosquitos will drive people indoors at some point."

George Roukounakis, the owner of a gas station next to the inn, also opposed the proposal. He said it would exacerbate a litter problem in the area

'Wild' patches up the environment

By Elizabeth Moura
Mariner staff

Man is the new kid on the block where wildlife is concerned. He carves out liveable spaces all over the globe, displacing animals and making their homes his backyard.

Sometimes, that balance tips the other way.

Ask Amber Santangelo. She's turned over part of her house at 25 Tami Court to an assortment of wild animals needing rehabilitation, including raccoons, squirrels, ferrets and days-old skunks.

On a bright spring afternoon, Santangelo, a licensed wildlife rehabilitator, sat on the floor of the Wild Again, Inc. office/clinic feeding the skunks with a tube and syringe. They were orphaned when their mother was killed in a demolition blast at a subdivision site.

Feeding time for the skunks is a good illustration of how time consuming animal rehabilitation is. Before she began the feeding, Santangelo stimulated the skunks' with a paper towel, simulating the action the animals' mother would have done prior to feeding. After the animals were sufficiently excited, Santangelo gently eased feeding tubes down the throats of the wriggling, cackling baby skunks and slowly pumped formula into them. Santangelo repeats the ritual every six hours, round the clock.

Most of the animals at Wild Again are young, and the stories of how they came to the clinic are as varied as the species. A man brought in two baby crows dropped by a hawk; a five-week old squirrel was probably forced out of the nest, Santangelo believes, because something happened to the mother and hunger forced the baby to forage; one of the most recent arrivals is a wood duckling, dropped off at 11 p.m. by a man who found it.

Santangelo warns people not to go looking for baby animals to rescue, because most of them are doing just fine. "They're out exploring, they are not in need of assistance," she said.

Vicky Smythe, former program director at the New England Wildlife Center in Hingham, reminded would-be rescuers not to try to tip the balance of nature. Told a story about a hawk devouring a nest of baby robins, she shrugged and said, "That's the balance of things. That hawk might have a nest and babies somewhere, and they need to be fed, too. You can't go around changing things."

Wild Again's rehabilitators are well-known, and not just in this state. The Vermont Institute of Natural Science shipped two owls to them, a sawwhett, which stands about eight inches high, and a big Barr owl. Both suffer from detached retinas, afflictions Smythe said happened when they slammed into windows head first. Neither bird can go back into the wild, because, Smythe explained, neither has the visual depth perception necessary for avian hunters. Wild Again also houses a kestrel, another victim of a collision with a window.

Windows are hazardous to the health of owls and other birds, but the list of other man-made hazards is long and unsettling. One of the charts Smythe uses in education projects shows the materials taken from the guts of birds. Santangelo herself removed several pennies, a wire and a few nails from the gut of a sea gull.

Cohasset residents named to Wildlife Board

Two local residents have been appointed to the Board of Wild Again Inc.

Kay Ruiter, an employee of TriCompanies Inc. in Boston, has been named to the Board of Directors of Wild Again Inc. She will serve as the organization's Secretary. Ruiter has been active as an amateur naturalist for some 20 years and brings valuable experience to the newly formed wildlife education and rehabilitation center headquartered at 25 Tami Court in Bridgewater.

Ruiter most recently worked as a rehabilitator for the New England Wildlife Center in Hingham and is in the process of obtaining her state rehabilitator's license. She has returned as a resident of Cohasset in the past year, but lived on the South Shore for 18 years and has expressed a strong interest in active community support. It is her goal to assist the group in its development of outreach programs designed to foster greater public awareness of the need for wildlife protection, and to serve the group's Bridgewater clinic as a rehabilitator.

David Bigley, sales manager at Faucet Services oil company in Cohasset, has been named to the Board of Directors of Wild Again Inc. Bigley brings more than 15 years' experience working on ecological programs to the newly formed wildlife education and rehabilitation center headquartered at 25 Tami Court in Bridgewater.

Bigley worked with the international group Greenpeace for fifteen years where he began in 1976. He served as the regional director of Greenpeace's Chicago area chapter before founding the New England chapter in 1978. His experience is diverse, but includes fundraising and outreach programs designed to foster public awareness of the interdependency of mankind and nature.

Bigley lives in Cohasset with his wife, Alix White, and their three children: Morgan, 10, Deidre, 6, and Aaron, 3, where they operate an organic farm raising raspberries and vegetables for local restaurants.

Wild Again was first formed in November, 1990, in response to the growing need for the protection of wildlife in southeastern Mass., and for public education programs ranging from recycling to the preservation of endangered species. The group also offers clinical treatment to animals in need of medical attention and rehabilitation.

Museums open with costuming and frillls

By Roberta Brooks
Mariner correspondent

Where can you find Indian stone tools dating back 2,000 years? Where can you see a suitcase salvaged from a ship wrecked while carrying Irish famine immigrants to our shores almost 150 years ago? Where can you see a note placed in a sealed bottle by two lighthouse keepers before they drowned when First Minot's Ledge Lighthouse succumbed to a violent storm?

All these artifacts and many more keep Cohasset's heritage alive at the Maritime Museum at 4 Elm Street in Cohasset center.

The Maritime Museum houses relics galore. Originally built as a ship's chandlery, it was moved from the Cove to Elm Street in the 1950s.

Several huge ship models flank the high, dark walls of the museum's main room. Model shipbuilding kept sailors busy during their long journeys. The museum's largest model, the Tecumseh, was built around 1866 by Samual P. Bates while he was first mate on board the merchant ship of the same name. The ship models come complete with stories; stories of the east coast's booming merchant ship trade of long ago; stories of how the Tecumseh once delivered cannon balls to Chile for its army and regularly sailed the popular Liverpool, England to Boston route.

Other artifacts harken up the past — Cohasset's time as a mackerel fishing port, souvenirs brought back from foreign seaports, memorabilia from shipwrecks. Among other curiosities, the museum's upstairs boasts Indian tools and implements excavated from local grounds, antique signs, schoolbooks used by long-ago Cohasset students, a shoemaker's antique tools and machinery.

Next door to the Maritime Museum is the Captain John Wilson House built in 1810. This museum home features collections of antique furniture, children's toys, oil paintings by artist Frank Shapleigh and others, and period appliances such as a Shaker washing machine. This summer the Costume Committee of the Cohasset Historical Society will run a series of period costume exhibits in the Wilson House.

Both buildings are run by the Cohasset Historical Society with David Wadsworth as their senior Curator, and the grounds are lovingly cared for by the Cohasset Garden Club.

So plan to visit and learn about Cohasset's past.

The museum opens for the season, along with the adjacent Captain John Wilson House, on Saturday, June 15. It will be open through September 29 every day from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., except Mondays. Many surprises await those who step inside these doors.

Martha Hurtig and Tinka McLean, members of the Historical Society, look over some of the costumes on display in the museum.

'Wild' patches up the environment

Another bird had a long piece of fishing line, the hook and the weight in its stomach.

Human encroachment is not just a danger to animals in the rain forest. Many of the orphaned animals at Wild Again are victims of human encroachment. Santangelo said the local raccoon population is booming because the scavengers harvest garbage in subdivisions.

Other animals are also thriving, again because of compression of habitat, and availability of food.

On a brief tour of the basement of the house, Smythe showed how the new clinic is shaping up. Volunteer manpower is slowly changing the 1,500 square feet into a clinic, exam room, laundry and wards for sick animals. Entrance to the facility, which will be completed sometime this summer, is from outside, which means the Santangelo house will not be a walk-through for animal rescuers.

"It is a real sacrifice to give up your house," said Smythe, lauding Santangelo.

There is a lot more to do in the new basement clinic, however, and many donations are needed, including stainless steel examining tables. More volunteer manpower is coming to the organization, Smythe said; this summer, Eagle Scouts will help clear land behind the house for an aviary.

Smythe is frustrated right now by the slowness of donations. She estimates the ratio of animals being brought to Wild Again's doorstep to the flow of donations is 6-1. She is not complaining that people are bringing animals, but she explains money is needed to keep the facility running. The group is just beginning to solicit donations from companies, and to explore the variety of grants still available.

Fund raisers have been held, including a raffle, and half the $18,000 Smythe and Santangelo estimated for a first year budget has been raised. "We have to have some hard core, beat the pavement fund raising," Smythe said as she scanned the in-process basement clinic.

Smythe handles the education project, taking the owl and a variety of slides and exhibits to any group which wants to pay the freight. She wants to expand environmental education to prisons and special needs people, and also the disadvantaged. She includes in the latter city dwellers, particularly kids, who may never have seen some of the animals suburban youngsters are familiar with. "That's the direction we're tending towards," Smythe said.

Farm League hits the mount

Submitted by John Kinchla

The Farm League Yankees have the "look" of their big league counterparts. This Yankee team has power, excellent baserunners and play with intensity.

Coaches John Carr, Dick Bugley and Steve Webber have done an exceptional job molding this team into a powerhouse entry in the Farm League program.

Yankee infielders have done a superior job keeping the ball in play. First Baseman, Paul Previte combines range, speed and power. According to Coach Carr, "Paul is a good all around player."

Second Baseman Bobby Protulis plays the infield like a pro. Bobby has good speed and power and keeps improving with every game.

Shortstop Bill Prendergast hits the ball for distance and covers his position well. Third Baseman Kyle Webber protects his corner well and pounds the ball with consistency. Robinson Murphy was hurt for the Yankees contest with the Astros but should return for the final two games of the season. Patrick O'Hayre is developing a short compact stroke at the plate. His play in the field is improving.

Yankee Outfielders seldom let a ball roll to the fence. Speedy Chris Carr and his sister Caroline cover the outfield territory like retrievers. Alexis Bugley, Matthew O'Grodnick and Kristofer Peters are strong players that chase down errant balls with skill and grace. They throw the ball into their infielders with accuracy.

CYAA FARM LEAGUE ASTROS

The Farm League Astros continue to play with intensity and skill. Leading the team from behind the plate is dependable and steady catcher/outfielder Johnny Dwyer.

Dwyer bats and throws righthanded and usually hits in the middle of the order. His cheerfulness and positive play has infected the Astros with excellent team spirit.

The Astros have several fine young infielders and potential pitchers under development. Righthanders Dave DeVito, Danny Kinchla and Tommy Anderson and Lefthander Timmy Straughn can really fire the ball. These boys comprise the Astros' solid infield and bat at the top of the order. They rotate with the outstanding and speedy Astro outfielders in the late innings of each game.

The Astros have an outstanding player in Leftfielder Deidre Bigley. Deidre has been the team's leadoff hitter all season and has been getting consistently on base.

Other "Big Play" Astros have been switch hitting outfielder Nick Spirito, righthanders Peter Roy, Danny Duffy and lefty hitter Dennis Reardon.

Spirito is the set-up man for the second half of the order. Nick bats sixth in the lineup and makes good use of his time on the basepaths. Defensively, he gets the ball quickly into his infielders with good throwing accuracy. Nick is followed in the order by Peter Roy. Peter has been impressive all season. Defensively, he understands he must concentrate on snuffing out the opponent's lead runner and from his position in centerfield and occasionally at third base, he has been making the "big plays." He concentrates well at the plate and usually strokes the ball up the middle.

Dan Duffy has been banging the ball with power. Dan's fielding and throwing has improved. He is now a "force" in right centerfield.

Dennis Reardon, a real "Lefty", is the team's last man up and with good reason. Dennis cleans the bases with his line shots down the right field line. Dennis throws and bats left.

Some of these young Astros will be moving into the next age-grouped level of the program next year. The 8/9 Minor league level will feature "live" pitching. The Astros definitely have several players that are ready for that leap now. Next year should be increasingly more interesting as these young Astros take the next step to the major leagues.

Jeffer Barrett, 5, of Cohasset works out at the Headstart Camp at South Shore Baseball Club in Hingham. The Club is working with the recreation department to offer a camp this summer.

Beechwood basketball bounces back

By Peter Kasperowicz

About three weeks ago, Junior Olympic Basketball Coach Arnie Reppucci had his team gathered and ready to practice.

"We asked to use the high school gym, but it was locked when we got there," Reppucci said. "We had boys from all over New England, and most of their parents had driven them to Cohasset. We had to practice at the only outdoor court around - the one at Osgood.

"Let me tell you, the Cohasset kids were embarrassed by the poor condition of the court; the rims are bent and all the nets are gone. The parents thought it was a coaching technique of mine to have them play on a terrible court, so it was embarrassing for me, too."

These and similar complaints of limited playing space in town have reached the ears of recreation director Jack Worley.

"Worley thought of fixing up the Beechwood court," Reppucci said. "He did his homework and found the money to make it happen." Worley plans to use money from a fund set up by the now defunct Beechwood Improvement Association.

"Before Beechwood Improvement was dismantled, they invested their remaining cash and made the interest available to us, with some stipulations. The money has to be used for kids 12 and under on the Beechwood side of (Boundbrook)," Worley said.

Worley estimates that $3,000 in interest is available, and Reppucci thinks that only half of that will be needed for the project. The proposal also includes fixing up the lights to allow for night games. Worley will present the renovation plan to the recreation commission this Saturday morning at the Community Center.

While breakaway rims are being considered, Reppucci is not recommending them. "They're not advantageous. First, breakaway rims will let shorter kids hang on them, and that can just cause more damage. Second, they're not geared for outdoor use, at least not in New England," Reppucci said.

The goal is to have the work completed by mid-July. Meanwhile, Reppucci is asking the Basketball Boosters Club to match the Beechwood contribution in hopes of repairing the Osgood court. Boosters' member Jim Theriault hopes to have the money by the end of the summer.

"We're about halfway there; we need to resurface the Osgood court before we put up new nets. I'd say the whole project costs around $4,000," Theriault said.

Cohasset recreation has added new summer sports camps this year in wrestling, football, lacrosse, basketball and "pro-play," a motor development program for boys and girls aged 4-7. The already successful playground, tennis, soccer and baseball programs will remain intact.

Director Jack Worley attributes the expansion to the recent "deregulation" in recreation's revolving account. The Mass. Department of Revenue has allowed wages to be paid out of the account, and granted liability coverage to anyone collecting those wages.

"We have a little more flexibility," Worley said. "The revolving fund used to be run like a purchase fund. Now we can add more programs and pay employees using the money we collect through registration fees.

"We don't have to raise taxes to increase our budget. Hopefully, we can still profit and give some money back to the town."

In previous years, the recreation department would turn over any money collected to the camps and their employees. This year the town can bill for administration costs and for the use of Cohasset fields. Worley estimates billing to be about 10 percent of each camp's income.

"The revenue department reinterpreted the rules," Worley explained. "They saw that the recreation departments wouldn't survive without some loosening up."

Summer playground registration ends today (Thursday) at 7 p.m., and sports camps can be registered for on a first-come-first-serve basis. Call the office at 383-6791 for information on these and other programs, such as dog obedience classes and Music Circus registrations.

Flying Scot Results

Jim Lyons and Gordon Hislop took the first of two races; Ray Kasperowicz took second and George Wey took third place in his first race of the season. The Scots have six races under their belts this season.

Heavy winds took George Kovach out of the second race after his mast toppled. The fun continued when Kasperowicz's boat capsized during the race, forcing him and Bob Davenport to face the cold reality of a "Did Not Finish."

George Wey fought the elements to take first place, followed by partners Steve Bartow and John Brister in second and Peter Goedecke in third.

Wey now leads the fleet with a 2.0 average. Goedecke is in second with a 3.167, followed by Kasperowicz with a 3.667. Bartow/Brister's 4.167 keeps them in a solid fourth place.

Cohasset tied for first place in the Pilgrim Arena's Spring Hockey Program with five wins, two losses and two ties. Much of the credit for Cohasset's improved performance should be given to the "Old Timers."

The "Old Timers" are college age and older men who have contributed to the high schoolers by scrimmaging against them at their own expense. The players are divided and paired with the men. They receive additional coaching from these men throughout the scrimmage. Thus far there have been three "Old Timer" games with three more scheduled above. The following is a list of the men that have assisted the high schoolers by participating in the "Old Timer" games.

Jack Dean, Ed Straughn, Craig Mulcahy, Danny Pompeo, Bill Devine, Jeff Tosi, Steve Daly, Ed, Brian, Tim and Sean Curran, Bob Morgan, Phil Smith, Mike Hubley, Jay Monaco, John Durkin, Joe Durkin, Jay Caron, Travis Coley, Mike Noble, Jack Noble, Chuck Peterson, Kevin Lewis, Charlie Flint, Charles Dean, Bill Ketchum, Larry Evans, Rick Evans, Roger Crafts, Jack Bowen, and Steve Bowen.

The Old Timer games scheduled above are on Wednesday's at 7:20 p.m. at the Pilgrim Arena, Hingham. The dates are June 26, July 10 and July 31. Old Timers can contact John Kinchla at 383-6851 for more information. More "Old Timers" are always needed. Note: "Old Timer: Pete Sandblom may be making an appearance in the June 26 contest. The games are played no slapshot, no check.

Friends give to seniors

At the June 6 Annual Meeting of the Friends of the Council on Aging, President Karin Bartow reported that the three-year old organization had its most active, visible, and successful year with $7,000 raised for Senior Center programs.

Memberships rose to 105, and dues, individual and business donations, and proceeds from three fundraising events enabled the Friends to lend much needed support to the Senior Center. "Our existence is clearly important to the Center's work, as the Council on Aging has experienced decreasing budget allotments from the Town, as well as less State funding," Bartow said.

The Friends' efforts provided printing and mailing of the senior newsletter "Vista," Senior Center instructors' fees, shuttle bus maintenance, special bus trips, and miscellaneous supplies and equipment. The Friends voted to fund the "Vista's" mailing costs for the coming year, and agreed to make a donation to the Sandy Beach walkway project.

Officers for the year 1991-1992 were elected as follows: Karin Bartow, President; Susan Connolly, Vice President; Margorie Murphy, Secretary; Margaret Smart, Treasurer; and Joseph Buckley, Paul Donovan, Peter Logan, and Kitty Sturtevant, Members-at-Large.

Council on Aging Chairman Gerard Keating expressed appreciation for the Friends' help throughout the year, but reported nonetheless that because of the funding cutbacks and a "very uncertain financial picture," shuttle transportation will be curtailed from five days to three throughout the summer, and weekly luncheons will be eliminated during July; however, there will be one held weekly at the Scituate Senior Center.

The Friends unanimously endorsed the Community Center's expansion plans that will increase the Senior Graced by dramatic topography and magnificent landscaping, 251-acre World's End attracts visitors year-round, who come to walk or jog, cross-country ski or be refreshed by the panoramic ocean views. Acquired by The Trustees of Reservations in 1967, World's End was originally owned by the Brewer family, who for many years maintained the property and made it available for public use.

World's End is one of 72 properties owned and managed by the Trustees throughout the Commonwealth. Since its founding in 1891, the organization has been dedicated to preserving for public use and enjoyment properties of exceptional scenic, historic and ecological value throughout Massachusetts.

Parking will be available in the fields on Pine Hill and on the west side of Planter's Hill.

No dogs will be allowed in World's End after 10:30 a.m. on June 22 only.

Services for seniors

Services for Seniors is a service which helps make homemakers, home health aides and nurses more accessible to elders in need for assistance with personal care, meal preparation, light housekeeping, shopping, companionship, or respite care. Those wishing to learn more about the program are encouraged to call Mary Beth Worrick, Program Coordinator, at 383-0771 or 383-0821, Tuesday or Thursday from 9 a.m. until noon. Services for Seniors is a program of the Social Service League of Cohasset and is partially funded by South Shore Elder Services.

Three members of the conservation commission are upset over reports that selectmen may not reappoint one of them

Merle Brown, William Parmenter, and Jeff Waal, three members of the commission whose terms expire at the end of the month, have all been singled out for possible removal.

Selectmen, in the past, have discussed changing the dynamics of the commission, but have not given any specific plans or reasons.

Parmenter said he was aware of the rumors circulating about him.

"I cannot confirm anything," he said. "It is nothing but gossip at this point," he said.

Parmenter said he has heard several reasons for his possible dismissal, including his age and his support of the Old Colony restoration.

"If I was one of the selectmen...I'd want to get rid of me," he joked, explaining that he "had some fun" pushing for a "simple" referendum question on the restoration.

"All I wanted was an honest and simple question," he said.

"The problem with a regulatory board is you get more complaints than compliments,"

-Jeff Waal
Conservation Commissionor

Parmenter has been on the board for six years; he has lived in Cohasset for 13 years.

Waal said he has also been fodder for the grapevine.

He said he may be considered a rabble-rouser because of his opinions. He said some have speculated his outspoken nature puts his reappointment in jeopardy.

He said that "some people in the town have the selectmen's ear for various reasons" and are calling for a change in the commission's composition.

Waal said he has spoken to selectmen individually and has been told they want "new blood" and "increased competence."

He said the commission is already filled with competent and dedicated individuals, and questioned how selectmen thought they could do better.

Waal said he realizes the commission, as a regulatory body, leaves itself open to criticism by disgruntled townspeople, but is restricted laws and regulations.

"The problem with a regulatory board is you get more complaints than compliments," he said. "Sometimes if (people)

Hollywood intends to return to Cohasset

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

Despite rumors to the contrary, Cohasset will still host the new Steve Martin film "Housesitter."

The film, directed by Frank Oz and co-starring Meg Ryan, will be filming in and around the South Shore this Summer.

According to Michael Williams, a location scout for the Massachusetts Film Bureau, the planned shooting schedule for Cohasset has been "scaled down," but will still set up shop for at least a week later this summer.

"We would still like to come into Cohasset," he said.

Williams said the film company is targeting the week of August 18 for the shoot.

He said the Cohasset shoot was scaled down because of technical, scheduling, and location limitations. He denied reports that the film was avoiding the town because selectmen were demanding too many financial considerations before they would license the shoot.

Williams said the film originally considered building the house that will serve as its main set in Cohasset, but technical limitations forced a change of plan.

He would not disclose where the house will now be built, but denied speculation that it would be in Dover.

Williams said the town and local businesses have been "very helpful" during the scouting process, offering suggestions that were appreciated by the crew.

He said the film crew is still looking at several Cohasset locations for inclusion in the movie.

He said he was currently looking for an empty storefront to be set up as a grocery store for several scenes, and other local businesses were being investigated.

Williams said the company has been negotiating the possible use of Cohasset Hardware in downtown Cohasset and the Red Lion Inn for both interior and exterior scenes.

Making plans for the summer

By Roberta Brooks
Mariner correspondent

Now that school's out, what will you do tomorrow?

"Ride my bike all over town," "play Nintendo all day long," "go to Cape Cod," "blast my radio," "go to Maine," "just play," "sleep late," rang back the answers from students in Mrs. Schadhauser's third grade class at the Osgood school. With excitement and relief, Cohasset schools closed Wednesday, June 19.

Sleep seems to be a priority for many Cohasset students, High-school students Nicole Haefner, Tracy Hyde, and Errin McDonald finished their exams Wednesday morning, and they too were anxious to "sleep in tomorrow."

Not for long. Summer activities begin soon, and Nicole and Tracy will head for Appalachia in West Virginia to build houses and fix roofs for a week to help the poor as part of a program from the Second

MBTA abatement lost

Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, sponsored an amendment with some of his Senate colleagues that would eliminate the MBTA assessments on those communities which do not receive direct MBTA services. It would have saved Cohasset $144,953, Duxbury $232,871, Hull $194,171, Marshfield $439,258 and Scituate $344,728. The abatement was allowed last year. Sen. Hedlund said he will continue in his efforts to save or restore funds to the district so as to help stop further reductions in funding for services and education.

Hedlund was able to steer his amendment of the Blue Laws which would maintain current holiday status for Labor Day, Memorial Day and Fourth of July. The Senate Ways and Means proposal would have authorized stores to open after noon on those days.

Local man indicted

A Cohasset man has been arrested on larceny charges involving the fraudulent solicitation of more than $140,000, while he allegedly posed as an investment advisor, according to Attorney General Scott Harshbarger.

David N. DeJulio, 35, of Cohasset, was indicted by a Norfolk County Grand Jury on four counts of larceny over $250 on June 12. These indictments relate to DeJulio's fraudulent solicitation of money from several residents of Norfolk County in 1988. DeJulio allegedly posed as an investment advisor with New England Financial Group, Inc., a now defunct Massachusetts corporation formed by DeJulio.

"White collar crime can have the same devastating effect on victims as if their savings had been stolen at gunpoint," said Harshbarger. "Investors must be careful with their hard-earned savings and white-collar thieves must know that they will not be allowed to steal with impunity."

Three of the indictments involve payments totalling $125,000, which DeJulio allegedly obtained under false pretense from a Randolph resident.

DeJulio had allegedly stated his company would invest the money in a second mortgage and guaranteed a return of 18 percent per annum. The fourth indictment stems from a payment of approximately $17,000, allegedly obtained by the defendant from a Quincy couple under false pretense. DeJulio, who had previously been an insurance agent and sold insurance to all of the victims, allegedly told the couple that their funds would be invested in a John Hancock Tax Exempt Trust Fund. John Hancock later informed the couple that the investment was never made.

In both instances, it is alleged that DeJulio disappeared after receiving the funds. An investigation allegedly revealed that the funds had been deposited in various accounts controlled by DeJulio.

DeJulio was arraigned in Norfolk Superior Court in Dedham following his arrest last week. He was released on personal recognizance and is due back in court July 10 for a pre-trial conference.

Dorothy Bates honored

The family of Cohasset resident and Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council volunteer Dorothy Beesley Bates was recently presented with the Helen Storrow Heritage Award. Created in 1989, the Helen Storrow Award is given to Girl Scout members whose lives and contributions were pivotal to the growth and strength of Girl Scouting in the Greater Boston area.

Dorothy Beesley Bates was instrumental to the growth and success of Girl Scouting in Cohasset and the Greater Boston areas by fostering the involvement and interest of volunteers and girls, and providing continuity and stability to girls and their needs.
